Dear Readers,

It is my pleasure on behalf of the Staff and Editorial Board of the Richmond Journal of Law & Technology to introduce the first issue of the 2005-2006 academic year. The Journal is proud to present four articles dealing with a range of relevant topics.

In this issue, James E. Scheuermann and William D. Semins, attorneys with the Pittsburg office of Kirkpatrick & Lockhart Nicholson Graham LLP, present a perspective on antitrust, "A New Method for Regulatory Antitrust Analysis? Verizon Communications Inc. v. Trinko." The outgoing editorial board worked hard to ensure that this article was available for publication in the first issue of the 2005-2006 academic year, and the current staff would like to thank them for their contribution.

Molly Torsen, a researcher at the Arts and Humanities Research Council Centre for Studies in Intellectual Property and Technology Law at The University of Edinburgh, presents, "The Domination of the English Language in the Global Village: Efforts to Further Develop the Internet by Populating it with Non-Latin-Based Languages."

John LaBarre, with Darby & Darby, and Xavier Gomez-Velasco, L.L.M., from PazHorowitz, discuss the software, patent, and marking requirements, "Ready, Set, Mark Your Patented Software."

Finally, Mike Clements, Associate External Affairs Editor and winner of the casenote competition for the Richmond Journal of Law & Technology wrote, "Virtually Free From Punishment Until Proven Guilty: The Internet, Web-Cameras and the Compelling Necessity Standard."

On behalf of the Editorial Board and Staff, I would like to thank the authors who continue to provide the Richmond Journal of Law &

Technology with material that furthers the scholastic debate and improves the work of practitioners. I would also like to thank the University of Richmond School of Law administration, faculty, and staff members who continue to be a source of support and advice to the Journal - in particular our Academic Advisor Associate Dean Timothy Coggins and the Annual Survey Advisor Professor James Gibson.

Sincerely,
