CAMPUS
Math department receives $1.5 million
The National Science Foundation has awarded the math department a $1.5 million grant to develop LURE, a program that will attract students to math majors early in their college careers and prepare them for graduate study. LURE stands for Long-term Undergraduate Research Experience.

The program will be administered by Richmond, but it also will include faculty at Central Michigan University, Coppin State University and Franklin W. Olin College of Engineering. Over four years, the grant will involve 28 faculty members and 80 undergraduates. All 11 faculty members of Richmond's math department will serve as mentors at least once during the project.

LURE “builds upon the success of the apprentice model often used in the physical and life sciences, where scientists routinely engage first- and second-year undergraduates in research and then continue to mentor them until they are prepared to pursue graduate degrees,” says Jim Davis, professor of mathematics and director of the LURE program.

The undergraduate research component of LURE will span two summers and two academic years.

Dining hall renovation boosts campus cuisine
As students returned for fall classes, the University was putting the finishing touches on a $9.9 million renovation of the Heilman Center. The University dedicated the new facility in a special ceremony in late October.

In addition to improving the aesthetics of the building, Dining Services has completely retooled areas for preparing and serving food. Highlights include a Mongolian grill, brick-oven pizza station, expanded salad bar and tempting arrays of freshly made desserts.

The Heilman Center also features a new convenience store called Etc. and a new campus post office with a separate entrance.

Breaking down barriers to higher education
The University has established a new program called My Horizons to support college-bound students in low-income areas of the Richmond region. The Office of Undergraduate Admission, the Center for Civic Engagement’s Build It program, Management Institute and Office of Financial Aid will coordinate one-on-one mentoring.
academic and professional skills training and workshops about college admission.

Specially trained University students will help seniors at John Marshall High School polish their college applications. “Mentor duties may include critiquing college essays, helping with financial aid forms or following up on deadlines,” says admission counselor Mark Naylor, ’05.

Richmond mentors will provide guidance on a variety of higher education options for other John Marshall students. The program also will include a series of evening events for students and parents on topics ranging from the admission process to financial aid to how to make the transition from high school to college.

The program also will bring freshmen from all Richmond city high schools to the University’s campus in March for seminars on developing professional and academic skills. “This part of the program is designed to encourage and inspire students to develop their professional skills for both jobs and community interaction and their academic skills for the possibility of higher education,” Naylor says.

In addition, the admission office is partnering with the College Summit of Washington, D.C., to provide classes and workshops for students in low-income areas throughout the Richmond region. The University will host one of the workshops July 2–8.

New residence hall under construction

The first new residence hall in more than 25 years got underway this fall as the initial phase of a campus-wide upgrade of student housing. Lakeview Residence Hall will overlook Westhampton Lake adjacent to Marsh, Wood and Thomas halls. The four-story structure will provide 141 beds in a mixture of four- and three-bed suites and single rooms. Each floor will have laundry facilities and community living rooms, and the first floor will feature a large multipurpose room, kitchen, computer lab and Lakeview Residence Hall is scheduled to open in December 2007.

NicAttack!

Heavy smokers might be more likely to suffer panic attacks when they are deprived of nicotine, according to Dr. Ken Abrams, assistant professor of psychology.

Abrams and several students have been conducting clinical research to test that hypothesis, and they presented their findings at the annual convention of the Anxiety Disorder Association of America in Miami. Five students co-authored the presentation, including Lindsey Dorfinger, ’06, Kelly O’Connor, ’06, Ashley Wyand, ’06, Andrew Duffy, ’07, and Meghan Snyder, ’06. Dr. Thomas Eissenberg, associate professor of psychology at Virginia Commonwealth University, and Melissa Blank, a graduate student at VCU, also contributed.

The researchers compared 25 heavy smokers who had not smoked in 12 hours to 25 non-smokers. Participants breathed ordinary air for one minute then breathed a mixture of carbon dioxide (5 percent) and oxygen (95 percent) for four minutes. That mixture is medically safe, Abrams says, but it often induces panic attacks in people who suffer from panic disorder.

During this five-minute “CO2 challenge,” heavy smokers experienced greater increases in anxiety and had a stronger “urge to escape.” The smokers also demonstrated greater “trait levels of anxiety sensitivity and suffocation fear,” the researchers note.

Abrams has been looking at the co-occurrence of substance use and anxiety disorders since he entered graduate school at the University of Minnesota, where he worked on a study examining the role of anxiety disorders in alcoholism relapse. He believes the Minnesota study could be the basis for explaining similar failures to quit smoking.
group-study space. Lakeview is scheduled for completion in December 2007.

During the next six to seven years, Jeter, Freeman, North Court, Thomas and Robins residence halls will be renovated into either suite- or apartment-style configurations, says University Architect Andrew McBride. The goal is to place first-year students in traditional dorms, moving them to suites for their sophomore and junior years and apartments for their senior year.

Cirque Éloize performs ‘Rain’

Back by popular demand, the Modlin Center presents “Rain,” a performance by Cirque Éloize, Jan. 27–30 in the Alice Jepson Theatre. “Rain” features acrobatics, juggling, contortion and the high-flying artistry of aerial rings and trapeze. Death-defying performers have dazzled more than 3 million spectators in the past 12 years, including Modlin Center patrons in 2003. Tickets go on sale Jan. 5. For more information about Modlin Center performances, call (804) 289-8980 or visit http://modlin.richmond.edu.

Visiting lecturer displays Turkish art

Ilgım Veryeri-Alaca, a visiting lecturer in the Department of Art and Art History, will display her work in the Joel and Lila Harnett Museum of Art from Jan. 16–March 25. Veryeri-Alaca is an assistant professor in the Department of Fine Arts at Bilkent University in Ankara, Turkey. The exhibition will feature mixed media on paper, combining traditional techniques, such as Turkish marbleizing, with printmaking processes. The exhibit is free and open to the public. Professors’ column wins Templeton award

Two Richmond professors, Dr. Jonathan Wight and Dr. Douglas Hicks, won an award from the John Templeton Foundation for their opinion column “Disaster Relief: What Would Adam Smith Do?” The commentary appeared in the Christian Science Monitor Jan. 18, 2005, and was reprinted with permission in the spring 2005 issue of Richmond Alumni Magazine. (See www.magazine.richmond.edu/spring2005/vantagepoint.) Wight is associate professor of economics and international studies. Hicks is associate professor of leadership studies and religion.
They shared a $10,000 prize for the column, which called for quick, selfless action in response to the Indian Ocean tsunami. "Contrary to popular myth, Smith did not endorse selfish individualism," they wrote. "Acting quickly is more fundamental than the market."

Epic Revisionism
Why did Joseph Stalin's propaganda machine glorify figures from Russia's past, such as Peter the Great, Ivan the Terrible and Leo Tolstoy?

Dr. David Brandenberger, assistant professor of history, and co-editor Dr. Kevin M.F. Platt note that Ivan the Terrible was a particularly "problematic hero." They offer the following sample of textbook editing to illustrate the point:

"Ivan grew up among despotic boyars, who insulted him and fostered all his character flaws. As a youth, Ivan would ride through Moscow on horseback, scaring and running down peaceful residents for amusement. He sentenced one of his closest boyars, Andrei Shuiskii, to be torn apart by dogs."

The Russian spin doctors were trying to create a "myth of origins," say Brandenberger and Platt, "to generate popular support and historical legitimacy for [Stalin's] regime."

Teaching the teachers

Joe Ben Hoyle, associate professor of accounting, was "scared to death" when he taught his first college class in 1971. Now his students are the ones who are nervous. "Over the years, they have named me The Most Feared Professor, The Professor Least Likely to Retire, and The Professor Most Likely to Ruin Your Grade Point Average," he recalls.

Despite his tough-love approach to teaching, a majority of Robins School undergraduates also picked him as their "favorite professor" in a recent survey by BusinessWeek Online. Hoyle, who employs the Socratic method in the classroom, has won the University's Distinguished Educator Award five times.

Now Hoyle is sharing his tricks of the trade in a free online book called Tips and Thoughts on Improving the Teaching Process in College — A Personal Diary. (See http://oncampus.richmond.edu/~jhoyle.)

"This book was created as a discussion of teaching, about the day-to-day challenges and rewards of walking into a college classroom to help increase student thinking, learning and understanding," Hoyle writes in the introduction. "I hope that a few of these pages will provide you with at least a modicum of benefit."

Last fall, Hoyle wrote a column for Richmond Alumni Magazine called "In the Classroom, Easy Doesn't Do It." (See www.magazine.richmond.edu/fall2005/vantagepoint.) The column was immediately reprinted by the Stanford University Center for Teaching and Learning and later translated into Hebrew by the Journal of Teaching in Higher Education, which reaches all college professors in Israel.

When Hoyle talks about teaching, people listen.

UR events highlight Jamestown 2007

The University is hosting several events and programs to commemorate the founding of Jamestown 400 years ago. All are free and open to the public.

• News of the Colonies. This art exhibition features prints, maps and European perceptions of the New World. It runs from Jan. 23–April 28 in the Joel and Lila Harnett Print Study Center on the second floor of the Modlin Center.

• A Slave Ship Speaks. This historical display showcases the wreck of the Henrietta Marie from Feb. 3–May 18 in the Joel and Lila Harnett Museum of Art on the first floor of the Modlin Center.

• Rule of Law in Democracies. This conference will feature legal luminaries—including U.S. Supreme Court justices—from the United States and Great Britain. It will take place April 11–13 at the School of Law.

• The Leadership of Discovery. Sponsored by the Jepson School of Leadership Studies, this conference will be held on campus in September 2007.

Bittner promoted to assistant VP

The University has promoted Molly Dean Bittner to assistant vice president for advancement. In this new position, she will supervise advancement services, including alumni and gift record-keeping, donor prospect research, donor stewardship and special events.
Bittner joined the University in 1992 and has worked extensively on development projects with the Robins School of Business and with alumni and parents in Richmond and New York.

CAMPAIGN

Retired professor makes 75,000th gift

The Transforming Bright Minds campaign recently received its 75,000th contribution—a $25 unrestricted annual fund gift from Bill Jordan, a retired associate professor of health and sport science.

Jordan, R’53, taught physical education and coached track at the University from 1966-2001, and he currently serves on the board of the University of Richmond Alumni Association.

“I’m a little embarrassed that this gift was only $25,” Jordan says with a laugh. “I believe it is the first unrestricted gift I ever made to the University.” Over the years, Jordan has made several larger contributions to Spider Sports programs, particularly track and field.

“Richmond is truly fortunate to have so many donors at all levels supporting this campaign,” says Dave Johnson, vice president for advancement. Gifts have come from more than 27,000 individual donors, including 50 benefactors who have contributed $1 million or more. Attracting 50 $1 million donors was one of the campaign’s goals, and the University achieved it in October, more than 18 months ahead of schedule.

“The fact that the campaign already has attracted 50 donors at the million-dollar or more level demonstrates that these individuals and organizations deeply share the University’s vision for excellence,” Johnson says.

The latest million-dollar donors have supported a variety of programs, including scholarships, faculty research, academic programs, a new faculty chair, the Westhampton Center, Robins School of Business addition, School of Law addition and the proposed campus stadium.

As of mid-November, the campaign had raised more than $190 million. The overall goal is to reach $200 million by July 30, 2008.

For a listing of donors to the University for the 2005-06 academic year, see the special section that begins on page 49.

Passing the fitness test

Men’s Fitness magazine rates Richmond the 10th fittest college in the nation. The magazine’s second annual ranking of the 25 fittest colleges appeared in its October issue.

To find the fittest colleges, Men’s Fitness asks The Princeton Review to survey nearly 12,500 students from 115 colleges and universities. The rankings are based on responses to questions about diet, physical activity, sedentary time (other than studying), availability of fast food on campus, gym hours, access to nutritionists and how fit students consider people on campus.

Richmond ranks highest among Virginia universities, one notch ahead of the University of Virginia. Others making the grade include Roanoke College, Virginia Tech and the University of Mary Washington. Pennsylvania’s Dickinson College ranked No. 1.

The fittest schools offer a range of nutrition and exercise choices, rather than forcing students into a regimen, says Neal Boultton, editor-in-chief of Men’s Fitness.

Richmond is currently constructing the Weinstein Center for Recreation and Wellness, scheduled to open in January with a three-court gym, running track and state-of-the-art fitness center. Total cost of the new facility is $13.5 million.

