One-fourth of Virginia's state court judges come from one law school: the University of Richmond's T.C. Williams School of Law. Of the 313 judges now sitting, 79 are T.C. Williams products. Although the University has produced judges sitting across the nation and the law school's reputation is increasing nationally, the strong suit of its law school traditionally has been in producing Virginia lawyers, legislators and judges.

This article will take a look at just five of the judges the law school has produced. Most of them also hold undergraduate degrees from the University, but the focus here and in the list that follows is on law school alumni only. The judges profiled are representative of all of the excellent judges who went to law school at UR.

In Virginia, where the majority of the judges we surveyed reside, none are on the seven-member state Supreme Court. Two of the 10 appellate judges, however, are from T.C. Williams, as are 33 of the 122 circuit judges and 44 of the 174 district judges.

Marvin F. Cole is enjoying his seat on the Court of Appeals of Virginia, although he misses the action of the trials he presided over for nine years in the Richmond Circuit Court.

As an appeals judge, Cole hears the arguments of lawyers who point out errors made in trial court. The setting is more on "the academic side of things" than in trial court, he says. "It's a different challenge. I was on one job for a long period of time."

Part of that different challenge is the chance he now has to review criminal cases. His caseload in circuit court was almost all civil, as he was one of the three judges assigned to hear those cases.

Marvin F. Cole, R'43 and L'47

Cole says he also now has more personal time. His life is more flexible now that he's not tied to the ever-increasing case-loads of circuit court. He uses some of that spare time as he always has used spare time: working with students. "I've never turned down a request to work with them."

Cole regularly serves as a judge for the YMCA program for high school students in Richmond. He also can be found serving as judge in the trial tactics course at The T.C. Williams School of Law and as a judge for the National Moot Court trials. Furthermore, he served for two years as judge of third-year medical students at the Medical College of Virginia in their trial presentation exercises.

Cole graduated with a B.A. degree from Richmond College in 1943 and an LL.B. from T.C. Williams in 1947. He played second base on the 1943 Spider baseball team, which won both the state and Southern Conference championships, one of only two UR baseball teams ever to do that. He says he was proud to be one of Coach Mac Pitt's "boys." He also was a Dean's List student and president of a number of campus organizations. He has "hardly ever missed a football or basketball game" and attends numerous on-campus events. "UR has really been my life," he says.

That his University feels as strongly about him is reflected in the distinguished service award given him in 1984, the highest honor UR alumni can bestow.

Donald Hall Kent, R'60 and L'63, chief judge of the Circuit Court of Alexandria, Va., hears both civil and criminal cases ranging from condominium suits to divorce and custody to murder.

Since Northern Virginia was one of the first areas of the country to develop condominiums on a large scale, Kent says many of his cases involve condominium-related issues from fraud to questions of whether the developer or homeowner has to pay for common areas and parking. His longest case lasted for 30 trial days.

When he is not actually hearing cases, Kent's other judicial activities include being one of six judges who, along with UR law professor Michael J. Herbert, are writing a judges' benchbook for the state of Virginia. Such a book will "guide new judges and remind experienced judges" in "the way things should be done" in the courtroom, Kent says. At a Judicial Conference of Virginia meeting several years ago, Kent says someone walking down the hall heard both Kent and the late Williard I. Walker, judge and UR adjunct law professor, in separate committees arguing for such a book.

Kent also is collaborating on a model jury instructions book.

Donald Hall Kent, R'60 and L'63

He is chairman of the Education Committee of the Judicial Conference of Virginia and is discussion leader and faculty adviser to the National Judicial College.

Kent was only 35 when he became a judge, following a year of duty in the U.S. Army, five years as assistant commonwealth's attorney and private practice.

Kent is president of the law school alumni association, and his daughter Lisa is a Westhampton College sophomore.

E. Preston Grissom, B'57 and L'60, chief judge of the 1st District Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court in Chesapeake, Va., goes far beyond the courtroom in trying to help young people. Grissom played an instrumental role in the establishment of the Chesapeake Boys Group Home and the Centerville Group Home.

The Chesapeake home provides delinquent boys with an alternative to traditional Department of Corrections facilities. The home is located on the same site as the public school alternative education site, and the boys from the home attend school there. They also are given counseling that ties in with their families in such areas as substance abuse. Grissom says it's been one of the area's success stories.

The Centerville home for non-delinquent boys and girls is located next to Grissom's church, Centerville Baptist. The home is for children who were abused by parents and who are unable to relate to foster care.

Grissom also directed the establishment of the Court Domestic Counseling Program, the Chesapeake Court Advisory Program and the Court Service Volunteer Program.

Grissom, president of the Virginia Council of Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court Judges, thinks that the state should implement a family court system like ones in South Carolina, Rhode Island and New Jersey. Virginia's system is too fragmented, Grissom says. "It tends to retard the opportunity for people to reconcile and resolve."

