NEW LIBRARY WING COMPLETED

The new $1.5 million library addition funded by the 1979-80 Law School Capital Campaign opened to students and faculty use on March 17, 1981.

Taking two years to complete, the four-level addition provides over 16,000 square feet of new space. The addition includes stocking space, carrel-type seating for 65% of the total student body and additional seats for others who use the library, group study rooms for students and faculty, and audio visual space for microfilm equipment and legal research hardware.

Currently, the old library is being remodeled to provide additional office and technical space to service the library and law students. When completed, the old library will include seven new offices for library staff, six group-study rooms, and accommodations for technical services.

The law library has undergone many other encouraging changes. According to Leigh Morris, law librarian, the library has become more responsive to the needs of the students and faculty. New acquisitions, ranging from newspaper and magazine subscriptions to research materials such as indexes and law journals, has improved the quality and quantity of material available to law students.

Foremost among the new acquisitions are environmental law materials, due in large part to a recent $16,000 grant from the Virginia Environmental Endowment. According to Morris, one of the biggest improvements will occur this fall with the addition of a Lexis computer. The computer will be a full-text system and should be installed and operational by the fall semester.

Temporarily, access to the new library wing can only be made through a second floor portal. As soon as the old library renovations are completed, admittance will be made through a brand new entrance on the first floor.

The Library should have its new look completed by the time students return in the fall, with the official "unveiling" occurring Law Weekend, October 23-24.

Dean Thomas A. Edmonds

Law schools are almost always exciting and dynamic places in which to work and study, and this has certainly been the case at T. C. Williams throughout its long and distinguished history. The current year, however, has surely been one of the most exciting and productive yet for our institution, and it gives me great pleasure to report in this issue of our newsletter on some of the more significant recent developments.

Our move into the new library wing of our physical plant was completed in early March, and work is now in progress on remodeling the original library area and tying that space into the new wing. We expect to be finished with the entire project by the end of the academic year in May. The result will be a total of approximately 27,000 square feet of library space, containing for the first time adequate seating and group-study facilities for our students and suitable offices and work areas for our library staff. Moreover, there will be adequate room for orderly growth in our library collection, as well as the addition of automated legal research equipment. All of this was, of course, made possible by the capital campaign last year in which many of you participated, and we hope that all of our alumni will plan to be present for the dedication of the new wing which will take place as a part of our law weekend activities in October.

No law school can achieve real distinction without a significant annual giving campaign to provide enrichments beyond the program supported by its basic operating budget. This is an area which has received new emphasis during the current year, and we are very encouraged by the results to date. With the change in University policy enabling us to raise funds specifically for law school scholarships, as well as the commitment of increased staff time by the Development Office to the law school's annual giving effort, we have achieved both a substantial increase in the amount of money contributed and in the percentage of our alumni participating. These developments bode well for the future of the law school in all areas of endeavor, and the gifts received this year and in the next several annual giving campaigns for scholarship purposes will assist us in our continuing effort to attract and retain excellent students.

One important development potentially affecting the law school occurred this year in the halls of the Virginia General Assembly. Delegate Tom Moss of Norfolk sponsored a bill to extend the benefits of the Virginia Tuition Assistance Grant Program, currently available only to undergraduate students attending private colleges and universities, to graduate and professional students. This measure was passed by the General Assembly with a delayed effective date of July 1, 1982. Assuming that an increased appropriation can be obtained in next year's budget bill, approximately three-quarters of our students should qualify for tuition assistance grants from the state, beginning in the 1982-83 academic year. This will be of obvious importance in helping us to compete with the much less expensive publicly supported law schools in Virginia, and we are grateful to Tom Moss and our other alumni in the House and Senate who supported this expansion of the Tuition Assistance Grant Program.

House Majority Leader

Thomas W. Moss, Jr., L'56.

We are continuing to out-perform the national trends in both the admissions and placement areas. T. C. Williams received 1,075 applications for next year's entering class, an increase of 6% over last year; and 98% of our last graduating class is now placed in private practice or other law-related positions. More details are available elsewhere in this issue of the newsletter in articles prepared by our Director of Admissions and our Placement Director.

