Many changes are occurring within the Law School and every effort is being made to report on these changes. There are, however, a great many other developments, both within and without the Law School, that are of interest to alumni, friends, faculty and students. Readers are, therefore, encouraged to submit items of general interest, of either news or commentary value, for publication.

The Newsletter, of which this is Volume V, Number 1, is published for the alumni/ae and friends of the T.C. Williams School of Law, University of Richmond.

Postmaster: Send address changes to University of Richmond, Virginia 23173.
My comments for this issue of the Newsletter will be brief in order to allow for full coverage of the many exciting events which have occurred here at T. C. Williams during the past year.

Certainly one of the highlights of the 1984-85 academic year was our inaugural Emanuel Emroch Lecture delivered by Harvard Law School Professor Arthur Miller on April 4, 1985. Professor Miller spoke at length on "The Media vs. The Right of Privacy" to a diverse group of some 350 law students, faculty members, judges, practice attorneys, and media representatives. Following the lecture, Professor Miller entertained questions and then continued to interact with the crowd at a reception in his honor hosted by the Student Bar Association. It was a splendid event which did much to enrich our overall program and reflect favorably on the reputation of our law school, and we look forward to future Emroch lectures by nationally recognized figures in the field of civil trial advocacy each spring.

I am also pleased to report that our law firm scholarship program continues to expand, providing badly needed resources for deserving students who want to attend T. C. Williams. A total of 56 law firms throughout the Commonwealth are now sponsoring annually funded or endowed scholarships at the law school, with 14 of these having been added this year through the efforts of Ken Powell and Vince Mastracco, co-chairmen of our firm scholarship campaign for 1984-85.

Our law school is scheduled for its regular seven-year accreditation re-inspection in October, 1985, by the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools. We look forward to this process, which involves both self-evaluation and review of our academic program by a group of law teachers and practitioners from throughout the country. The result should be to further the continuing process of strengthening and enhancing our law school and its various programs and activities. To that end we also need your advice and counsel, and your suggestions and ideas are always welcome.

At present the law school participates in three dual degree programs. Two programs, the J.D./M.S.W. and the J.D./M.U.R.P. programs, are offered in conjunction with Virginia Commonwealth University, and the other, the J.D./M.B.A. program, is offered with the University of Richmond. About five years ago the law school entered into arrangements with the School of Social Work and the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at V.C.U. which established the terms under which students could receive a J.D. degree from the law school and a Masters of Social Work degree (M.S.W.) from the School of Social Work or a Masters of Urban and Regional Planning (M.U.R.P.) through the Department of Urban Studies. These programs are somewhat unique nationally inasmuch as they are jointly offered by a private and a public university. More recently similar arrangements were made with the Business School of the University.

New Assistant Dean

Ann Setien Gibbs joined The T. C. Williams Administration as Assistant Dean in January, 1985. A 1983 graduate of T. C. Williams, Dean Gibbs did her undergraduate work at the University of Virginia in Education and taught for a year before entering law school. She practiced law for one year with Browder, Russell, Morris & Butcher in Richmond before moving to Fredericksburg where she practiced with Phitzner and Marley. As Assistant Dean, Ann will be responsible for the admissions and financial aid programs. She will handle all recruiting and orientation affairs as well.

Dual Degree Program Explained

Professor Ronald J. Bacigal spoke on March 13, at the Alumni Luncheon Program held at the Downtown Club. His topic covered the Proposed Virginia Rules of Evidence.

Professor W. Wade Berryhill addressed Alumni Luncheon April 16, on Recent Developments in Virginia Real Estate Law. His most recent book, Real Estate Closings (with forms) is available from the Harrison Co., Publishers, 3110 Crossing Park, Norcross, GA 30071.

University of Richmond to establish a joint J.D. and Masters of Business Administration (M.B.A.) program.

Functionally all three of these programs are similar, and they are quite informal. Individuals interested in participating in any of these programs must first be admitted into each of the schools. The participants in the dual degree programs generally speaking must complete the same course of study and meet the same degree requirements as students seeking either degree. The schools have no separate courses or degree requirements for the dual degree students. The distinctive feature of these programs is that each school agrees to accept and apply toward satisfaction of its degree requirements one semester's work from the other. A student can complete the requirements for both degrees in four years rather than the normal five. The other two programs function in the same way.