“I have always believed we have outstanding and comprehensive recreation and wellness programs at the University of Richmond,” says Tom Roberts, director of recreation and wellness. “With the opening of the Weinstein Center, we will have even greater programs and facilities. The construction of this facility will communicate clearly that the University is as committed to students’ health and wellness as it is to their intellectual development.”
FOOTBALL

Duke shutout sparks outstanding season
The Richmond football team achieved its best start since 1995, winning five games and losing only to New Hampshire, a team that was ranked No. 1 in Division I-AA at the time.

In the season opener, Richmond defeated Duke 13-0 on the road. It was the Spiders first win over a Division I-A school since 2000 (Arkansas State) and its first victory over an ACC team since 1978 (North Carolina).

Linebacker Adam Goloboski, '07, was named Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week for making seven tackles, forcing a fumble and blocking a field goal attempt.

Quarterback Eric Ward, '09, was named A-10 Rookie of the Week for performing well in his first collegiate start.

In its second game, Richmond crushed VMI 58-7 before 10,560 fans at UR Stadium. Running back Justin Forte, '09, earned A-10 Rookie of the Week honors by rushing for 144 yards and scoring a touchdown.

Richmond next beat Bucknell, 48-21, with a balanced attack—243 yards on the ground and 250 yards through the air.

The next game was more of a defensive struggle, with Richmond edging Northeastern, 12-7. Forte earned his second Rookie of the Week award for his contributions on special teams. He blocked a punt that was recovered for a touchdown, and he later tackled the punter for a safety.

After losing to New Hampshire, 27-17, the Spiders beat Rhode Island, 31-6.

At mid-season, Richmond's defense led the Atlantic 10 in fewest passing yards allowed per game, fewest total yards allowed per game and fewest points allowed per game. The Spider offense averaged 30 points per game and had gained 400 or more total yards three times.

In October, the team ranked 10th in the nation among Division I-AA teams.

BASKETBALL

Mooney expects hoops improvement

Before the beginning of the 2006-07 season, Head Coach Chris Mooney answered questions about the men's basketball team.

Q. Last year was obviously a frustrating season, with only seven scholarship players for most of the year. What were the positive signs?

A. Our team improved and began to understand the value of playing hard and playing together. Our returning players are in much better condition this year, which enables them to practice harder and play better. They have become stronger leaders because of the experience they gained last season.

Q. You have said it might take a few years to get your offense working properly. Are you where you want to be at this point?
A. I always want us to be better, but I understand that it can take time. Our guys are working very hard, and that is most important. Also, our recruiting can continue to improve the overall talent level, which helps everything.

Q. What type of student-athlete do you want to recruit?
A. We are looking for young men who appreciate the value of the University of Richmond. We want to have student-athletes who are just as comfortable and motivated in the classroom as they are in the Robins Center.

Q. Are you happy with the freshmen?
A. Yes, I'm very happy with the freshmen. My staff worked hard to attract these players. Each of them was very successful in high school and has the skills to improve our team.

Q. There is a perception that your style of play emphasizes skill more than athleticism. Is that true?
A. Not at all. We play a style that is greatly enhanced by speed, quickness and strength. While we value highly skilled players, we especially value the combination of skill and athleticism.

Q. Now that you have players who fit better in your style of play, how will the offense perform this year?
A. Our offense should be much better this year because of the improvement of our veterans and the potential of our freshmen. Our ball handling will be much better, and we will be able to score inside more consistently. Our ability to penetrate and score inside should create better shooting opportunities for everyone.

Q. Some people say your style of play is not as exciting to watch. What’s your response?
A. I think our style is a winning style, and winning is exciting. Our average attendance at Air Force was under 1,200 our first year and was over 5,400 our final season. We attracted fans because we were winning.

NCAA University initiates NCAA self-study
Every 10 years, universities with NCAA athletic programs must conduct a comprehensive self-study that focuses on academic integrity, equity and student-athlete welfare, and governance and rules compliance.

Richmond will conduct its self-study during the 2006–07 academic year. To submit comments for the study, contact Associate Provost Joe Kent or go to http://oncampus.richmond.edu/ncaa.

See you at the top!
Andrew Benford, '10, placed 12th among 80 competitors at the World Junior Mountain Running Championships in Bursa, Turkey. He finished first among the American runners, leading Team USA to its best performance in the 22-year history of the event.

Benford completed the 8.5-kilometer course—which ascends 3,000 feet—in 46:36, five minutes ahead of his teammates. Together, they placed eighth among the 20 countries in the competition.

“...I was really happy with my race and my finish,” Benford says. “My experiences in Turkey and at the world championships were incredible. I really enjoyed meeting all the people from all over the world, and of course racing against them. I’m so glad I got the opportunity to take this trip and to represent the U.S.A. It is something I will take with me for the rest of my life.”

Cross country coach Steve Taylor was thrilled by Benford’s performance in Turkey. “It shows the top athletes in the nation that their dreams will be realized at the University of Richmond,” he says.

Benford comes to Richmond from the “mountain state” of West Virginia, where he was undefeated in cross country during his senior year of high school. Early in his cross country career at Richmond, Benford earned two Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week awards.
Dr. Edward L. Ayers will take office July 1, 2007
NEW PRESIDENT

is the University’s ninth president.

By Karl Rhodes
The Robins Center was charged with anticipation. Nearly 2,000 alumni, students, faculty and staff waited to welcome Dr. Edward Ayers, the University’s president-elect.

“This is a great day for the University of Richmond,” proclaimed University Rector George Wellde, B’74. “Ed Ayers is an outstanding teacher, a distinguished scholar and a proven leader with a vision and passion for making the University of Richmond the best it can be.”

Another prominent alumnus put Ayers’ election in baseball terms: “It’s a home run,” he said. “It’s a big home run.”

‘FANTASTIC LEADER’
Ayers will take office July 1, 2007. Until then, he will remain the Buckner W. Clay Dean of Arts & Sciences at the University of Virginia, where he has won numerous awards for teaching, scholarship and service.

Alumni, students, staff and faculty have consistently recognized his contributions to U.Va. They presented him with the Distinguished Young Teacher Award in 1986, and they gave him the Raven Award in 1993 for outstanding service to U.Va. Less than one month before he was elected president of the University of Richmond, he received the Thomas Jefferson Award, U.Va.’s highest honor.

National organizations also have recognized Ayers’ achievements. The American Historical Association presented him with the James Harvey Robinson Prize for Outstanding Aid to Teaching History in 2002. The following year, he was named U.S. Professor of the Year for doctoral and research universities by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

As a leading scholar on the American Civil War, Ayers has written or edited nine books, including The Promise of the New South: Life After Reconstruction. The 1992 work was named the “best book on the history of American race relations and on the history of the American South.” It was a finalist for both the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award. Another of his books, In the Presence of Mine Enemies: War in the Heart of America, 1859-1863, won a 2004 Bancroft Prize, a top honor in the field of history.

The list of accolades is long and impressive, but Ayers remains humble and approachable, according to people who have worked for him and with him over the years.

“Ed always took time to talk with anyone who sought him out, and that was some long line of people,” says Westhampton Dean Juliette Landphair, who studied under Ayers as a graduate student at U.Va.

“When you stopped by Ed’s office, he made you feel as if your conversation was the most important thing to him. He is a remarkable scholar and teacher, yet his popularity is built upon accessibility and humility.”

Richmond’s Board of Trustees elected Ayers after conducting a national search that began in January 2006. Former University Rector Robert L. Burrus Jr., R’55 and H’05, chaired a search committee that included trustees, alumni, faculty, staff and students.

“The board tasked us with identifying the best person to lead the University at this critical time in its history,” Burrus recalls. “Of all the accomplished and distinguished individuals we looked at, one stood out. I am confident that we indeed accomplished our goal.”

A native of Asheville, N.C., Ayers, 53, earned his undergraduate degree at the University of Tennessee and his master’s degree and Ph.D. in American studies at Yale University. He joined U.Va. as an assistant professor in 1980 and worked his way up to full professor.

“Richmond has all the ingredients to offer one of the finest educations in America. ... I don’t think the University needs to find a new mission or direction. I think it needs to perfect the one that it has.”
in 1992. The following year, he was named the Hugh P. Kelly Professor of History. Since 2001, he has served as dean of arts and sciences—supervising 25 departments, 50-plus majors, 10,000 undergraduates, and 575 tenured and tenure-track professors. While serving as dean, he has continued to teach at least one history class per semester.

“Dean Ayers has been a visionary leader for the College of Arts & Sciences for the last five years,” says U.Va. Rector Thomas F. Farrell II. “He has been a fantastic leader at the university, and the University of Richmond’s gain is our loss.”

SPEECH! SPEECH!
Minutes before his introduction at the Robins Center, Ayers was granting interviews to reporters instead of rehearsing his speech. He was running out of time, but he turned no one away.

Responding to the last question, he said, “Richmond has all the ingredients to offer one of the finest educations in America. . . . I don’t think the University needs to find a new mission or direction. I think it needs to perfect the one that it has.”

Moments later, Ayers was making his first speech at Richmond. He began by paying homage to the enormous contributions and sacrifices that alumni and other friends of the University have made since 1830.

“This place embodies so much devotion and imagination and dedication and commitment,” he said. “From the first days till now, alumni and parents and community members have given gifts of staggering generosity.”

As a result, Richmond’s academic core is stronger than ever, he said. “The attention to students is exactly where it should be—right at the center of the mission. The emphasis on undergraduate research, on international study and on service learning shows that this University’s heart is in the right place.”

Ayers said he is impressed by Richmond’s renewed efforts to promote inclusive diversity. “Generous financial aid holds out the possibility of making this place a model for the nation—of what a truly inclusive community can look like. That’s one of the things that drew me here.”

He also praised the University’s tradition of community service, and he challenged his audience to do more “to make a difference in the city of Richmond, in the state of Virginia, in the nation and abroad. All of those places can feel the impact of the University of Richmond. All of them can know the kind of people who are a part of this community, and all of them can know that we’re eager to give back some of the wonderful gifts that have been given to us.”

Throughout his speech, Ayers recognized the accomplishments of students, faculty and staff, but he closed with a special tribute and challenge to alumni.

“The alumni,” he said, “sustain the highest aspirations for this place. And there should be no limits to our aspirations. There is no limit to how good this unique place can be. I’m eager to join you in that venture and to write our own chapter in the history of the University of Richmond.”

The crowd responded with a standing ovation.

Tom Austin, R:29, returns to the approximate spot where someone snapped his picture in 1929.
Journey into Richmond’s past to see how much things have changed—and how much they have stayed the same.

By Barbara Fitzgerald

For institutional memory, you can’t beat Tom Austin, R’29. When he matriculated 80 years ago, the Richmond College campus featured only a few buildings.

“There was just the one main building (Ryland Hall), and it housed the administration, the library, the professors’ offices and most of the classrooms,” he recalls. “There was also the refectory (dining hall) … the old Millhiser gym and two dorms.”

Austin remembers a little building near the lake that housed a soda fountain and a bookstore. On the hill, where the library is now, stood an old dance hall left over from the days when the campus had been an amusement park. Science was taught in the former dance hall, except for physics, which Dr. Robert A. Loving taught in an old building near the power plant.

“There was a little boathouse on the lake, and I often swam across the lake up to the island at the end. A dam-like bridge connected us to Westhampton.”

At age 97, Austin still has a phenomenal memory for anything related to the University. He recalls paying tuition of $62.50 per year, and he has an English literature textbook marked with its $2.50 price. “It’s still one of my favorite books, and I refer to it often,” he says, breaking into the first stanza of “Lady of the Lake” from memory. “We had to memorize that to pass English.”

Austin remembers President Frederic Boatwright and Dean May Keller. “He was my president, a very serious man, intent and focused. He was not someone to approach with trivialities, and neither was Dean Keller. She was very strict.”

As a well-educated man who has traveled the world, Austin does not expect the University today to resemble the college he knew in the 1920s. “I would hope and expect it to have moved through a number of incarnations over the years,” he says. “Something would be drastically wrong had it not.” But he expects his University to maintain its sense of character, and when he disagrees with changes, he is quick to write letters to the powers that be.

“I think the primary necessity for a great university is great professors,” he concludes, “and it’s even better when they are also great men and women. We had them in my day: Dr. Loving; Dr. Mitchell, who had been president of Brown; Bob Gaines in math, who wore a black robe when he taught; Dr. Ryland in chemistry; Ralph McDanel and Mac Pitt. Was there ever a finer person? I’m sure students at the University today will carry forth such a list … of professors who made a difference in their lives. If you have professors like that, who educate well and change lives in the process, then Richmond will always be the same school at its heart, whatever the visible changes might be.”