I am also pleased to announce two new faculty and staff appointments. Professor Daniel T. Murphy, who joined our full-time faculty in 1976, will be serving as half-time Associate Dean, effective July 1, 1981. Dan's administrative duties will be primarily in the academic affairs area, and he will continue to teach in the Corporations and International Law fields. In addition, Mr. Paul Zwier will be joining our full-time faculty as an Assistant Professor of Law next year, teaching Torts, Corporations, and Professional Responsibility. Paul is a graduate of Pepperdine University School of Law, and he will receive the LL.M. degree in May from Temple University School of Law.

Our student organizations continue to distinguish themselves in a variety of noteworthy ways. One of our two National Moot Court teams, consisting of Barrett E. Pope, Ralph L. Whitt and Lois A. Myers, was one of the top teams in our region and represented the school and the region in the national finals in New York in January. The Law Review is attracting lead articles and student work of increasing variety and quality, and the new editor-in-chief for next year is J. Carol Williams. Recent elections held by our student body resulted in Steven E. Farrar being elected President of the Student Bar Association for 1981.

I hope that each of you will mark your calendars now for law weekend on October 23-24, so that you can return to the school for a first-hand view of our improved physical facilities and a more complete report on the overall law school program.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Edmonds

ADMISSIONS APPLICATIONS INCREASE

Jean Morris Tarpley, Director of Admissions, recently reported an increase in applications to The T. C. Williams School of Law over last year. The Law School received 1,013 applications in 1980, from which the Admissions Committee selected one of the best credentialed first-year classes in years. This year, the Law School has received approximately 1,075 applications, and is currently in the process of choosing the next entering class.

Although the Law School still serves the Commonwealth of Virginia well, with the greater percentage of its student body being state residents, interest in our Law School is increasing annually among applicants from strong out-of-state schools. We attribute this to alumni and current students "spreading the word," as well as schools inviting us to have a representative visit and talk with their students.

Through the combined effort of Linda Arey McCann, Assistant to the Dean, and Dean Edmonds, the Law School has been building a solid recruitment program. They feel good about the relationships that have been and are being established with undergraduate institutions both in and out of Virginia.

The Newsletter is published for alumni/ae, parents and friends of the T. C. Williams School of Law by the University Development Office.

He will also be concerned with the application of the law school's academic regulations.

PLACEMENT REPORT

Mrs. Beverly D. Boone, Director of Law School Placement.

The final employment statistics have been compiled for the Class of 1980. The Placement Office found 98.3% of the 1980 class employed when it filed T. C. Williams' statistics in February with the National Association for Law Placement for its "Employment Report on Law School Graduates in the Class of 1980." Our graduates found jobs in eleven different states or foreign countries, but most decided to stay in Virginia--98 graduates, or 85% of those employed.

Private law firms were the greatest source of employment for the Class of 1980. Almost sixty percent took jobs with private firms, and over forty percent went with small firms having between two and ten attorneys. Government jobs were the next most popular with 13% of the graduates accepting employment there. Business concerns were not far behind the government with about 11% of the class represented. Judicial clerkships claimed 8%, the JAG Corps 3.5%, academia (which included those seeking advanced law degrees as well as teaching in the business law area) 2.6%, and public interest at 1.7%.

A detailed breakdown of the jobs accepted by the 1980 class follows.

Joseph E. Spruill Jr., L'58, Chairman, Law Alumni Fund.

This is THE YEAR in which every alumnus of T. C. Williams will have the opportunity to participate in the most challenging annual fund-raising program in the Law School's history.

The Law Alumni Fund, $65,000 scholarship campaign, which heretofore has been concentrated on known supporters, now is being extended to each person who calls T. C. Williams "alma mater," and gifts of all sizes are being sought. This is the final phase of the 1980-81 campaign, the one that will see success or failure for the massive effort that is underway to provide additional scholarship resources for law school students.

The Law Alumni Fund, under the leadership of Chairman Joseph E. Spruill, Jr., L'58, has made an excellent record to date and has achieved many of its goals. However, the last dollars are notoriously the hardest to get, and this year even greater efforts are being made to explain the Law School's scholarship needs and to win support for the drive.

In November, Joseph P. Massey, L'77, telethon chairman, inspired more than 30 alumni volunteers to spend two nights on campus calling loyal law school supporters across the nation to explain the Law School's scholarship needs, the $65,000 goal, and to ask for their support. And ask they did! In attempting to reach a $15,000 telethon goal, they broke a law telethon record by raising over $18,000.

