Letter from the Editor

Anthony Isenhour
University of Richmond
Dear Reader,

I welcome you to enjoy our lucky number issue 7 of Osmosis! As a Biology and English double major I have come to deeply appreciate the ways in which science is interesting and should be written in interesting ways that everyone (even those Business majors) will enjoy. This issue has been an interesting one to make and taking on the role of Editor-in-Chief has been a learning experience for me. As a reader, what I hope you take away from this issue is not only some cool new info about some science-y stuff, but also some questions and desire to learn more about the world around you. In a world full of confusing and sometimes contradictory information, remember the wise words of Ms. Frizzle, “Take chances, make mistakes, get messy!”

Science on,
Anthony Isenhour, Editor-in-Chief

Meet the Executive Team

Editor-in-Chief
Anthony Isenhour ‘20

Executive Editor
Joseph McEachon ‘20

Managerial Editor
Cassidy Hilton ‘20

PR and Marketing
George Qiao ‘20