Political Assassination as an Instrument of National Policy –

An Inquiry into Operations, Expediency, Morality, and Law

Thursday April 11, 2002
6:30 – 9 p.m.

Opening Plenary Session
A Role-Playing Exercise and Town Meeting

“The Assassination of a Terrorist Enemy”

In this opening plenary session a group of nationally prominent political leaders, policy makers, scholars, and members of the intelligence, military, religious, and civil liberties communities will engage in a role-playing exercise exploring a fictional scenario posing the question of whether the United States should undertake an operation to assassinate the leader of a terrorist organization deemed responsible for acts of violence against the United States.

The issue will be explored through historical, moral, religious, operational, political, diplomatic, and legal perspectives. The final segment of the program will include a “town meeting” discussion in which members of the audience will participate in the debate and deliberation. These issues will in turn be explored the next day of the conference in a series of more specifically focused sessions.

Friday April 12, 2002

ROUNDTABLE SESSION I
“Policy, Politics, and Operations”
9 – 10:15 a.m.

ROUNDTABLE SESSION II
“Moral and Religious Perspectives”
10:30 – 11:45 a.m.

LUNCH BREAK

ROUNDTABLE SESSION III
“Assassination as an Instrument of Policy and the Law”
1:30 – 2:45 p.m.

Conference Director
Professor John Paul Jones
University of Richmond School of Law

Conference Moderator
Professor Rodney A. Smolla
George E. Allen, Professor of Law

Special Acknowledgements
James Van Horn
Vidul Torres
Jason Scarberry
Paul Birch
Associate Dean Krisine Marzolf
Phil Sherman and the IT Staff at UR
Bill Flowers
Thor Hoyte
John Meadows
The Richmond Journal of Law & Technology

This conference was made possible through the generous support of the family of George E. Allen.

http://law.richmond.edu

2002 University of Richmond School of Law Annual Allen Symposium

Approved for Virginia CLE