The war seems so much farther away than it was when we were watching it from the front, farther from reality. The war seems so much closer than it is, and the environment that have tethered him to the Democratic Party is closer than he would like to think it is. The war is so much more than it seems to be, and the environment that have tethered him to the Democratic Party is closer than he would like to think it is.

The war is so much more than it seems to be, and the environment that have tethered him to the Democratic Party is closer than he would like to think it is. The war is so much more than it seems to be, and the environment that have tethered him to the Democratic Party is closer than he would like to think it is.

It isn't the passport in your wallet that says you are a citizen; it is the emotions you feel when you stand in front of the flag and hear the national anthem. It is the sense of being part of something greater than yourself that defines citizenship. It is the knowledge that you are not alone, but rather part of a larger community, that gives meaning to your life.

The war is so much more than it seems to be, and the environment that have tethered him to the Democratic Party is closer than he would like to think it is. The war is so much more than it seems to be, and the environment that have tethered him to the Democratic Party is closer than he would like to think it is.
