THE WARREN COURT. By Archibald Cox. Cambridge: Harvard University Press. 1968. Pp. vi, 144. $4.95. Mr. Cox describes the main lines of constitutional development under the Warren Court. The central theme is embodied in his examination of the American paradox that invests the judicial branch with the responsibility of deciding "according to law" our most pressing and divisive social, economic, and political questions.

ON LAW AND JUSTICE. By Paul A. Freund. Cambridge: Harvard University Press. 1968. Pp. vi, 251. $4.95. This collection of essays by Mr. Freund is divided into three parts. The first presents an appraisal of recent movements in constitutional law, putting contemporary criticism of the Supreme Court in historical perspective. The second part undertakes an analysis of the meaning of justice and rationality in judicial decisions. In the third group of essays the author turns to the work of a number of distinguished judges—among them Chief Justice Stone and Justices Brandeis, Frankfurter, Jackson and Black—and seeks to interpret their diverse approaches to the judicial function. Throughout the book Mr. Freund is concerned with values in conflict and the possibilities of their accommodation through the resources of the legal process.

POWELL ON REAL PROPERTY—abridged edition. By Richard R. Powell and Patrick J. Rohan. Albany: Matthew Bender. 1968. Pp. xxi, 1128. $14.50. The differences between this one volume edition for students and the six volume treatise from which it has been taken are wholly dictated by the intended users. The full treatise is designed for lawyers and judges; this one volume edition is designed to aid students in acquiring perspective in those fields of study encompassed within traditional property courses. The compilers of this volume have undertaken a work that will be of assistance to students in exploring those mixtures of history and policy commonly labeled "the law of property."

ANATOMY OF THE LAW. By Lon L. Fuller. New York: Frederick A. Praeger. 1968. Pp. v, 122. $4.50. An investigation of the problems involved in creating, managing, and enforcing a legal system. The author engages in a philosophic discussion of what the law is and what it is trying to do. He traces the sources of law, concluding with a philosophic postscript on natural law and legal positivism. Professor Fuller concentrates on Anglo-American law and attempts to avoid legal jargon as much as possible.

THE LAWYERS. By Martin Mayer. New York: Harper and Row. 1967. Pp. xvii, 586. $8.95. This is a big, brilliant and ambitious book, written in popular style and covering a vast miscellany of information about laws, lawyers, law schools, and courts. The book contains many penetrating insights and many critical comments, not all of which will be appreciated by the legal profession.

TRADE MARK LAW AND PROCEDURE, second edition. By Edward C. Vandenburg III. Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill Co. 1968. Pp. xiii, 812. $27.50. This volume updates the first edition published in 1959. The aim of the book is to explain and clarify some of the confusion relating to trademarks, patents and copyrights, and to give some practical information to those who have occasional contacts with trademark problems. While not an exhaustive treatise, it should be a very useful book for law students who need to brush up on a subject of increasing commercial importance and for lawyers who need a relatively non-complicated reference book on trademark law.

BENCHMARKS. By Henry J. Friendly. Chicago: University of Chicago Press. 1968. Pp. viii, 324. $7.95. Henry J. Friendly, one of America's leading jurists, gathers together in this book articles and lectures written during seven years on the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Judge Friendly discusses the business of judging and the study and practice of law, the federal administrative agencies, and problems arising from our federal system. The final section consists of appreciations of four great justices: Holmes, Brandeis, Learned Hand, and Frankfurter.

DOLLARS, DELAY AND THE AUTOMOBILE VICTIM. The Walter E. Praeger Institute of Law. Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill Co. 1968. Pp. xvii, 486. $9.50. This book brings together twelve reports on research into the matter of how injuries caused by automobiles are compensated and how the resulting burdens on the courts might be lightened. This research, conducted over a period of some ten years pursuant to grants from the Walter Mayer Research Institute, covers both the theoretical and the practical facets of interrelated problems of highway accidents and delayed justice.

WILLISTON ON CONTRACTS, third edition, Volume 11. By Walter H. E. Jaeger. Mount Kisco, N.Y.: Baker, Voorhis and Co. 1968. Pp. xiv, 1077. $20.00. Professor Jaeger continues his work in updating Professor Williston's monumental work on Contracts. Volume 11 includes sections 1290-1453A inclusive and covers Breach of Contracts, Specific Performance, and Other Equitable Remedies.

TRIAL MANUAL FOR THE DEFENSE OF CRIMINAL CASES. Anthony G. Amsterdam, reporter, Bernard L. Segal and Martin K. Miller, associate reporters. Joint Committee on Continuing Legal Education of the American Law Institute and the American Bar Association. 2 volumes, vii, approximately 575 pages, looseleaf. 1967. $35.00. This is a very complete and very practical manual for defending criminal cases. It should be invaluable to the trial lawyer who has occasional criminal cases.

COUNSEL ON APPEAL. Association of the Bar of the City of New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co. 1968. Pp. xv, 219. $7.95. The appellate function is analyzed by seven distinguished lawyers and jurists who presented a series of lectures sponsored by the Post Admission Legal Education Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Subjects covered include the Criminal Appeal, the Civil Appeal, the Civil and Criminal Appeal Compared, Hot Bench or Cold Bench, the Federal Appeal, and Appellate Courts Compared. For the lawyer interested in appellate work this volume offers a unique chance to compare his experience with that of a panel of leading lawyers and judges.

UNIFORM LAWS ANNOTATED, UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE FORMS, volumes 4 and 5. Prepared by Ray D. Henson and William B. Davenport. St. Paul: West Publishing Co. 1968. Vol. 4 xxv 626, Vol. 5 xxiii 637. $25.00. These two volumes complete the Uniform Laws Annotated master edition of the Uniform Commercial Code. The five volume set is said to constitute the most comprehensive coverage of laws, forms, and practice guidance available on the Uniform Commercial Code.

COPYRIGHT LAW SYMPOSIUM, No. 16. American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers. New York: Columbia University Press. 1968. Pp. x, 236. $6.00.

LAW OF PARTNERSHIP. Hornbook series. Crane-Bromberg. By Alan R. Bromberg. St. Paul: West Publishing Co. 1968. Pp. xviii, 695. $12.00.

FEDERAL INCOME TAXATION. Hornbook series. By John C. Chommie. St. Paul: West Publishing Co. 1968. Pp. xxv, 754. $12.00.

LAW OF DOMESTIC RELATIONS. Hornbook series. By Homer H. Clark, Jr. St. Paul: West Publishing Co. 1968. Pp. xix, 754. $12.00.
