Dear Readers,

On behalf of the Richmond Journal of Law and Technology, it is my pleasure to welcome you to our third issue for the 2007-2008 year, our Annual Survey of Electronic Discovery. This year's Survey concentrates on the recent Amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and its various implications on Electronic Discovery.

This issue begins with Thomas Y. Allman's article, The "Two-Tiered" Approach to E-Discovery: Has Rule 26(b)(2)(B) Fulfilled Its Promise? Mr. Allman, a co-chair of the Lawyers for Civil Justice State E-Discovery Committee, is also one of the Editors of The Sedona Principles (Second Edition 2007). The Journal is privileged to have Mr. Allman contribute to its Annual Survey for the third time.

Douglas L. Rogers has contributed our second article, A Search for Balance in the Discovery of ESI Since December 1, 2006. This article discusses the many issues and dilemmas that arise from the duty to preserve documents and electronically stored information. Mr. Rogers, a partner in the Columbus office of Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease, L.L.P., is a member of the firm's ESI Core Team and Technology and Intellectual Property Group.

In the Survey's third article, Rodney A. Satterwhite and Matthew J. Quatrara examine the rising cost in employment litigation resulting from electronic discovery. Mr. Satterwhite is a partner in McGuireWoods Labor & Employment Department and chief counsel of Knowledge Management for his firm. Mr. Quatrara is an associate of McGuireWoods Labor & Employment Department.

In our final article, The Increasing Importance of Metadata in Electronic Discovery, W. Lawrence Wescott, II discusses not only the important presence of metadata in court decisions, but also the changing position of the Sedona Conference on the preservation of metadata. Mr. Wescott, a consultant with Kahn Consulting, Inc., is also the author the Electronic Discovery Blog, which was named by the ABA Journal as one of the top 100 legal blogs.

The Journal would like to thank each of our authors for their hard work and dedication to this year's Annual Survey. As always, the Journal would like to thank the law community at the University of Richmond for their continued support. I would also like to extend my gratitude to our faculty advisor, Professor Melanie Holloway, for her invaluable advice and guidance.

Thank you for visiting the Annual Survey of Electronic Discovery for 2008. As always, the Journal values and appreciates its readers' feedback. Please feel free to share your comments and suggestions at jolt@richmond.edu. Enjoy!

Sincerely yours,