On the pages that follow, alumni reveal how daily student life at Richmond has changed in their lifetimes. Separate entries cover food, fun, music, dorms, sports, fashion, science instruction and the library.
Students in coats and ties would have attracted little attention on the Richmond College campus in the 1940s and 1950s. "We wore them any day a picture might be taken," remembers Ray Ashworth, R'56. Students also dressed up for "inductions, football games and fraternity parties."

The rest of the time, men wore dark pants and V-necked sweaters over white shirts. Ashworth especially remembers those heavy wool pants. "My mother called them Sunday school pants," he says. "This was before the good wools came out that you could wear comfortably all year."

Haircuts were very short, especially if you went to the barber in the Slop Shop building. Long hair did not arrive on campus until the late 1960s.

In the late 1950s, women wore round-collared shirts with a circle pin on the collar. "Westhampton ladies" preferred plaid, pleated skirts or pencil-narrow skirts with cardigans (sometimes worn backwards) and Oxfords or loafers. Suits (and for some, hats) were appropriate for football games, and fraternity parties were dress-up occasions, too. Jumpers, vests and monograms were in—as were spit curls facing in from both sides of the forehead.

From the end of the 1950s until the mid-1960s, Richmond College was all Gant shirts with button-down collars, preppy Izod golf shirts, Weejun loafers, Harris tweed sport coats and crew-neck sweaters. There were also madras shorts, but students couldn't wear those to class. For dress up, it was a very traditional campus: khakis, striped ties and blazers. The only acceptable jewelry was a watch, a fraternity pin or subdued cufflinks.

Blue jeans did not have much impact on campus until the 1970s, when they competed with bell bottoms and mini-skirts for attention. Today, short skirts are back, and belly buttons have emerged—sometimes sporting rings. Guys have a baggier look, most often with shirt-tails out.

Generic tennis shoes have given way to sport-specific athletic shoes, but flip-flops are the most popular footwear. Students wear them everywhere, with everything, even in the winter.
Evolution of Teaching

Dr. Robert Smart, a former dean and professor of biology, used to say that if you put an ear of corn in his hand, he could teach an entire biology course around it.

Science instruction has changed dramatically since the late Dr. Smart uttered those words 70 years ago. Discovery-based learning has replaced the chalk 'em and talk 'em approach to teaching science, and the equipment has evolved from mechanical to electrical to digital.

"Computers have changed every department here ... especially the sciences," says Jackson Taylor, R'42, who taught physics at Richmond from 1948-86. As a first-year student in 1938, Taylor found "an excellent science complex" of Richmond Hall (physics), Puryear Hall (chemistry) and Maryland Hall (biology). This complex was a major improvement over the old dance hall where science professors lectured in the 1920s.

"We had excellent equipment" in 1938, Taylor says. "And over the years, we kept up very well. I remember when lasers came in, for instance, we were able to buy them quickly. The administrators recognized the importance of the sciences."

Taylor was among the first to integrate physics lectures and labs. "We gave up the big lecture room approach that Dr. Loving had used in my student days," he says, "and changed to smaller, individualized lecture presentations so students could actually do lab work in conjunction with the lecture."

The University has expanded on that concept ever since. "The teaching aspect is still paramount," he says. "A lot of good research takes place here, but ... teaching is still first and foremost. I welcome that non-change. On the other hand, undergraduate research is far more prevalent, and as long as it's woven into the instructional part of the program, which it seems to be, that's a good thing."

Taylor likes the newly expanded and renovated Gottwald Center for the Sciences. "I was impressed with the staff, their attention to teaching and research, and their commitment to the importance of seminars," Taylor says. "I'd have to give the place an A."
‘Almost a holy place’

Dickinson also knows a lot about the old library that served students from 1914 until Boatwright opened in 1954. As a student, she spent countless hours studying and socializing in the old library on the second floor of Ryland Hall.

“That library was almost a holy place … with its cathedral ceiling, casement windows, dark wood and a wonderful huge, high window facing the lake,” Dickinson says. “It was such a spiritual, unique place that the librarian didn’t have to shush you.”

When Dickinson returned to Richmond to teach psychology in 1963, she was delighted to find her office “in the first cubbyhole” of what used to be the library. “I liked it there,” she says. “It’s different from any other space on campus.”

The old library—with 100,000 volumes in 1945—was much smaller than today’s library, which holds more than 475,000 books, 540,000 government documents, 105,000 bound periodicals and 50,000 serial subscriptions. Last summer, to make more room, library workers replaced the stationary stacks with mobile shelving units. The library remains the most popular place to study on campus—often into the wee hours of the morning.

Life in the ‘Green Mansions’

Dorm life has changed dramatically since the days of the barracks that stood approximately where Jepson Hall is now. They were moved to campus from the Richmond Army Air Base in 1946 to accommodate the large number of war veterans entering Richmond College—“temporary” housing that lasted 28 years.

George Rapp, R’65, lived in the barracks as a first-year student. He laughingly refers to them as “the Green Mansions.” He says the barracks were typical military housing—two-story frame buildings with small rooms and wooden floors.

“Chunks of sheetrock would occasionally fall out onto the floor,” he recalls. The rooms alternated between being too hot or too cold, and Rapp recalls placing a piece of cloth over the vent to keep the soot down.

Replacing the barracks with modern residence halls was a huge improvement, and all dorms are now air-conditioned, but students are not required to keep their rooms as clean and orderly as they did 40 years ago. Most rooms are cluttered with “essential” electronics such as computers, printers, televisions, microwaves, refrigerators and video game consoles.

Thirty-five years ago, students walked to the end of the hall to use a pay phone. Today, most students carry cell phones. Campus pay phones became extinct several years ago. The biggest change, of course, has been men and women living in residence halls on both sides of the lake. Rapp thinks female students would have opposed that change if the barracks were still standing.
Musical memories

Ask Marylou Massie Cumby, W'47, for memories of her Westhampton days, and she wonders if enough time has passed to share this story.

When former President Frederic Boatwright died, there was a huge memorial service for him in the chapel, and Cumby was among a group of students waiting to sing. The chapel organ was played—as it had been for many years—by Miss Hannah Coker, who by then was deaf. Miss Coker raised her hands dramatically over the keys and started to play, but there was no sound. It took her a few seconds to notice the absence of vibrations, and then she stopped, turned on the organ and started again.

"By then we singers, being young and silly, were trying hard not to laugh and struggling to sing."

Singing was a big part of the Westhampton experience in the 1940s. Cumby remembers writing class songs for annual contests and playing the piano as her classmates learned them. There were songs as the students waited for dinner, singalongs and "little ditties" that all the girls knew by heart. Cumby remembers a few record players in the dorms, and students listened to Frank Sinatra and the big band sounds, but most of the music in those days was self-made.

Students don't sing together much anymore, except in organized groups such as the Octaves, Sirens, Schola Cantorum or University Choir. Today, thanks to tiny MP3 players, students listen to all types of music all over campus all the time, but music has become more of an individual experience than a shared one.

Sixty years ago, Cumby heard a lovely rendition of "Night and Day" coming from behind a closed door. "It was so beautiful that I eased open the door and saw this good-looking man playing the piano." She went in, met Guy Cumby, R'49, and started a conversation that turned into 50 years of happy marriage.

Music is still a common denominator for today's students, but the songs and the sounds are as different as, well, night and day.
Richmond’s winning tradition

The Tar Heels returned to the TJ gym the following year to avenge the loss, and the game is still remembered as a classic. The score was tied 45-45 in the final seconds as Carolina worked the ball around the perimeter.

Sophomore Frank Stoneburner, R'47, was surprised to be on the court. He rarely played because Richmond had five outstanding starters, but one of them had fouled out, and now Stoneburner was guarding a Carolina player at the top of the key with the biggest game of the year on the line.

Stoneburner eased off his man for a split second to fill a gap in the defense, and the Carolina guard pulled the trigger.

Swish! The Tar Heels took the lead. They scored again to make it 49-45, but that was no consolation to Stoneburner. “I gave up the game-winning shot,” he says with a grin.

Even so, Stoneburner has fond memories of Spider sports during World War II. “Thanks to the V-12 program, we acquired some excellent athletes from William and Mary, VMI, and Washington and Lee,” he recalls. The Navy’s V-12 program brought hundreds of additional students to Richmond for officer training.

Today, the Spiders continue to win big games. Last year, the football team advanced to the quarterfinals of the Division I-AA playoffs. The men’s basketball team beat Kansas in 2004, and the women’s basketball team earned an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament in 2005. Women’s teams in particular have won numerous conference championships in the past five years—particularly in swimming and field hockey.

Richmond’s winning tradition has endured, but much has changed in Spider sports. Today, women earn nearly as many athletic scholarships as men, and recruiting is nationwide—sometimes worldwide. Athletes are bigger, stronger and faster, and the basketball team no longer plays Union Theological Seminary or McGuire Hospital.

As for Carolina, the Tar Heels have improved somewhat, and they are not likely to give Richmond another rematch in the TJ gym.
Just for the fun of it

Barbara Ramsey Robbins, W'60, does not remember sliding down Boatwright hill on a serving tray, but she is not surprised that a photographer captured her having fun with classmates.

"Those are my predominant memories of college," she says. "My freshman year in particular, there was so much going on. ... We spent a lot of time in the dorm talking about boys, playing jokes and putting off studying."

Robbins recalls regular birthday parties in the dorm, and any care package from home was cause for shared celebration. They would place it on a chair with all four chair legs in pans of water to discourage the ants. "But if they got in anyway, we'd just brush them off and eat the goodies. A care package was too precious to waste."

A slow walk around the lake with a boy "was especially romantic in the fall, with the leaves turning, and the boy would walk you back to your dorm afterward," Robbins recalls. "These were still the days when there were house mothers waiting for you, and you had to sign in and sign out."

Today, students come and go as they please. Most of them have cars, so trips to area malls, movies and clubs are routine. On-campus fun has become a bit more organized, with lots of fraternity, sorority and club activities. And, yes, when it snows, students still slide down Boatwright hill.

The food got better

J.C. Phillips, R'64, remembers eating at the Emporium, an on-campus burger joint more commonly known as the Slop Shop.

In 1951, hoping to discourage the Slop Shop moniker, the manager held a contest to come up with a new name. The winner was "Dry Dock," but the name never caught on. Slop Shop it was until Tyler Haynes Commons opened in 1976 with The Pier, a fast-food restaurant with better food and more elbow room. The Pier is now Tyler's Grill, but students still call it The Pier.

The food at the Slop Shop was not very good, but it was better than the fare at the refectory, the men's cafeteria in Sarah Brunet Hall.

"There was a huge discrepancy between menus and meals," Phillips explains. The menu would promise "braised and savory this" and "pan-seared and succulent that." Then the entrée would turn out to be mystery meat, and a food fight would ensue.

Across the lake, Westhampton ladies dined family style on white linen tablecloths. They said (or sang) a blessing before each meal. The atmosphere was far more civilized, but the food was every bit as bad.

Phillips thought the refectory food was OK, but he envied the football players, who got steaks, "which the rest of us saw maybe once a year," he says.

Steak night comes more frequently for students today, and the recently renovated Heilman Center offers everything from grilled pork chops to brick-oven pizzas.

Food fights are a thing of the past.

Exploring Easter

Senior Laura Sullivan shares her study abroad experience in Chile.
Here I am at the Santiago airport, 21 hours into my study abroad. So where is the rest of the group? The eight-hour layover in Miami was nearly unbearable. My friend, Courtney, and I were not just on different flights but on different airlines. I was just being paranoid about my luggage being lost, but I am starting to realize that the language barrier is going to be a big problem. I have no idea what people are saying around me. Worse yet, I have no idea what the signs say.

OK, it has been 30 minutes. The plane that the rest of the group is on should have arrived by now. Where are they? OK, really now ... it's been an hour.

I hate traveling. I know that if you want to go anywhere, you have to deal with it, but still, I really hate traveling. I am such an awkward American right now, standing alone, looking uncomfortable. I am starting to mentally rehearse what I will say to a police officer if I can't locate the group in another 15 minutes.

SWEET MUSIC

Finally, I have arrived in Con-Cón, and my host family is terrific. I have a host brother, Carlos, a host madre, Helga, and a host padre, also named Carlos, who speaks wonderful, wonderful English. It sounds like sweet music to my ears after the constant onslaught of Spanish. I don't think my host family understands that I have never heard a word of Spanish other than Don't the Explorer. Really, I took French. I keep telling them this, and it doesn't seem to register.