The two programs with V.C.U. are arranged so that the participant spends the first academic year at the school of his or her choice. The next year is spent at the other school. At the end of the second year, the participant will have completed the first year of both programs. Thereafter the participant rotates semesters, spending one semester at the law school and the next at V.C.U. The participant pays tuition each semester only to the school he or she is attending. The joint J.D./M.B.A. program works somewhat differently. A student completes the first year of law school. Thereafter he or she takes several law school and M.B.A. courses each semester.

The advantages of the programs to the participants are obvious. The participants can obtain two degrees in about a year less time, and expense, than would otherwise be possible. They will have acquired not only extensive knowledge in both disciplines but also the requisite professional credentials. Graduates of the dual degree programs can occasionally find employment in settings using both degrees. Alternatively, and perhaps more commonly, they find employment in one of the disciplines covered by the degrees and rely on the other as a background enabling them to better function in their position. These programs also provide some real advantages for the law school. Participants in these programs add a dimension to our student body. They bring into all of their classes, and to interactions with the other students and faculty, a different perspective. In addition, the law school enjoys a significant broadening of its curriculum through these programs. The law school allows any student not participating in the joint degree programs to take, and count toward the hours necessary for graduation, up to ten hours of selected course work from these programs. By so doing any law student can obtain some background in the substantive areas covered by these programs. Moreover, the law school's curriculum is enriched by these offerings.
Bryson Edits Book Containing Circuit Court Opinions

Selected Virginia Circuit Court opinions have been compiled by W. Hamilton Bryson in his most recent book, Virginia Circuit Court Opinions. Professor Bryson has received 114 Circuit Court opinions from various lawyers and judges throughout the state which are included in Volume I. Volume II goes to press this summer.

The hardback, 500 page book, contains opinions on all subjects. Bryson says, "Due to the harmless error rule, procedural points are rarely appealed, so the procedural points contained in these cases are valid procedural authority." A copy of Volume I may be obtained by contacting The Dietz Press, Inc., 109 E. Cary St., Richmond, VA 23219.

Law Professor Edits Bench Book

Professor Michael J. Herbert has become the project reporter for the Virginia Circuit Court Judges Committee which is preparing a Bench book. This book will be published through the Supreme Court and it will include cases and rules which will provide a ready reference guide for judges' use on the bench. It is hoped that it will be made available to practitioners as well. Professor Herbert began editing the book in December, 1984, and hopes to have the first section completed by May, 1985. The complete task is expected to take approximately 18 months.

Youth Advocacy Clinic

by Donald H. Stone

Third-year law students at the T. C. Williams School of Law are being given an increased opportunity to receive training in practical lawyering skills through the Youth Advocacy Clinic. The Clinic is an in-house legal assistance program specializing in youth advocacy. In August of 1984, the United States Department of Education provided funding to permit the Law School to hire me as Staff Attorney to the Clinic, with my main responsibility involving direct supervision of the law students involved in the Clinic as well as teaching a two-hour classroom component.

As a Temple Law School graduate, I have worked for the past five years as Staff Attorney with Central Virginia Legal Aid Society. Previously, I was employed with the Virginia Developmental Disabilities Protection and Advocacy Office, a federally funded program to protect and promote the rights of the disabled. I held that position for 2½ years. I currently serve on the Virginia Bar Association's Young Lawyer's Committee on Law and the Disabled and on the Advisory Board of the Very Special Arts/Virginia. Previously, I served on the Legal Rights Committee of the Virginia Association for Retarded Citizens.

Professor Robert E. Shepherd, Jr., Director of Clinical Programs, is the Director of the Youth Advocacy Clinic. Professor Shepherd has been active in the youth advocacy field for many years; his involvements include being a member of the Board of Directors for the Learning Disabilities Council, recipient of "Outstanding Child Advocate" for 1980 by the Virginia Division for Children, and the recipient of the public service award, Virginia Chapter, American Academy of Pediatrics for 1982. Professor Shepherd came to the University of Richmond in 1978 from the University of Baltimore where he founded the Juvenile Court Clinic. His publications include numerous law review articles and books in the juvenile law area including Juvenile Court Practice to be published by Michie/ Bobbs-Merrill.

My main responsibility with the Clinic involves my direct supervision of the law students on a day-to-day basis as well as teaching a two-hour classroom component that is a requirement of the Clinic.

The goal of the Youth Advocacy Clinic is to provide quality legal assistance to indigent juveniles in a variety of legal matters including juvenile delinquency, child custody, special education, and foster care. Additionally, a primary focus of the Clinic is to expose students and provide them with training in practice skills areas including interviewing clients, negotiating with opposing counsel, drafting pleadings and memoranda as well as handling actual courtroom hearings.

