2007

Schaum's Outline of Data Structures with Java

John R. Hubbard
University of Richmond, jhubbard@richmond.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarship.richmond.edu/bookshelf
Part of the Computer Sciences Commons, and the Mathematics Commons

Recommended Citation
Like other Schaum’s Outlines, this book is intended to be used primarily for self study. It is suitable as a study guide in a course on data structures using the Java programming language. In American universities, this is typically the second course in the computer science major. The book is also serves well as a reference on data structures and the Java Collections Framework.

The book includes more than 200 detailed examples and over 260 solved problems. The author firmly believes that programming is learned best by practice, following a well-constructed collection of examples with complete explanations. This book is designed to provide that support.

This second edition is a major improvement over the original 2001 edition. Most of the chapters have been completely rewritten. Three entirely new chapters have been added, on object-oriented programming, linked structures, and the Java Collections Framework.

Java 6.0 is used throughout the book, with special attention to these new features of the language:

- The Scanner class.
- The StringBuilder class.
- Formatted output, including the printf() method.
- The enhanced for loop (also called the for-each loop).
- Static imports.
- enum types.
- Variable length parameter lists.
- Autoboxing.
- Generic classes
- The Deque, ArrayDeque, EnumSet, and EnumMap classes, and the Queue interface in the Java Collections Framework.

Source code for all the examples, solved problems, and supplementary programming problems may be downloaded from the author’s Web site:
http://www.mathcs.richmond.edu/~hubbard/books/

I wish to thank all my friends, colleagues, students, and the McGraw-Hill staff who have helped me with the critical review of this manuscript, including Stephan Chipilov and Sheena Walker. Special thanks to my colleague Anita Huray Hubbard for her advice, encouragement, and supply of creative problems for this book.

JOHN R. HUBBARD
Richmond, Virginia