I am sharing a room with Courtney, and we just had our first Chilean lunch. It is the main meal of the day here, stocked with beef, chicken, rice, beans and fruit. My host family is sooo nice, but the language barrier has taken a turn for the worse. The padre—the man who speaks wonderful English—does not live with the family.

I feel especially awkward at meal-times. The conversation is one-sided, and I am self-conscious about my manners and movements. I don't want to be rude by not eating all the food on my plate, but the lunches are enormous, and they include things like beef tongue!

Hmm ... not bad ... tastes a bit like pot roast.

The weekends are family days—grandma, older sisters, boyfriends and all the children. It's really fun. We meet the oldest daughter, Marsella, who speaks fluent English after living and working in the United States for one year. She offers acute and accurate opinions about life in Chile versus life in the United States, noting the low murder and crime rates in Chile. People here are happier, she says, and I agree.

When Marsella leaves, the language barrier returns, but Courtney knows some Spanish, and we communicate by acting things out, which creates more laughter than comprehension. Our host family seems cheerful all the time. They are the happiest people I have ever met, always singing and laughing. It's impossible to wake up in a bad mood in their home.

I knew nothing about Chile before I came here. It's such a well-kept secret in the United States. One country, many climates: extremely hot and dry to the north, extremely cold and damp to the south; the Andes Mountains to the east, the Pacific Ocean to the west. It's really incredible. No wonder they love life so much here.

SURVIVOR CHILE

After an orientation session with our program directors, we tour Reñaca, Con-Cón, Viña del Mar and Valparaiso, where I am stunned by the amount of pollution in the air and trash on the ground.

We rename the trip "Survivor Chile." We don't eat for extended periods. We go on six-mile walks, eat weird things, jump creeks, meet new people and struggle to stay warm. There are wild, mangy dogs everywhere, and ... oh yeah ... I don't speak the language. Did I mention that?

It's difficult to focus on our environmental economics class. The professor speaks only Spanish, and our interpreter struggles to translate the finer points into simple English. We are missing a lot, and it takes twice as long. The class lasts four hours on four days, but it seems like forever.

Today we visit the Naval Academy for lessons on earthquakes, El Niño and tsunamis, followed by a tour of poet Pablo Neruda's house in Valparaiso. People here are very friendly. They like to help you and talk to you, smiling in the streets and always saying hello. They are warm and welcoming, yet proud and dignified.

OK ... so maybe all Chileans aren't warm and welcoming. I flash back to the sixth grade as a group of Chilean students point at us and laugh in the cafeteria. We attract attention because we are blonde, red-headed and pale-skinned, but we aren't that strange. Are we?

No importa. We meet some fun Americans studying in Chile, who take us to a place called El Huevo, literally "the egg," which sizzles with nonstop dancing and entertainment. The club features American music, Latin pop and salsa dancing on each of four floors, including the roof deck. Courtney and I dance the night away with our new friends, and I can't get those catchy Latin reggaeton beats out of my head.

Time for a nature break, an 18-kilometer trek to the bottom of a glacier in the Andes Mountains, and I am sore. I am also bathing in hot springs with towering snow-capped mountains behind me. The weird, greenish-white water flows directly from the earth and cascades into four pools. I feel a bit like Goldilocks: The top pool is way too hot, the next pool is a little too hot, and the third pool is just right. I hope there are no bears around here.

We are staying in the last possible piece of civilization in the area, unheated cabins one hour off paved roads. The hike was strenuous, and the massive glacier, covered in dirt, blended in with the ground and tasted delicious.

Back in civilization, we buy tacky souvenirs and gifts at the artisans' stands along the beach in Viña del Mar. Our Richmond group gathers at our favorite bar, Café Journal, to celebrate my 21st birthday, and we go dancing in a place called Scratch. Chileans dance with very little contact between partners, which seems strange because otherwise they are so into public displays of affection. There's even a Spanish verb that means "to kiss in public."

Hey! My Spanish comprehension is getting better.

EASTER ISLAND

Arriving on Easter Island, 2,000 miles off the coast of mainland Chile, we encounter the incredible heads, volcanoes, craters and rainbows. Already I am in awe of the stone figures, the landscape and the culture.

Courtney and I again share a room in Chez Maria Goretti, a primitive hotel.

We are now being taught by Jose Miguel Ramirez, a famous archaeologist and an expert on Easter Island and the Rapa Nui civilization. Courtney and I agree that he has the kindest eyes we've ever seen. He seems like a typical Chilean: mild-mannered, calm, and very loving in everything that he does. He takes us to numerous ahu, the ceremonial platforms and crematoriums upon which the moai (stone heads) stand. Some of the ahu have been restored and rebuilt, and we meet the Rapa Nui stone master. We even see some human bones beneath the ahu. The quarry, a large volcano and crater, contains hundreds of half-completed heads, but unless these heads have eye sockets or a designated spirit, they aren't considered true moai.
Island dancing at the Rapa Nui Ballet is the most fun I have had on the island. The boys wear hula skirts, and the girls shake it better than Shakira. Some of the female dancers invite Chris and Dan, boys in our group, to dance with them. This is pretty much the funniest thing I have seen in ages. Courtney and I laugh until our stomachs ache, and then we laugh some more.

This place is spectacular. On the surface, it's just another subtropical paradise, but the undercurrent of mystery is spellbinding, and the dominating presence of the heads is almost disturbing. I want to scream at them, "Why! Why are you here? Why did they make you?" I understand the idea of memorializing the dead, but the fact that their entire society was based on the production and mobilization of these statues is mind-boggling. We are lucky to be here before more tourists discover Easter Island. We can explore the quarry, the volcanoes and the caves. We can touch the moai. It's living, breathing archaeology overflowing with legends and mysteries.

We ride horses to the highest point on the island. My horse is lovely, but she runs too often and never on command. Ouch! Ouch! Ouch! Someday I will be able to walk again. At the top of the volcano, we can see the entire triangle of the island, surrounded by the bluest ocean water I have ever seen. The Rapa Nui people could stand here and see literally their entire universe—amazing.

Today we meet the mayor, who answers many of our questions about current issues on the island. My research project centers on health care here, but inadequate medical facilities are just one challenge. The island's 4,000 or so people are wrestling with other serious issues, such as power generation, waste disposal and economic development. The economy is based on tourism, but the islanders don't want this industry to expand.

MORE MYSTERY
I am on Anakena beach, but it's so windy that our towels are covered with sand after only five minutes. There isn't much left to do on the island, and I'm getting a little bored. It's almost time to go home, and there are no more mysteries to ponder.

Or are there?
Just when we think we have learned everything, we meet Terry Hunt, a scientist who claims that his carbon-dating breakthroughs prove that the traditional history of Easter Island is completely wrong.

The island was colonized in 1200 not 600, he says. Contradicting everything Jose Miguel taught us during our first 10 days on the island, Hunt claims the island's trees were not killed by people making the statues. Instead, the Rapa Nui inadvertently brought rats to the island from Polynesia, and the rats reproduced so quickly that they ate all the seeds of the trees. By preventing the reproduction of the trees, the rats stopped the Rapa Nui from building their moai (the trees were essential to move the moai from the quarry to their ahu destinations). They also took away the raw material for making shelters, boats and other necessities.

So maybe I learned less than I thought on Easter Island. Or maybe I learned more. Maybe next time I won't be so quick to believe everything my teachers say. Even so, my love for other cultures only grows as I become more aware of how big the world is. Western civilization is not just Europe and the United States. There is a huge continent down here bursting with potential. I want to come back. I already miss it, and I haven't even left yet.

First Spider in space

NASA has assigned Leland Melvin, R'86, to an upcoming space shuttle mission that will deliver the European Space Agency’s Columbus Laboratory to the International Space Station.

When he got the news, Melvin went running and jumping through his house. “My dog was looking at me like I was crazy,” he told the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Melvin landed a job at NASA in 1989 after injuries cut his professional football career short. He joined the astronaut corps in 1998, but his upcoming mission marks his first opportunity to blast into space. He will be responsible for working the shuttle’s robotic arms to attach the Columbus Laboratory to the space station.

At Richmond Melvin was the quintessential student-athlete. As a wide receiver, he set school records in career receptions (198) and receiving yards (2,669). In the classroom, he demonstrated that same high level of performance as a chemistry major.

Melvin’s space shuttle mission will not blast off until September 2007 at the earliest, but it looks like his extraterrestrial dream will finally come true.

“I can’t wait to float over to the nearest window” and see the Earth as it really is, he said in a NASA interview. “Blues, greens, browns … no borders. One globe for everyone. … I think this is a way I can help promote peace in the world.”

Today show features Richmond couple

Joshua Walker, R'03, and Chaunteé Schuler, W'03, sang a duet, swirled through a ballroom dance and competed in other challenges in a bid to win a lavish wedding from NBC’s Today show.

“It was American Idol meets Survivor for weddings,” Walker says.

Of all the challenges, singing embarrassed Walker the most as he struggled to hold up his end of “A Whole New World.” Attempting a duet with Schuler, a rising Broadway star, in front of 8 million people “was just insane,” he says.

Schuler currently plays the lead role of Nala in Disney’s touring production of The Lion King. Walker is a doctoral candidate at Princeton University. They got engaged last summer, but postponed the wedding when Schuler landed The Lion King role.

Too busy to plan a wedding, they entered the “Today Throws a Wedding” competition.

They made it to the final round, but lost to a couple from California. “Even though we didn’t win, there’s nothing I would change,” Walker says. “We’re ready to focus on what’s important.”

At press time, the couple was planning to wed on Thanksgiving in a private ceremony in North Court’s Perkinson Recital Hall.

How To Work Like a Cat

Fun photos of cats and dogs (mostly cats) illustrate humorous (and dubious) career advice.

“In most jobs, you’re expected to work like a dog—show boundless enthusiasm for any dull and point-less task ... act thrilled with any meager reward ... play nice with the other dogs ... and never question the leader of the pack," writes Karen Wormald, C'87. "You need to wise up and end this ridiculous canine charade. Cats have it all figured out. They live by their own rules."

Wormald’s book makes an entertaining contribution to the eternal cat-versus-dog debate.

AWARDS
Richmond recognizes volunteers and grads
In late October, the University recognized Brandon Cox, ’99, of Washington, D.C., with its Spinning the Spider Web award for exemplary service as an alumni chapter president.

The University also presented Alec Smith, ’06, of Charlotte, N.C., with the Educational Fundraising Award for leading his senior gift campaign supported by more than 63 percent of his classmates—a new record.

In other awards, the Young Grad Council honored Josh Abramson, ’03, of New York as its Distinguished Young Graduate. Abramson is president of Connected Ventures, a multimedia company based in New York. The University also named Dallas residents Karen and Bryan Perry Volunteers of the Year for chairing the Society of Families. They are the parents of Margaret Elizabeth Perry, ’06.

Weinsteins honored for philanthropy
The Central Virginia Chapter of the Association of Fundraising Professionals honored Carole Weinstein, W’75, G’77 and H’04, and Marcus Weinstein, R’49 and H’02, at its National Philanthropy Day luncheon in November.

During the past 33 years, the Weinstein family has contributed to a number of academic programs, endowed faculty chairs, lectureships and building projects at the University.

Connect with classmates
Reunion Weekend
April 13–15, 2007
If your class year ends in 2 or 7, make a special effort to reconnect with your classmates on campus April 13–15. If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8030. Watch for more information about reunion weekend on the alumni Web site at www.UROnline.net.

Homecoming
Nov. 2–4, 2007
This university-wide celebration offers something for everyone: admission information sessions, Alumni College classes, departmental open houses, Saturday’s football game against Villanova, the pre-game picnic, a zero-year reunion for the Class of 2007 and a young grad reunion (for classes 1998–2007).

CLASS OF ’35
Frances Rowlett Perkins says hello and reports that her granddaughter, Connie Perkins, went to Germany on a professional Rotarian fellowship. She is an associate engineer for the City of Sacramento, Calif., where her specialty is water.

Otelia Francis Bodenstein writes, “My two sisters and I attended a family reunion on a hot day in June. It was hard to believe the 200 or so people were all kin to us! Also my niece from Cincinnati visited us with her 10-year-old granddaughter.”

Hazel Weaver Fobes credits Westhampton College and especially her professor in French, Dr. Wright, for preparing her for life in France with her husband, John Fobes, now deceased. John was a diplomat and deputy general of UNESCO. He and Hazel lived in Paris for 17 years and in India for four years. They have two children, four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Hazel now lives in Asheville, N.C., where she is active in city politics and government. She is an avid gardener.