Since August of 1984, the Youth Advocacy Clinic has been involved in representing over 30 juveniles in a wide spectrum of legal issues including child custody, foster care review, special education child support, visitation, adoption, child abuse and neglect, and juvenile delinquency matters.

An essential element of the Clinic is to provide close supervision to each law student enrolled in this six-credit semester course. Each student is required to meet on an individual basis to discuss their particular case load with me, attend a two-hour component which involves lectures on substantive law as well as simulation, and handle an average of 8 cases per semester.

Law Weekend to Include Careers Discussion

During Law Weekend, the Placement Office is planning a program for students to meet with alumni from various geographic areas and legal specialties to discuss the practice of law in that area or specialty. The program will be held at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, November 9, 1985 prior to the pregame lunch and the Law School Association Business Meeting. Approximately 20 stations will be set up for the students to visit in three rotating twenty minute sessions.

Anyone interested in participating in this program, please contact Beverly D. Boone, Placement Director.

New Library Equipment

by Steven D. Hinckley, Associate Librarian

The Law Library is anxiously awaiting the delivery of new video-taping equipment that will greatly upgrade the Law School's present in-house audio/visual capabilities. The purchase of new equipment was made possible by a grant of $5,000 from the J. Edwin Treakle Foundation, Inc. of Gloucester, Va. The most significant additions are three high-quality color cameras that will replace the black and white equipment now in use. The improved pictures that the new cameras will produce are expected to greatly enhance the faculty's effective use of videotapes as tools to evaluate student performance in such courses as Trial Practice; Interviewing, Counseling, and Negotiation; Legal Writing; as well as the clinical programs. Accompanying these cameras will be a "special effects generator/switcher" which will be used to achieve elaborate effects and smooth switching from one camera to another for programs requiring multiple camera set-ups. This equipment will be used to create highly professional videotapes of special programs, such as Moot Court finals, where permanent copies of the event are desired. Also included in the new equipment package are two commercial-quality VHS video-recorders designed to withstand heavier use than the machines currently in service. The old videorecorders will be used as playback-only units in faculty offices.

Videotape usage by faculty and students has greatly increased during the 1984/85 academic year. The Law Library, which handles scheduling and set-up of the audio/visual equipment in the Law School, anticipates that the new equipment will prove to be invaluable in handling this ever-increasing demand for video recording and playback.
Thanks to the following alumni and friends of T. C. Williams who judged the Carrico Moot Court competition.

T.C.W. Student Recognized

A second year T. C. Williams student will have an article published in The Juvenile and Family Court Journal, a magazine published by the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges. Elizabeth McLaughlin, Class of 1986, wrote the article, entitled "Barriers to the Adoption of Special Needs Children", to give a Virginia overview of the implementation of federal legislation concerning foster care. In the article, she advocates the use of adoption subsidies to reduce foster care.

McLaughlin's interest in special needs children and foster care stems from her volunteer work in a Juvenile Justice Center in Colorado before law school and from raising her own four children. McLaughlin did her undergraduate work at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

William G. Thomas, L’63 announces Law Fund Campaign at $154,392 with class participation at 41%!

The 1984-85 Annual Law Fund has exceeded the $150,000 goal with two months to go in the campaign. As of May 1, 1985, $154,392 has been pledged by 1,115 alumni. While the percentage of Law School's 2,720 alumni making a gift to the school is below the 60% participation goal, the Law Fund team expects to reach that goal by June 30, 1985, the date the campaign ends.

Record Number of New Annual Law Firm Scholarships Established

Thanks to the energetic leadership of Vincent J. Mastracco, Jr., L’64, in Norfolk and Kenneth E. Powell, L’78, in Richmond, the Law School has added 14 new annual firm scholarships and two new endowed firm scholarships. They are listed below:

Deferred Giving/Estate Planning
by Stuart Chalifoux

Over the past decade as operating expenses of institutions of higher education have spiralled upward, increasing emphasis and awareness on the part of university development officers has been placed upon the cultivation and solicitation of deferred gifts. Deferred gifts—as opposed to outright cash awards that can be utilized immediately by the recipient university—are those gifts of cash or property that cannot be presently enjoyed, but instead are made available at some future time. Experience has revealed that universities cannot meet current operating expenses and at the same time properly plan for future expansion of educational programs and facilities solely through the results garnered each year in connection with annual campaign contribution efforts. The gap each year between needed contribution levels and actual annual contributions can best be covered by deferred gifts.