E. Preston Grissom, B'57 and L'60

Questions of custody often are dealt with in District Court, while divorce proceedings are handled in circuit courts. The system would be more efficient if brought under one umbrella. The court with the help of staff people in some cases could resolve differences rather than grant divorces, Grissom believes.

"It's hard for judges to talk on this issue because someone might infer we want to feather our own nest. But the courts need to handle human beings in a more humane way." Grissom sees that humane way as including counseling and giving instructions about such questions as visitation and support and other matters involving the "most important aspects in divorce: children."

How do we solve America's high divorce rate? "The good Lord" is the answer, Grissom believes. Selfishness is always involved in divorce, Grissom also believes.

Grissom's ties to T.C. Williams are stronger than those of many alumni. For one thing, his son, Edward Grissom Jr., is completing his first year there. Grissom Sr. remembers his own first year very well. "When I matriculated for law school, my wife [the former Bettie Fentress] learned she was pregnant. I went to Dean Muse and told him I was scared." The dean assured him he could still make it through law school. Daughter Cindy was born during Grissom's criminal law exam. Grissom remembers his daughter playing around the front door of the law school. Last year Cindy Grissom Paige presented Grissom with his first grandchild, Ashlee. Grissom's sister, Rebecca G. Van-Ausdall, graduated from Westhampton in the same year Grissom graduated from T.C. Williams. She runs Country Charm near the UR campus.

William O. Bivens Jr., L'52, also is a circuit judge in Prince-ton, W.Va., for the Ninth Judicial Circuit. Bivens has been on the circuit court bench for 10 years—four years as chief judge—and has six years left on his second eight-year term.

Bivens' legal experience includes being twice elected prosecuting attorney of Mercer County and serving seven years as assistant prosecuting attorney for that county. He also for six years was city attorney for the city of Bluefield, W.Va. From 1965 to 1976 when he was elected judge, Bivens was in private practice.

A native and still resident of Bluefield, Bivens left home to serve as a combat pilot in the European Theater of War in World War II. (He retired from the U.S. Air Force Reserves in 1984 with the rank of lieutenant colonel.) After active duty, Bivens said he "was just knocking around," was in the Richmond area one day and stopped by to talk with William T. Muse, then dean of T.C. Williams.

"I liked him so much. We got along so well, I decided to enroll." Bivens had received his undergraduate degree from Concord College in Athens, W.Va., but he had been an engineering student at Virginia Tech and had gone to West Virginia University "to be a fraternity man." He said he graduated "magna cum laude" in that endeavor.

Bivens said he learned after matriculating at T.C. Williams that all West Virginians enrolling there before him had passed the bar. "That puts an onus on you," he said. Bivens passed both the Virginia and West Virginia bars after graduation.

Bivens said because of his own experience he has recommended a number of people to UR's law school: "I don't believe you could get any better legal education than you can from T.C. Williams. Now, I know there are larger libraries, but I also know that when I was there, you got personal attention from the staff and the faculty. You got to know one another."

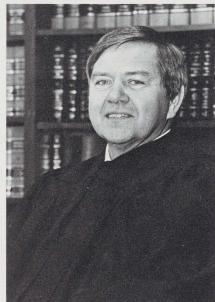

Bivens recalls those days fondly. "We attended classes in the old Confederate Hospital [the Columbia Building at the corner of Grace and Lombardy]. I remember one day on the second floor I was sitting in Prof. Barnett's class when I looked out the window and saw a tree fly by. I thought, 'that's strange,' but he [James H. Barnett Jr.] didn't even slow down." The class went on, Bivens said, oblivious to a tornado that "ripped on through town," wiping out a building nearby and "throwing a car in the middle of Byrd Lake."

As a judge of the General District Court in Virginia's 15th District in Hanover and Caroline counties, J. Peyton Farmer, R'56 and L'59, hears civil cases up to $7,000, misdemeanors, and traffic cases, as well as preliminary hearings in felony cases. His caseload runs at about 30,000. Not all of those actually are heard in court, but he has "a pretty heavy docket" nonetheless.

Farmer has been a judge since 1969 when he was appointed part-time judge, a position he kept for 11 years. Actually, "I was really a full-time judge who was allowed to practice law," Farmer says. From 1980-82 he was a juvenile and domestic relations court judge responsible for seven counties including Hanover and Caroline. "I spent more time in my car than I did on the bench," he remembers.

In 1982 the Virginia General Assembly elected him for a six-year term as general district court judge.

J. Peyton Farmer, R'56 and L'59

Farmer sees education as one of his most important judicial missions. "On the district court level, we deal with a segment of the population, many of whom are seeing the judicial system for the first time. We need to make them understand how the system works, what the processes are, to make them understand what's happening. So many of them are scared, nervous and need to be put at ease." Such misconceptions about the justice system as "a person is guilty until proven innocent" need to be dispelled, he says.