I am well and enjoy hearing from you all. Please drop me a card or e-mail message with any news for the next issue.

CLASS OF ’36
Our class members were uncertain about how we should meet last spring to celebrate our ’70 reunion. Finally, a few of us met for a lovely lunch at Westhampton. Those present were Margaret Bowers Gill, Helen Emery Falls, Christine Vaughan Troxell, W’37, Alice Giles and Lucy Alexander. We missed all of you unable to come.

In recent weeks my daughter, Elizabeth Riis Moore Usty, and her husband, Dallas, and I went to the University’s campus. The Lora Robins Gallery is closed on Mondays, but the Modlin Center for the Arts was open, although the art exhibit rooms were closed for the summer. We walked around the beautiful building and took photos.

Please help us by writing to me about the possibility of your being at Westhampton in April or May 2007. Also try to locate someone near you to discuss plans. Send me your news.

CLASS OF ’41
Don’t miss “Time Passages” featuring Jean Neasmith Dickinson’s description of the old library on page 18.

Our class news this time came from Jean Neasmith Dickinson, whose letter follows.

Fifteen alumnae attended the Friday night dinner and Saturday luncheon at our 65th reunion in May. Antoinette “Toni” Wirth Whitted and Mayme OFlaherty Stone made all the arrangements for our luncheon on Saturday.

Margaret Brittingham Lovig has been the driving force and always has more to contribute to it. The 65th is a memory. Let’s hang in there till 2011 for our 70th!

Margaret wrote a warm and passionate letter about her Westhampton College experiences. She is an avid supporter of the recent drive to raise money for building the Westhampton Center, a proposed addition to the Deeney. She wrote, “The women will enjoy the new space for Westhampton College staff, as well as student study and social areas. I think it is good to keep the coordinate college system in cement and alive.” She also wrote, “At this time in our lives, it is difficult to know what we can afford to give or when to do it, but this project deserves serious thought.”

Toni, Mayme and I had the chance to select on your behalf the applicant for our class scholarship, which is $10,900 for 2006–07. We each chose the same student from the résumés of several finalists: Nicole Joanna Buell, from Raleigh, N.C. Her mother is Jeanne Marie VanDiversen, W’76, and her grandmother is Adele VanDiversen, G’77, Nicole is majoring in biology and sociology, and she is involved in a variety of extracurricular activities. This year she is chair of the Westhampton College Honor Council. She wrote, “Westhampton College has done an excellent job of making sure females have the same support as men. For that I am truly appreciative, and I hope that I have been able to set a positive example for other Westhampton College students.”

Keep us posted on your health, travels and family. Our thanks to Martha Beamer de Vos for her work as our class secretary these past five years. Mayme will now be our class secretary, and I was chosen to be chair of the Class of ’41.

Reconnecting with Richmond
Claude G. Thomas, R'49

Leaving Richmond in 1951, Claude Thomas was chasing the fledgling mutual funds industry. "In the early '50s, no one had any idea what mutual funds were," he says. "Today, it's a $7 trillion industry, the greatest business in the world."

Thomas has traveled full circle in those 55 years. He recently purchased a home in Goochland County, Va., and is reconnecting with his alma mater and some of the friends he made during his Richmond College days. In February he endowed a University scholarship that will be offered for the first time in 2007-08. He credits his wife, Mary, a former professor at the University of New Hampshire, with the idea of creating a scholarship to mark his 80th birthday.

Thomas joined the Navy soon after graduating from John Marshall High School in Richmond in 1943. After serving in the Asiatic Pacific area and at Quantico, Va., he ended his military career on a destroyer escort based off the coast of Kobe after Japan's surrender.

He enrolled in Richmond in 1946 on the GI Bill, and he remembers attending classes in Quonset huts. He majored in economics and minored in math while running track and serving as president of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He also was elected to membership in the leadership fraternity Omicron Delta Kappa. Graduating in only three years and taking the advice of the late Or. Herman P. Thomas, professor of economics, he landed a job in mutual funds.

His financial career took him throughout the United States—from North Carolina to Florida to Massachusetts. He retired in 1991 as senior executive vice president of Massachusetts Financial Services and president of its marketing and sales subsidiary in Boston. His career kept him away from Richmond for many years, but he is looking forward to rekindling old friendships with classmates and fraternity brothers including Jack Jennings, R'49 and H'80, Lewis Booker, R'50 and H'77, Carlyle Tiller, R'48 and H'76, and Gordon Cousins, R'49.

"UR is producing wonderful people," he notes. "I am absolutely amazed and delighted at the growth in terms of new buildings, the endowment and the accomplishments of alumni."

Reunion Reminder
April 13–15, 2007
If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@rich- mond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

The living must have been easy this past summer because the news has been scarce. Anyone who could escape the heat around here did so.

Helen Cole Richardson and her husband, Straughan Richardson, 'R'46, and Nancy Richardson Elliott spent time at their river home. Lena Thornton Small joined them for a few days, and I believe Frances Coles McClennan did also.

Virginia Wagstaff and her sister also made several trips to their river place.

As for trips, Marion Collier Miller reports that her trip west was a good one, but very different from her usual trip across the Atlantic. It is hard to beat the scenery in the western part of our own country.

Marylou Massie Cumby and her daughter, Bee, planned a trip to China and Tibet for October. Marylou spent time in New Mexico with Bee before and after the trip.

If you can believe it, we are having a '47 class reunion April 13–15, 2007, and I dare not write down the number. You will be receiving material from the college if you have not already received the first mailing. We will have the Boatwright Society dinner on Friday night, the picnic on Saturday mid-day and our dinner on Saturday night.

Many of us in the Class of '47 are the same age, give or take a year. Some of us had significant birthdays this year. I want to congratulate those of us who reached this milestone. Hard to believe, isn't it?

Too often I must close these letters on a sad note. Susie Guard Woody called to tell me that her husband, C.L., died in June 2006. He had not been well for some time, but it is always a shock. Susie and C.L. had two daughters, both of whom were Westhampton College graduates.

We were also saddened by the death in July of Shirley Davis Sanford. Her family (four daughters and a grandson) had a lovely memorial service in the Cannon Memorial Chapel on campus. It was followed by a reception in the Wilton Center for Campus Ministries.

Howie Bingham Kiser's daughter, Melissa, came from Princeton for the service. She continues to direct public relations for the Pennington School at Princeton, teach an honors English class and serve as co-advisor for the student yearbook. Her son, David, graduated from Princeton in 2005.

I'm looking forward to seeing you in April.

CLASS OF '48
The following class news was inadvertently omitted from the fall issue.

Josephine Hoover Pittman's husband, Bob, died on March 13, 2006. We share her sorrow and keep her in our loving thoughts. Joe continues a vital life with four daughters, a number of grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. On April 15, granddaughter Jessi Cobb married Christopher Kraus.

Mary Cross Marshall was elected vice president of the Boatwright board for the coming year. Also attending the Boatwright dinner in March were Jean Brumsey Biscoe, Betty Hickerson Butterworth, Faye Hines Kilpatrick, Margaret Elliott Ownby and Virginia Herndon Pugh.

Virginia was very proud, as we are, that her daughter, the Rev. Dr. Elizabeth A. Pugh, W'86 and H'00, was the speaker for the morning worship service in Cannon Memorial Chapel on April 2. She is pastor of Grace Baptist Church in Richmond, where a celebration of her marriage took place on June 17. Ginnis's son, Billy, is a teacher and coach at Hayfield High School in Fairfax County.

Frances Stuart Bailey and Rolen C. Bailey, R'49, vacationed in Gatlinburg, Tenn., and while there, they had as their guests Robert W. Hays, R'49, and Lee Persons Hays, W'52. Rolen is serving as interim pastor at Oak Hall Baptist Church, which is located near the Richmond airport.

Frances Orrell Lineberry and Berlin Byron Lineberry, R'49, had the joy of attending the graduation of Emily Green, Berlin's granddaughter, from the University of Mary Washington. Her deceased grandmother and our classmate, Emily Smith Holland, would have been proud of her namesake.

Seth Darrow Jewell checked in with a note sounding like her upbeat self! Still on Maryland's Eastern Shore near Oxford, she has retired from her real estate business, which has been taken over by her son, Robert G. Shannahahan, R'74 and L'77. Two grandsons have graduated from Virginia colleges and are continuing their education. Her granddaughter, who attends the University of Delaware, is a good student and a lacrosse player. Occasionally, she hears from Frankie Stebb and Connie Newton, members of our original class when we lived in "Rat Heaven, Thomas Hall, all manner of strange places long, long ago." Seth still enjoys doing needlepoint and adds to her collection of decoys. She sends best wishes to everyone.

The following class news was submitted by Mary Cross Marshall. Suzanne Lovern Peeler will resume her role as class secretary for the spring issue.

Suzanne Lovern Peeler is recovering from a broken wrist. She fell while walking on cobblestones in Germany, where she was on an European cruise from Brussels to Vienna. Although she continued the trip down the Rhine and Danube rivers, she limited her sightseeing.

Margaret Sabine Brizendine enjoyed a summer visit with relatives in New York state. Earlier, she had a delightful cruise to the Scandinavian capitals, celebrating her 79th birthday in Gdansk, Poland, and attending a Russian Ballet performance in St. Petersburg.

Jean Brumsey Biscoe visited her deceased sister's children on the riverboat home of one of her nieces on Lake Powell, Utah.

Proud grandmother Arleen Reynolds Schafer attended her only granddaughter's graduation in Richland Center, Wis. She was the class valedictorian, a National Merit Scholar and received early acceptance to the University of Minnesota.

Ann Clark Little and her husband, Randel, have lived at Wyndemere, a full-care retirement facility in Wheaton, Ill., for about a year. Ann is leading a poetry reading group in which she is learning about poets and "like-minded" members of her new community.

Doris Moore Shea wrote of her trips to Hilton Head and attending a wedding in Hartsville, S.C. She came to the Richmond area to attend the 80th birthday party for John F. Butterworth III, R. Also, Millicent Hutcherson Taylor and her husband, Simeon Taylor, R'47, helped the Butterworths celebrate.

Doris Vickers Lektorich called from California to report a cruise to Nova Scotia and Canada. On June 28, 2006, her children surprised her with a huge 80th birthday party featuring a "life story" and the attendance of her younger brother from the East Coast.

Sally Taylor DuBose called to rave about a family trip to Seattle, Vancouver and the beautiful Butchart Gardens.

Elizabeth Koltskan Cowles related her trip to Boston for sightseeing and especially to attend a concert at Jordan Hall, where her talented grandson played the viola in a quartet. Also this summer, two of her sons and their families visited her in Tula from California and Texas.

Josephine Hoover Pittman wrote of a visit to the mountains of Virginia to see her brother and the World War II D Day Memorial in Bedford. Later she joined family members at her vacation home in Destin, Fl.

In June Judith Barnett Seelhorst and her husband, Art, joined a daughter and her family on a visit to Chincoteague, Va. Then in July they hosted a family reunion at the Seelhorst family farm, Windy Hill, in Kentucky.

I talked to Alice C. Goodman, who was hospitalized in June with a low red blood cell count but has now recovered.

My summer has been uneventful except for the joy of hearing from so many class members. I received messages from Hannah Barlow Bain, Seth Darrow Jewell, Virginia Smith Kynett and Frances Orrell Lineberry, who are maintaining their pleasant lifestyles.

CLASS OF '49
Our classmates continue to choose new addresses, often in retirement communities. Frankie Robison King and George have moved into their new cottage at Lakewood Manor in Henrico County.

Nancy Keesee Baylor and Richard have left their home of 50 years and settled into an apartment at the Province Place of Bon Secours in Norfolk, Va. Nancy retired from the Norfolk public schools as an elementary school librarian after 23 years. Richard is a retired accountant.

Marilyn Michener Anthony has moved from Simsbury to Tariffville, Conn.

Both Mildred “Mimi” Anderson Gill and Jean Moody Vincent reported a lovely luncheon in Williamsburg on a beautiful July day. They joined 10 of our classmates first at the home of Virginia “Bangs” Shaw Warren in the Williamsburg Landing rental community and then at Jane Dens McManagal’s cottage for Jane’s birthday. Visiting together were Mimi, Jean, Audrey Bradford Saue, Elizabeth “Beth” Wilburn Hooker, Cynthia Patrick Otte, Idi Eanes Patrick, Joyce Roberson Goforth, Martha M. Hall, Virginia and Jane. Harriet Smith Powell was unable to attend.