T. C. Williams School of Law of The University of Richmond has recently placed a large amount of concentration upon the deferred giving aspect of its Annual Law Fund campaign. Great strides have been made by the Law School under the leadership of Dean Thomas A. Edmonds in terms of attracting quality students and law professors and instituting innovative and challenging methods of law study. Establishing a well-rooted and productive deferred giving program for the Law School will ensure that the necessary funding will be available to continue the great progress at T. C. Williams in recent years in terms of becoming one of the nation’s premier private law schools.

The laws governing the area of deferred giving—tax statutes and otherwise—are extremely complex but the Law School finds itself in the unique position of appealing to a base of potential donors that already have a certain familiarity and understanding of the steps needed to implement some form of deferred gift.

The Law School has coordinated its Deferred Giving Programs with the other aspects of its Annual Law Fund and with the remaining development efforts of the University of Richmond Annual Fund. Special appeals have been made not only to members of the Law School Association but also to members of the University of Richmond Estate Planning Council. Concrete efforts to date include several dozen personal calls upon potential donors that have expressed a desire to contribute, a solicitation made by Dean Edmonds to alumni and alumnae of the Law School and selective presentations to small groups of attorneys throughout Virginia that graduated from T. C. Williams. Results to date include modification of several significant bequests to the Law School having been included in graduates’ estate plans.

As Chairman of the T. C. Williams School of Law Deferred Giving Program for 1985-86, I invite anyone with questions concerning the inclusion of a deferred gift to the Law School within their own estate plan to contact me at my office at (804) 643-6150.

Arthur R. Miller, Delivers First Emanuel Emroch Lecture

Professor Arthur R. Miller of Harvard addressed a packed auditorium of approximately 350 people at the inaugural Emanuel Emroch Lecture Series event held April 4, 1985. Following a welcome by Dean Thomas A. Edmunds, Professor Miller was introduced by Emanuel Emroch, L31. Professor Miller spoke without notes for 45 minutes about the conflicts between the right of the public to know and an individual's right to privacy. While acknowledging that he was a journalist himself, Miller chastised the press for their sometimes overzealous pursuit of their story. Miller held a 15 minute question and answer session following his speech. A reception sponsored by the SBA's Legal Forum Committee followed.

Young Lawyers Section

The Young Lawyers Section of the Richmond Bar Association has planned a spring raffle to raise funds to add to the earnings of the newly endowed Y.L.S. Scholarship Fund. Thomas W. Moss, Jr., L'56 and E. Ballard Baker, L'47 Honored

On May 10th four University of Richmond graduates received the Alumni of the University of Richmond Award for Distinguished Service. The awards are given annually to those alumni who demonstrate outstanding achievement in their business or profession or outstanding achievement in service to the University of Richmond. This year's recipients are Elisabeth Decker Kimball, WC'47, Robert E. Leitch, R'39, Thomas W. Moss, Jr., L'56, and Robert S. Ukrop, B'69. A posthumous award was given to E. Ballard Baker, L'47.

The two T. C. Williams alumni receiving the Award for Distinguished Service have served the University and their communities in many ways. An article on Baker can be found on page 18. Moss is a partner in the Norfolk firm of Moss, Sizemore, Kelsey and Callahan. He has represented the 88th District in the Virginia House of Delegates since 1966. He is chairman of the Corporation, Insurance and Banking Committee and a member of the Courts of Justice, Rules and Nominations and Confirmation Committees. Moss introduced the bill to allow the Tuition Assistance Grant program to be extended to graduate students and was instrumental in the passage of the bill into law. TCW Mourns Loss of Judge Baker Everyone connected with the T.C. Williams School of Law was saddened by the recent loss of one of our most distinguished alumni, E. Ballard Baker.

Of his election as Chief Judge of the newly created Virginia Court of Appeals, Baker stated in a letter dated January 2, 1985 to the University's President, Dr. E. Bruce Heilman, "I hope that I shall never forget that I got my beginning in the career which I have followed at the University of Richmond Law School. To the extent that my appointment effects credit to the law school, I am additionally pleased."

Baker served his Alma Mater in many ways. He was past Vice President and President of The Richmond College Alumni Association, past President of the Law School Alumni Association, and in 1984 received the Metro Richmond Alumni Medal of Achievement.

The Law School Association has made an initial gift to establish an endowed scholarship at T.C. Williams in memory of Baker. The Student Bar Association and many individual alumni have added to this scholarship. Anyone wishing to honor Judge Baker's memory may make a gift to this scholarship bearing his name.