On January 31, Class Agents Day, J. Waverly Pulley III, L'72, alumni chairman, reestablished a class agent program. He instructed members of 47 classes of the Law Alumni Fund's mission to encourage alumni participation through class agent letters. During the ensuing weeks, every alumnus was contacted and given the opportunity to respond to a personal letter from their class agent. Have you? The success of this phase of the campaign can only be expressed by the hundreds of alumni who have responded with over $22,000 in support of the scholarship campaign.

Once again, on March 10, Joseph P. Massey, encouraged by the November telethon, brought together alumni who volunteered their time, found babysitters, and called their fellow alumni during a mini-telethon which raised over $3,100. The unstinting efforts of these alumni volunteers have brought a new meaning to "let your fingers do the walking," by bringing the scholarship goal within reach.

Undoubtedly, every avenue of support is being sought by the Law Alumni Fund leadership team. Perhaps the most challenging and certainly one of the most encouraging phases of the campaign has been the initiation of an effort to encourage law firm scholarships. Coordinated by Charles F. Witthoefft, L'72, law firm chairman, this phase of the scholarship campaign has been actively soliciting state law firms for their consideration of annual firm scholarships. Indeed, the success and importance of this phase on the immediate availability of annual scholarship resources for law students cannot be overemphasized. To the alumni and law partners of Hunton & Williams; Gentry, Locke, Rakes & Moore; Hirschler, Fleischer, Weinberg, Cox & Allen; Davis, Davis, Raine, Davis & Welch; Mays, Valentine, Davenport & Moore; McGuire, Woods & Battle; Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent & Chappell; and Maloney and Chess, a sincere thank you. And to those firms now considering a firm scholarship proposal, the Law School hopes you will join with the above firms and assist in its efforts to attract and retain the highest quality law students.

The final months of the Law Alumni Fund calls for exceptional unity of purpose and special generosity on the part of all T. C. Williams alumni. The campaign leadership team ask each alumnus to join in a unified effort to surpass the $65,000 scholarship goal on or before June 30, 1981.

T. C. WILLIAMS AWARDED V.E.E. GRANT

The T. C. Williams School of Law recently received a $16,000 grant from the "Virginia Environmental Endowment" (V.E.E.) to expand the Law School's collection of environmental law books. The University will supplement the V.E.E. grant with $8,000 in expansion funds. Over the next year, according to Dean Thomas A. Edmonds, the environmental collection is expected to increase by more than 1,000 volumes.

Dean Edmonds said that the new acquisitions, together with current holdings, will provide the most comprehensive collection of environmental law materials locally accessible to lawyers, law firms, researchers and state agencies.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

Former Student Bar Association President Frank D. Hargrove, L'81, presents Admissions Director Jean Morris Tarpley with the first annual Distinguished Service Award.

Mrs. Jean Morris Tarpley, Admissions Director, was presented the first annual Distinguished Service Award by Frank D. Hargrove, L'81, at the Fall Banquet during Law Weekend, October 25, 1980. The award recognizes Mrs. Tarpley's outstanding contributions to the law school.

The Student Bar Association's distinguished service award was funded by an anonymous donor who approached the SBA in the spring of 1980. The donor gave $1,000 over five years to endow an award to honor annually an alumnus or staff member of the law school, who has distinguished himself/herself by service to the law school.

The Student Bar Association made a contribution to the Law School Scholarship Endowment Fund in the name of Mrs. Tarpley in addition to presenting her with a certificate commemorating her selection.

FUNDS FOR ALLEN CHAIR AT $270,000

Only approximately $30,000 remains to be raised in order to fill the George E. Allen Chair in Law, named in honor of the late George E. Allen, Sr., founder of the Richmond area law firm Allen, Allen, Allen & Allen. A campaign has been underway for some time to reach the necessary $300,000 goal. Dean Thomas A. Edmonds said recently, "We are excited about the possibility of being able to fill the chair in 1982, and have already begun to seek out the very best individual from around the country who could come to T. C. Williams and represent the legal ideals and values that Mr. Allen espoused during his lifetime."

Persons interested in contributing to this chair should make their checks payable to the University of Richmond and send them to the University's Development Office.

The NEWSLETTER invites alumni to write to the Law School advising the Alumni Office of news of interest for publication in the "Alumni News" section of the newsletter.