Jean’s daughter lives in Bridgewater, Va., and is head of the pharmacy at Rockingham Memorial Hospital.

Sadly, on June 15, 2006, Robert “Mick” McManagal, Jane’s husband, died after a brief illness and hospital stay. Mick had worked for Westinghouse and recently had settled with Jane at Williamsburg Landing. Our love and sympathy are extended to Jane and her family. Many of our classmates who gathered at Jane’s birthday party attended Mick’s funeral.

Mimi had news of Florence Gray Tullidge and Tommy, who has not been well. Flo enjoys water exercises and other strengthening activities. Mimi also said that Peggy Harris Barnett, now in Vienna, Va., with her sister, enjoys receiving cards. Peggy’s children and others help with her care.

Betty Ann Allen Dillon visited England for 10 days in July for the Hampton Court Flower Show. She then met her daughter and granddaughter for 10 days in Ireland, where she revisited places she cherished and wanted to share with her granddaughter. In mid-August Betty Ann again traveled to Ireland with a friend.

Please drop me a line about your activities.

CLASS OF ’50
On June 26, 2006, a number of our classmates met for lunch at the Olive Garden on West Broad Street in Richmond. Arrangements were made by Doris Balderson Burbank, our class president, and Janice Brandenburg Halloran. We had a delightful and lively turnout:

This season has been one of grandparent joy. Helen Lampathakis Kostyal regaled us with news and photographs of her grandson, tenor Brandon Wood. He made his New York debut on Mother’s Day at Avery Fisher Hall at the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts with five solos to his credit.

Gene Hart Joyner reported that Rebecca Lee Chandler, granddaughter of Hilda Moore Hankins, is once again the recipient of our class scholarship. Gene’s own granddaughter, Sarah Elizabeth Hall, graduated with honors from Athlee High School and is attending Virginia Tech this fall. She also reports a family milestone: 25 consecutive years of vacationing together at Nags Head, N.C.

Maryanne Bugg Lambert shared news of her twin granddaughters, one of whom just graduated from the University of South Carolina Law School and is staying with her and Pete while taking law review classes at T.C. Williams School of Law at the University.

Marianna “Mokey” Rounds Holloway wrote (on a lovely note card designed by her granddaughter, Jessica) that they were enjoying Jessica’s presence in their home while she was on vacation from Cornell, and they are trying to keep up with grandson Jonathan.

Marjorie Parson Owen wrote that she frequently attends the University’s sporting events and visits her granddaughter on campus. She also has taken many trips with the senior group at the hospital in Emporia, Va., such as attending a play at the Ford Theatre in Washington, D.C.

Wilda Whitman Oakley is an active participant in a local craft organization, putting to use her creative abilities making jewelry and unusual ornaments.

Ruth Morrissey Bain visited her daughter in Boston. The two of them also went on an Elderhostel trip.

Doris Balderson Burbank, G77, and Banny, her husband, took Margaret Alexander Anderson and Barbara White Balderson as their guests to see a play, “Three Days of Rain,” at the Chamberlayne Actors Theater in March.

Barbara Ann Taggart made news when she participated in the local Public Square community discussion on the topic of immigration.

Finally, we extend our deepest condolences to Audrey Lynn Moncure Jones on the death of her husband and to the family of Ruth Pitman Gurley, who died in the spring.

On a final note: “Our” award-winning contest song, “You’ll Never Walk Alone,” closed out the program at the national Memorial Day concert in Washington, D.C. This seems, indeed, to be almost a motto for our class: As long as we have each other, we will never walk alone.

It was so good to see so many of you at our 55th reunion, and as you can see, I will be our class secretary for the next five years, so please keep in touch at the address below.

Paula Abernathy Kelton and John attended their grandson’s graduation from Wake Forest in May. They stayed with Mitzi Verra Williams, W49, who was Paula’s “big sister.”

Lea Thompson Osburn spent a week at the Jersey shore in July.

Mary Lee Moone May had hip replacement surgery in July, and while recovering, she fell and broke her femur. I am glad to report that she is recovering nicely.

Charlotte Herrink Sayre became a great-grandmother to a boy, Joshua, who was born in August.

Elizabeth “Ibby” Gill White and her husband moved in July to a retirement community in Silver Spring, Md. Ibby plans to continue with her church activities and giving piano lessons. In June she traveled to California to visit friends.

Frances Allen Schools and Nancy Taylor Johnson had a wonderful trip to Russia, where they took a river cruise from St. Petersburg to Moscow. The highlight of the trip for Frances was learning to play the balalaika. She also traveled to Batou Rouge, La., for a family wedding.

Bob and I were in Denver in May to see our new grandson. That’s all for now. Please keep in touch.

We would like to give many thanks to Linda Acor, who has worked with us for some years now as Class Connections editor. As of July 1, 2006, Ellen Bradley, W’91, has assumed this role. You may send your news directly to her at alumni@richmond.edu if you prefer.

Anne Gibson Hill called today, saying that her two grandchildren, Rebecca and Abbie, are touring UR as part of a group from Episcopal High School visiting colleges.

Eleanor Lee Persons Hay and Robert W. “Bob” Hays, R’49, made their fifth cross-country trip, starting from their new home in San Angelo, Texas. Frances Stuart Bailey, W’48, and Rolen C. Bailey, R’49, were vacationing in Gatlinburg and showed them around the tourist sites. Eleanor and Bob also saw Catherine Krause Keeney, W’50, and her husband in Alabama. Five classmates—Kathleen Cooke O’Brien, Sarah Barlow Wright, Marianne Shumate Jensen, Betty Geiman Newton and Nancy Clement Edmonds—joined them for a long lunch in Fredericksburg, Va. It was a mini-reunion complete with husbands.

Eleanor and Bob will celebrate his birthday in October with their 10th cruise, this time to a part of Mexico they have not visited.

Addie Eick Comogney was planning a weekend eating oysters on Cape Cod with her tent mate from the early ’40s. She keeps in touch with Sue Easley Candler, Henrietta Dow Vinson and Harriet Willingham Johnson.

I spent three weeks in Brazil and had a marvelous time. It is such an exciting place, and there are such good friends there. We are already planning our 2007 trip for educators to the Pantanal, the largest wetland in the world with the second week in Sao Paulo.

Betty O’Bannon Calp wrote last winter that she and Ralph exchanged visits with each of their four children and their families for the Christmas holidays. That meant trips from Liberty Lake, Wash., near Spokane, to Troy, Ohio, with excursions to the Texas towns of Flower Mound and Plano. Besides visits to their own families, they made two trips to New York last year to see friends, go to plays and attend the Radio City Music Hall Christmas Spectacular.

Richmond is the first University in the United States to offer a study abroad program that includes Easter Island. Senior Laura Sullivan shares her study abroad experience on the island and on mainland Chile in a story that begins on page 22.

Recent news from Betty Andrews Rhudy strikes a note that many of us must be contemplating. She and Bill are downsizing right there on St. Simon’s Island, where they have lived quite happily for the past 10 years. Their only trip this year was to Indiana for the graduation of their grandson, who entered college in Boston in the fall.

As for me, I just finished summer school. I taught “Romanticism and the Modern World” at Pace University here in New York, where I’ve been an adjunct in the English department since 2001. And I was a student in a coping/dating course through the NYU Continuing Education program. (I’m all jittery right now, waiting for grades to come out!) The summer winds up with my annual visit with my daughter and her Italian family in a little French farming village, two hours south of Paris by train.

Prior to attending the wedding of her son, Peter, in the U.S. Virgin Islands, Beverley Burke McGhee took scuba diving lessons at her local YWCA. When she arrived in the Virgin Islands, where she stayed for a week, she was ready to put her lessons into practice. Beverley’s son and his new wife live in Williamsburg, Va., where he is director of entertainment at Busch Gardens.

Beverley returned the end of August from a three-week cruise up the Yangtze River, stopping along the way to visit the Great Wall, the terra cotta warriors and the Ming Tombs. On the same cruise were Jo Sue Leonard Simpson and her husband, Rem. Costello “Cos” Washburn Barnes, Sara Sherman Cowherd and Nancy Graham Harrell visited Barbara Cronin Lovell at her house on Lake Sebago, Maine, in July. As Nancy wrote, they all missed Nancy Lay but carried on in the Viva spirit. They also enjoyed talking to Mary Jane Miller via phone. She is doing well and sounded just the same.

Ann Hanbury Callis writes that her big project through April 2007 is researching the history of Virginia Beach for the big celebration of landfall at Cape Henry with the arrival of the three ships, Susan Constant, Godspeed and Discovery. It is a big job, and she would like for anyone interested in helping to contact her. Please let me know if you would like Ann’s e-mail address.

It is with sadness that I inform you of the death of our classmate, Edith “Edie” Jackson Jones on Sept. 25, 2006. After graduation, Edie was a case worker for children’s social services for four years for the State of Virginia. She was actively involved with Greensboro Public Schools and served as president of the PTA at several schools.

A partial knee replacement has put youthful energy in the step of Margaret “Peggy” Armstrong Tluszc. Peggy’s mother, a 1927 graduate of Westhampton College, celebrated her 100th birthday with all of her family at Easter. This celebration and other cherished memories helped ease the sorrow when Mrs. Armstrong died in June. Our heartfelt condolences go to Peggy.

Polly Bundick Dize is fortunate to have all seven of her grandchildren living in close proximity to her home in Onancock, Va.

Mariah Chisholm Hasker reported the joyful birth in July of her third granddaughter. Our congratulations are sent to the family.

A long letter from Alice Creath McCulloough was welcome news. In August 2005 Alice and her husband spent a month in Africa, where Alex was preaching at a crusade in Nigeria. They also attended an international Christian conference in Nairobi, which was followed by a five-day safari. Alice continues in her position as director of Woodlot Christian Pre-School. While on vacation this summer, Alice and Alex traveled with their daughter, Mary, and her four young girls to visit their son, Winston, and his family in Oregon.

Beverly Drake Herring and her husband had plans for trips to Charleston, S.C., and Lake Tahoe, Nev. Bev also was enjoying family and especially a July picnic for “all 24 of us.” The annual summer week in Nags Head, N.C., was again fun for Myra Embrey Wormald and Bob and their family. In September Myra and Bob’s traveling took them to Italy, with Tuscany and the Italian Riviera on the itinerary. In October they planned to watch three grandchildren play football on their respective high school teams in Florida.

“Steamboat a Comin’ was the theme for Cameron “Cammie” Freeman Napier and her husband as they enjoyed a week in August cruising Alabama rivers on the Delta Queen.

Shirlee Garrett Maxson wrote about a July luncheon trip to the home of Barbara Pratt Willis, W’56, in Fredericksburg. Alice McCarty Haggerty, Virginia “Jan” Hogge Atkins, W’56, and Patricia McElroy Smith, W’56, were also guests. Shirlee, Jan and Virginia “Ginnie” Swain Saunders were in the wedding party. Shirlee and her husband also enjoyed a special Memorial Day weekend at the Greenbrier Resort.

Friday, April 27, 2007, is a date to mark on your calendar. Margaret “Marty” Glenn Taylor is chair of the Virginia Garden Club of Middle Peninsula’s Garden Week. On that date in April, six houses will be open for a fabulous tour of Bowler’s Wharf and Ware’s Wharf on the Rappahannock River.

Margaret Gore Swanson and Jack celebrated their 50th anniversary on Sept. 1. Their son and his wife, who were celebrating their 15th anniversary, were with them for this special celebration.

Hope Guaraldi Wallace wrote that grandchildren and travel are favorite topics at this stage of our lives. Hope’s older grandson lives in Tennessee, and the younger grandson was born in May in Rotterdam. On July 3, the family flew from various points in the country for a two-week stay to enjoy this new child, one another and the lovely country of the Netherlands.

Joy Winstead and your secretary had an occasion to renew our acquaintance with Dale Harman Singleton. Dale was in our class during our first year at Westhampton, and she still lives in the Richmond area.

In August the Barbershop Chorus from Richmond journeyed to St. Petersburg, Russia, to perform. Nancy Johnson White traveled with the group; her husband is a member of the chorus.

At this writing Jacquelyn “Jackie” Kilby Brooks had not made her move to Richmond. Her home in Fairfax was on the market, and her plans for a move to Lakewood Manor in Richmond were crumbling.

“Life is good!” was the report from Ann King Lucas. She and Bob enjoy the relaxed life of retirement, but they spend time volunteering and doing church work. Ann is in her 10th year as a mentor at an elementary school.

Emily Menefee Johnston and her husband, Bill, and their family spent a few days at Emerald Isle, N.C., during the summer.

A report on a summer driving trip by Pat Minor Hoover and her husband is one to make you want to get “on the road again.” They traveled east and north from Harrisonburg, Va., and found Nova Scotia a delightful area with friendly people and beautiful landscapes.

One day in August, Alice McCarty Haggerty traveled to Norfolk for a most pleasant visit with Arthur and Renee Gartner Diamonstein. Alice has a busy schedule with volunteering and travel.

Virginia B. “Sunshine” Murden and a friend had a table of creative items, titled “Nature’s Best,” at their church bazaar in Portsmouth, Va.

A 20th wedding anniversary was celebrated by Grace Phillips Webb and her husband at Virginia Beach in July. A trip to Ireland was also planned.

Ethel “Smitty” Smith Amacher enjoys many activities and volunteer opportunities in the Charleston, S.C., area. The annual Spoleto Festival, which is a major showcase for artists and ensembles on the way to significant careers, was especially good this year, with the Flamenco Ballet being Smitty’s favorite. She is now involved with plans for a free medical clinic on Johns Island.

Sue Smith VanWickler and Van are enjoying their second retirement move. They are living in a lovely condominium for those “over 55” in Charlottesville. Sue and Van continue to be avid tennis players.

“A wonderful whirlwind of adventures” was the summer report from Burrell Williams Stultz and John Stultz, B’58. They were at the base of the Tetons in Wyoming and in Colorado and Santa Fe, N.M. A trip to the beach brought them back to Virginia. Their daughter and her family joined them for part of the exciting activities, including trail riding on horseback.

The wedding ceremony for Joan “Jody” Weaver Wampler and Bill Yuhase was celebrated on Sunday, July 16, 2006, at the Hanover Arts and Activities Center in Ashland, Va. Jody and Bill’s friendship was renewed at a Thomas Jefferson High School class reunion.

Barbara “Bobbie” Reynolds Wyker and her husband find great pleasure in having children and grandchildren living just short distances away.

A Monday in August found eight members of the Class of ’55 lunching together at Stony Point Shopping Mall in Richmond. Good food and conversation were relished by Jean Crittenden Kauffman, Nancy Johnson White, Emily Menefee Johnston, Alice McCarty Haggerty, Grace Phillips Webb, Barbara “Bobbie” Reynolds Wyker, Burrell Williams Stultz and Joy Winstead.

As of June 30, 2006, the Westhampton College Class of 1955 George M. Modlin Scholarship in the Arts has reached more than $332,000 in commitments. Please continue to earmark your contributions for this scholarship. We look forward to a time when we can meet the first recipient of the scholarship. Lauren Milam, from Lexington, Ky.

Classmates, your input made this newsletter. My thanks!

Wendy Drake Herring and her husband, Burrell Herring, W’58, were again fun for Myra Embrey Wormald and Bob and their family. Cora Sue Elmore Spruill and I go way back to Massanutten Music Camp. Wonder if others in our class had that wonderful experience. Cora Sue subs as organist at churches in the Tappahannock area. Joe has retired from the bench, and they enjoy playing golf and spending time with their children and grandchildren. Two of their sons are lawyers in Richmond, and one is an Episcopal rector in Nashville. They have seven grandchildren.

Jean Hudgins Frederick and Arnold enjoy their beach house at Sandbridge, Va., and have had such notable guests as Peggy M. Ware this summer. Their oldest grandson planned to attend St. John’s College in Annapolis, Md., this fall. The Fredericks enjoyed visiting with Jean Anderson Farmer and Peyton at Arnold and Peyton’s 50th Richmond College reunion and their induction into the Boatwright Society. Jean and Peyton had a nice vacation in April to South Carolina.

Jo Anne Garrett West and Bill live in Jacksonville, Fla., but travel frequently to Alexandria, Va., to visit their six grandchildren. In February they had a wonderful trip to the Holy Land. They were pleased to find that little had changed in the bazaar and Arab Christian quarter of Jerusalem since they were there in 1965 as newlyweds.

Shirley Hill Bishop, Edwina “Eddie” Knipling Lake and Anita Knipling Scott, W’59, enjoy getting together frequently in Alexandria, Va. Shirley sells real estate but finds time to enjoy her three sons and six grandchildren. She is also involved in church activities, community functions and volunteer projects.

Nancy Nelson Tweed and I had lunch during Spoleti. She is doing great since her knee surgery. She and her husband had a nice trip to Williamsburg, Va., this summer, where they met family and friends. Sarah Ashburn Holder and Gene enjoy having quality time with their grandchildren. Sarah still sings in the church choir.

I continue to enjoy my volunteer work with the church flower guild and wedding guild, garden club and civic involvement.

Please send me your news, as your classmates love to know what you are doing.

CLASS OF ’59

In July, Patricia “Patsy” MacDonald Allen had a fantastic trip to Russia. She and her husband, Dick, flew to St. Petersburg and took a river cruise that ended in Moscow. They visited the Hermitage, Catherine’s Summer Palace and took a canal boat ride throughout the city. They visited small villages and found Moscow interesting, especially Red Square, the Kremlin and fabulous art museums. They attended the Bolshoi and Moscow Circus. A family week at their place at Sun River in Eastern Oregon was fun for everyone. Patsy lined up judges/clerks for Portland’s All Miniature Rose Show on Aug. 5, 2006. Later in August they had an enjoyable visit from Elizabeth Ramos Dunkum and Ellis Dunkum, R and GB’69. This stop was part of the Dunkums’ grand, three-week trip to the Northwest.

Last November Margaret “Peggy” Tabor Small and her husband, Mike, moved to Texas and lived in a rental house in Sun City until their house was finished in Heritage Oaks in January. They are about 20 minutes from son Mike and his family, who live in Round Rock, Texas. Their daughter, Tracey, and her husband, Don, live in Ecuador, where they are missionaries with Mission Aviation Fellowship. In March they had a “small” reunion with their children and their families at Disney World.

In Atlanta, Elizabeth Goldman Solomon’s daughter-in-law is a partner in a law firm, and her son, Andrew, continues to do well in real estate. Her daughter, Lauren, has an advertising agency in Atlanta, which was awarded an advertising distinction. Elizabeth’s tutoring business continues to do well.

Jacqueline “Jackie” Atkinson had chemotherapy for breast cancer, which was discovered last September and thankfully is in remission. She is receiving Herceptin by infusion every three weeks at Duke. She and her husband moved into Crossdaile Village in Durham, N.C., just 30 minutes from their two children and eight grandkids in Cary, N.C.

Sylvia Olney Kelley and her husband, Frank, explored northern Scotland in the early summer and took a trip to Holland and Burgundy, Belgium. The rest of the summer they spent in Maine before heading back to Key West in October. She would love visits from her classmates.

On July 29, Mary Ann Williams Haske’s youngest son, Jim, was married to Elizabeth Sandstrom at the Virginia Science Museum in Richmond. On Aug. 17, they returned to their home in Guangzhou, China, where they both teach. Son Dave and his wife, Jenn, were here for the wedding, but had to leave the next day for their jobs in Shanghai. Daughter Margaret came for the wedding, but also had to leave the next day for her home in Kenya. Daughter Sue from New York was a great help to everyone by doing such things as airport runs and food pickups. Son Tom, his wife, Chantal, and their son, Ethan, stayed with her for about a month after the wedding. While all six children and their families were there for the wedding, Mary Ann had a grassroots service for her husband, Bernie.

In July, Eileen Cordle Harris and husband Ed had a lovely trip to Sheboygan, Wis., via Ludington, Mich., which included a ferry ride across Lake Michigan, making their annual Bible trip more interesting. They traveled to Liberty, Mo., for a visit with Anne Mills Sizemore, W’61, and her husband, W. Christian Sizemore, R’60. They attended the Sizemore reunion in Halifax. Eileen and her family were celebrating August family birthdays in Toano, Va., when grandson Thomas James Saunders decided to enter the world two weeks early at a Williamsburg, Va., hospital. Eileen had a great time helping her daughter, Mary Keyle Saunders, by providing her with two weeks of “Nana” duty.

In July, Barbara Dunlu Polis and family had a fun vacation on a ranch trip in Wyoming, where she tried to be a cowgirl. On July 4, they participated in a parade in a nearby Wyoming town, where all 11 of them were in a wagon pulled by two horses driven by the parents of the owners of the ranch where they were vacationing. At Yellowstone, they saw “Old Faithful” and several buffalo.

In August, Barbara visited her twin sister, Peggy Dulin Crews, and her husband, Merrill, in Miami. She was pleased that Peggy was able to walk without help and to do some putting at a golf course. She still has trouble with vision in one eye.

Marrian Gates Breeden split a five-day fun visit in Richmond between her daughter Carlie’s two children and son Eddie’s four. She and her husband continue to enjoy their sailboat.

Sylvia “Sibby” Haddock Young and her husband, Paige A. Young, R, spent a week at Nags Head in a beach house in which there were six adults (including son Allan, who was in Kuwait at that time last year), three babies and two dogs. Their new boat is just large enough to accommodate the whole family. Husband Paige plans to retire in June 2007.

Karen Diedrich Gardner’s husband, Jim, continues to run the farm. She stays busy with church work and grandchildren. She writes that life on the farm is never dull, and they seem to be getting more wildlife, which they enjoy, as the town grows toward them.

I neglected to include Jean Martin Wyndham in the list of those in our class who attended our 50th high school reunion at Thomas Jefferson High School in Richmond last fall. Beverly “Bev” Wine Bowers recognized Margaret Rutherford Compton in a doctor’s waiting room in Bristol, Va., and they had a great time catching up with each other. About a year ago, Beverly moved from her big house to a townhouse, where she enjoys having no yard work and meeting new people. She enjoys retirement but stays busy substituting, volunteering at church and playing in two hand-bell choirs.

Carol Barker-Hindley retired in June after teaching art and French at the same middle school in Beaverton, Ore., for 29 years. In September she and Craig planned to take a three-and-a-half week trip to France, which will include Paris, the Loire, the Burgundy region, Nice, Arles and Avignon. Carol was unable to attend our last reunion because they already had reservations for spring break in Cancun. Their older daughter, Kristin, recently married, and she and her husband have both entered the teaching profession. Their younger daughter, Laura, graduated from the Honors College at the University of Oregon.

Betty S. Conner, who resides in Midlothian, is a policy and planning specialist with the Division of Strategy Management and Research at the Virginia Department of Social Services. In her spare time, she enjoys volunteering at UR’s Modlin Center, taking weekend trips around Virginia and traveling to the South Carolina Low Country.

Beverly Black Shelton and her husband, Dick, who just retired as a CPA, live in Plano, Texas. Recently they have visited Napa Valley, Las Vegas, San Francisco and have made a number of short side trips to places in Texas. Their daughter, Suzanne, 29, has returned to nursing school and is engaged.

er three years with L3 Titan in Germany. When Jeanie wrote, she was preparing for trips to China, Romania and Russia through her job with the Air Force leisure travel service.

A group of us got together for lunch in Richmond this summer. Joining me were Martha Poston Turner, Nancy Martin Jett, Agnes Mobley Wynne and Marcie Weinberg. Martha and Pat Turner, R'72, were preparing for an empty nest as youngest child Maribeth heads to Sweet Briar in the fall. Nancy is still working with her husband, Barry Jett, R'72, in their insurance business even though she has been "retired" for several years. Marcie and her husband, Jay, were preparing for Rachel's bar mitzvah. Agnes drove up from Portsmouth to join us. She continues to teach voice at ODU.

My invitation to classmates to join us for this lunch brought me several responses with some news. Polly Winfrey Griffin wrote that she was getting ready to move to Princeton to begin her new position as registrar.
She was the registrar at Dartmouth.

Nancy Pendall Emerson wrote from France, where she was visiting her son, Benjamin.

Margaret Binns planned to retire in September after 33 years working for the government. "Time to recreate the second half of my life with more right brain stuff," she says.
Meg Kemper wrote that she is jealous of Margaret's retirement. Meg is at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She has two children who will be at Duke this year, Susan,
a senior, and Will, a freshman.
Nancy Bass Zilli is living in Williamsburg, Va., and would love visitors. Nancy is still flying to Europe with Delta Airlines.
Patty Stringfellow Garbee vaca-tioned in Kiawah, where son Ben is working.

Donna Kingery Hudgins couldn't join us because she has been away from work so much this summer. She helped her son, Cary, recuperate from knee surgery in Charlotte, N.C. She attended a wedding in Charleston,
S.C., and she traveled to Gulfport,
Miss., to help hurricane victims.
Donna's daughter, Caroline, loved being at U of R this year, having transferred from the University of South Carolina after her freshman year.

Lynn Moncure Barber and Bill
Barber, B, love their home in Fylvania County, Va. They have two grandsons, Grayson and Holden.
Matt, his wife and the boys live in Ferncliff. Daughter Jenny works at Janet Brown Interiors in Richmond.
The whole family took a vacation to the Turks and Caicos islands, where they stayed in a private villa with their own beach and pool. Lynn sent me a Web site that had pictures of them all.

Fran White was unable to join us because she was awaiting a double lumbar fusion—ouch! Fran is interested in trying to set up an online community for our class so we can all keep in touch. Anyone interested?
Sam and I are still in our apartment. We hope to be in the new house by Thanksgiving after a three-month delay. Of course I may have lost my mind by then!

Outwitting the bad guys

Jenna Solari, ’97

The jury was out in the biggest case of Jenna Solari’s Judge Advocate General’s Corps career, the murder of a 7-week-old infant. While she waited anxiously for the verdict, the young Navy prosecutor stayed calm by focusing on one thing—a photo of the gazebo overlooking West Hampton Lake.

Solari kept the snapshot taped to her counsel table. “It was always my very favorite place to go,” she explains.

The Wilmington, Mass., native has fond memories of Richmond, of people like Dr. Scott Allison, who now chairs the psychology department. “He was a great friend,” she says, adding that Allison’s early emphasis on using the Internet put her “leaps and bounds ahead of my peers.”

Solari landed a full scholarship to the University of Georgia School of Law and graduated as valedictorian of her class in 2000. “I think that speaks volumes about the University of Richmond,” she says.

She worked briefly as a law clerk in the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Jacksonville, Fla., while the court was hearing Bush v. Gore, the case that would determine the outcome of the 2000 election. Then she enlisted in the Navy as a lieutenant and a JAG Corps prosecutor.

In January 2005, she took a civilian job as a special agent with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS, “just like the TV show,” she says), carrying a gun and working cases “on the classified side, dealing with matters of foreign intelligence.”

It was exciting, but Solari missed having agents seek her legal analysis. So she jumped at the chance to become an instructor in the legal division at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, Ga. She now teaches federal special agents, ranging from Pentagon police officers to Air Force special investigators, about topics such as Fourth Amendment, evidentiary and constitutional law, and subduing suspects as shown above.

But she has not forgotten the day she stared at the gazebo photo, waiting for the jury’s verdict. They sentenced Charles B. Swanso to life in Leavenworth for the suffocation murder of his 7-week-old daughter. It was “one of the hardest things I’ve ever done,” Solari says, “and one of the most worthwhile.”

Leading the Equality Riders

Haven Herrin, ‘05

The standoff came in Virginia Beach at Regent University, a college that prohibits homosexual conduct. Haven Herrin led the Equality Riders, young people who were protesting Regent’s “religion-based oppression.” They gathered at the edge of campus, where police officers waited for them.

Regent’s campus security chief told them they would be arrested for trespassing if they crossed a yellow police line. Herrin stepped across the tape and was escorted to a nearby police van.

Herrin’s arrest last March was part of a six-week bus tour sponsored by Soulforce, a Lynchburg, Va.-based organization that seeks “freedom for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people from religious and political oppression.” (See www.soulforce.org.) Herrin co-directed the tour, which targeted Christian colleges and military academies across the nation that discriminate against students who are openly gay. After getting arrested at Regent University (founded by Pat Robertson) and Liberty University (founded by Jerry Falwell), the Equality Riders were welcomed at most of the 19 colleges on the tour. Herrin was arrested again at the final stop, the U.S. Military Academy.

“The equality of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people is a justice issue that needs the voices, energy and creativity of young adults,” Herrin says. “I work with Soulforce precisely because they believe in the kind of activism that will get young adults involved in the gay rights movement.”

Herrin also is co-director of Right to Serve, a Soulforce campaign that challenges the military’s enlistment policy of “don’t ask, don’t tell.” In October, Richmond student Jacob Neal, ’07, organized a Right to Serve protest at a recruiting center near campus. He and Jessica Miller, ’07, attempted to enlist, but were turned down when they said they were gay. Neal also participated in the Equality Riders tour, which Herrin plans to expand to two buses in the spring.

Reunion Reminder
April 13–15, 2007

If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

After six-plus years of IT consulting, Christopher H. Engels left the corporate world (and the travel) to take a job at a private personal training studio in the Atlanta area. Chris recently became general manager and part owner in the company. Chris is still active in triathlons and planned to compete in his third Ironman triathlon in November.

Scott R. Swanson left Trading Technologies in Chicago to move to Newport Beach, Calif., where he works for Marsh & McLennan in its North American Operations Division. He is hoping to return to Ironman triathlon competitions next year.

I completed my Ph.D. and I teach as an assistant professor at Queensland University of Technology in Brisbane, Australia, and the Max Planck Institute of Economics in Jena, Germany. I still enjoy running and recently won the Australian 50K championships. I represented Australia in the World Championships in Holland, finishing third.

In Memoriam

Joel W. Harnett, R'45, died Aug. 11, 2006, at his home in Phoenix. He was a noted publisher, poet, civic leader and art collector. The University’s art museum—the Joel and Lila Harnett Museum of Art—is named in honor of him and his wife, Lila, as is the Joel and Lila Harnett Print Study Center.

Harnett began his career as a copywriter for KTSN, a radio station in El Paso, Texas. In 1950, he joined Cowles Magazines, where he became marketing director for Look. He left Look in 1956 to launch Media Horizons, a public company that would grow to own 11 radio stations and a dozen specialty magazines. During this time, Harnett became a prominent civic leader in New York City. He ran for mayor in 1977, losing the election but exposing the city’s precarious finances.

Harnett sold Media Horizons in 1988 and moved to Arizona to focus on running Phoenix Home & Garden magazine, which he and his wife created in 1979. His book of poetry, New Day Rising, was published by the Heard Museum in 2005, and his recently completed book, The Devil’s Own Politics: The Explosive Rise and Fall of the Evangelical Movement, is being readied for publication.

1974 / Alfred M. Bracy, C, of Arlington, Va., March 26, 2006. He was a West Point graduate who had a 27-year career in the Army infantry, serving in Vietnam, Germany, Japan and in various postings in the United States. He attained the rank of colonel and was awarded the Legion of Merit, a Silver Star and two Bronze Stars. After retiring from the Army, he pursued a career in real estate.

1976 / James L. Pedro, R and

Dr. Robert S. Alley, R'53, died Aug. 14, 2006. He taught religion and humanities courses at the University for 30 years, retiring in 1994 as professor of humanities emeritus.

In the 1970s, Alley was a pivotal figure in the University's struggle to reconcile Baptist affiliation with academic freedom. The debate came to a head in 1977, when Alley told a local group of atheists that Jesus "never really claimed to be God or to be related to him."

After The Richmond News Leader published the comment, Alley volunteered to move from chairman of the religion department to chairman of a new department called area studies.

Alley was widely recognized as an expert on church-state separation and the impact of television on values. He teamed up with his friend and colleague, Dr. Irby Brown, R'54, to teach a course called "Television and Film: Hollywood and the Values of Commercial Art," which included a three-week trip to Hollywood.

In January 2006, the Council for America's First Freedom presented the Virginia First Freedom Award to Alley for his lifetime commitment to religious freedom and the separation of church and state.

Faculty

Stuart L. Wheeler died Aug. 25, 2006. He taught classics and urban practice and policy courses at the University for nearly 40 years. A former chairman of the University's classics department, Wheeler joined the faculty in 1967. He was a former president of the Virginia Classical Association, and he published many scholarly articles and produced two videos, including one about the University's mummy, Tchai-Ameni-Niwer.

Wheeler protected and studied the mummy for 30 years and gave her a new home—the Ancient World Gallery in North Court. (See "Saving the Mummy" on page 18.)

Staff

Norma Blue Futch of Richmond died Sept. 24, 2006. She retired in 1993 as director of student health. She served the University in that role since 1976. She was an accomplished pianist and tennis player, and she loved being a grandmother.
By Joel Harnett, R'45

Editor's note: Joel Harnett wrote this remembrance about one year before he died. His obituary appears on page 47.

I came to Richmond College with my brother, arriving by trolley car, then walking onto the campus through dogwoods and azaleas. To this kid from Brooklyn, it was one of the most beautiful things I had ever seen.

I majored in economics and studied with Herman Thomas and George Modlin, two gracious, inspiring and learned men. But perhaps the most memorable professor was Samuel Chiles Mitchell, a curmudgeonly scholar, well along in years, who had continued teaching by necessity during the war years. Upon the assembly of our first class, he asked the students who was the greatest American who ever lived. Like a single shot, the answer volleyed back. "Robert E. Lee!" He chuckled and said the purpose of his course was to teach us his reason, not allegiance. Mitchell was a radical thinker for Richmond and for his day. He taught the idea of the 'reasoned truth.' It stayed with me.

I thought Richmond was the South, therefore warm, so I did not bring appropriate clothing. My dormitory was unheated, and I never forgot how chilled it was during that first winter. Iroomed with a young man from Fredericksburg, Va., whose dream was to join the Marines. He spent his nights testing his capacity for beer, yet was always up at the crack of dawn. "Turn the radio on!" His radio blared the Gospel tune. "Listen to your master's voice. Get in touch with God." This drove me to get in touch with my pillow and the deep warmth of the blankets, but the admonition burrowed into my consciousness. My roommate was an affable, terrific companion, a marked contrast from some of my bookish Brooklyn pals. He was an important part of my education.

The classes were small, and the teachers often were recalled from retirement to take over for younger professors who got drafted into the military. One of those world war retirees was Robert Loving, who taught physics and referred to me as "the poet." Robert Smart taught biology and introduced me to the mysteries of science.

There was always a spirit of community and tolerance at the school, a sense of respecting others, and the smallness of the school gave me a chance to flex many muscles. I didn't think I was being "educated," but I was learning to express myself and to represent something bigger than I was.

I do not know if a college can prepare a student for life. Knowledge and people change. No one can predict the twists of fate. But a college can nurture an inner resource, a way of thinking or reacting that stays with you forever. For me it was my fellow students and the many teachers who always had time to test our ideas. But perhaps more than anything else, it was the beauty of the campus itself. The lake in particular was magical. Walking around it became a resource in my life to which I retreated in memory to capture a sense of serenity.

Over the years, the University grew, nurtured by generous donors and leaders who appreciated the importance of beauty. I knew five presidents—Boatwright, Modlin, Heilman, Morrill and Cooper. I followed the school's many achievements—the presidential debate, classes abroad, the establishment of a school for leadership studies. I was proud of it all, but the proudest moment for me was the opening of the Modlin Center and its museum of art.

My wife, Lila, and I encouraged the University to deepen its involvement in the arts. During the past decade, we sponsored programs to bring great American artists to campus and to invite the entire community to meet them. The response was terrific.

I hope the school's fathers never forget the importance of beauty on the campus. The sense of serenity it fosters is an essential ingredient of education.

The University's art museum is named in honor of Joel and Lila Harnett, as is the University's print study center. To read more remembrances of the University, visit the online version of the magazine at www.magazine.richmond.edu.

The lake in particular was magical. Walking around it became a resource in my life.
Dear Richmond Alumni, Parents and Friends,

As we look forward to our graduation next May, it is hard for us to believe that four years have gone by so quickly. Our experiences here have been truly extraordinary, and we will leave this wonderful campus with many fond memories.

Everything about the University of Richmond has been shaped by the generosity of people like you. As our senior class gift committee encourages every member of the Class of 2007 to make a gift to the University this year, it is important for us to thank you for helping to make the University what it is today.

Every gift matters, regardless of the amount, and it is our privilege to introduce the following list of donors from last year. Thanks to each and every one of you for helping make the Richmond experience one we will never forget.

If you are in a class scheduled for a reunion next April 13-15, we hope to meet you here on campus. Class reunions have really become a wonderful event and we look forward to celebrating our first even before we graduate.

The University of Richmond has prospered over the last 176 years because so many of us feel a special connection to this place and its people—our classmates, the faculty and staff, and our families who often grow as attached to Richmond as we do.

On behalf of all of us at the University, but especially our fellow students, thank you again for your loyal support.

Sincerely,

Ethan McWilliams, '07
President, Richmond College Student Government Association

Lisa Warner, '07