Farmer is married to the former Jean Anderson, W'58. They have four children, Dresden, 22; Anderson, 19; Valerie, 18; and Jacqueline, 15. Valerie, a freshman at the University of North Carolina, won the Virginia state women's tennis championship in 1984 and 1985.

Dr. Randy Fitzgerald, R'63 and G'64, is director of the news bureau at the University and contributing editor of UR Magazine.

JUDGES FROM T.C. WILLIAMS

The judges listed here include only alumni of The T.C. Williams School of Law. It should be noted, however, that many other judges are alumni of the University's other schools. We have made every effort to make this listing of T.C. Williams alumni complete, but we realize that there may be omissions. Please write the Editor, UR Magazine, if there has been such an error and we will publish the names in the magazine's next issue. All courts in this list are in Virginia unless otherwise noted.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Legacies for Donor, Honoree, Student and Alma Mater

By University Relations Staff

For the Westhampton College Class of 1971, establishing the Catherine Bell Scholarship was a way to pay tribute to the long-time registrar and member of the Class of 1927. For Paul Duke, R'47 and H'73, the moderator of "Washington Week in Review," heading the campaign to raise funds for the Joseph E. Nettles Scholarship for Journalism was a way to help give something back to his mentor, the long-time journalism professor, alumni director and one-man development office.

For C. Porter Vaughan, R'40, and the family and friends and former players of Coach Mac Pitt, R'18 and H'74, establishing an athletic scholarship in Pitt's name was a way to help future players long after the "silver fox" was gone. For W. Dortch Oldham, R'41 and H'74, businessman and trustee, giving $2 million for the Oldham Scholars program was a way to attract top students from around the country to his alma mater.

For James E. Andrews, the Lewis D. Andrews Memorial Scholarship in Accounting was not only a way to pay tribute to his late brother but also to help the University's accounting program.

Scholarships have a way of bringing joy to many people. For the holder, a scholarship can mean the difference in being able to go to the college of his or her choice. For the college, scholarships often mean being able to attract a better diversity of students and to attain greater academic prestige.

The givers often receive as many benefits as the scholarship holders, however. For donors and scholarship campaign leaders like Duke and Vaughan and the Class of '71, creating and contributing to scholarships give them a way of saying a longstanding and deeply felt thanks. For family members, scholarships serve as significant memorials to relatives. For businesses, scholarships are a way to be involved in community affairs and to help future employees and business leaders get prepared for the work force.

A sampling of the more than 590 scholarships at the University appears below; photographs, when available, are of the person for whom the scholarship is named. Although this list includes less than one-fifth of the number of scholarships that exist at UR, it is representative of the spirit of giving and sharing found in all those who have made scholarships possible. RF

To set up or contribute toward a scholarship at the University of Richmond, please write to H. Gerald Quigg, vice president for university relations, or D. Chris Withers, associate vice president for development, Maryland Hall, University of Richmond, Va. 23173, or call (804) 289-8654.

The Mary Russell & James H. Barnett Jr. Memorial Scholarship

Established in 1970 by alumni and friends of James H. Barnett Jr., a professor in the law school for nearly 50 years.
Donor: A memorial fund which continues to receive numerous gifts and which has been augmented through the estate of his wife, Mary Russell Barnett.
Criteria: Academic merit for a student in The T.C. Williams School of Law.

James H. Barnett Jr.

The Thomas Pinckney Bryan Jr. Memorial Scholarship

Established in 1983 in memory of Thomas Pinckney Bryan Jr., a graduate of The T.C. Williams School of Law in 1947 and prominent Richmond lawyer.
Donor: The Windsor Foundation, a private foundation in Richmond, Va. Bryan was one of the original members of its board of directors.
Criteria: For a worthy and needy student at The T.C. Williams School of Law.

Thomas Pinckney Bryan Jr., L'47

The Central Fidelity Bank Scholarship

Established in 1984 as Central Fidelity Bank's contribution to the Cornerstones for the Future campaign.
Donor: Central Fidelity Bank, headquartered in Richmond, is a corporate supporter of the University of Richmond and employs numerous University of Richmond alumni. It has close ties to the University through bank executives and directors, including University trustees and Chancellor E. Bruce Heilman.
Criteria: For a needy or worthy resident of Virginia.

The David J. Carver Jr. Scholarship
Established in 1955 by the father of David J. Carver Jr. in memory of his son who died in 1948 at the age of 32.

Donor: David J. Carver of Baltimore, Md., graduated from Richmond College in 1905, and his wife, Hally Council Carver, was a graduate of the Women's College of Richmond in 1905. Dr. Carver taught for four years in China and then entered the import business in Baltimore and traded regularly in Chinese ceramics.
Criteria: To aid Chinese students studying in the United States, with preference given to Baptists.

The Clopton Estate Scholarship

Established in 1976 by the bequest of Harvey Archer Clopton and increased in 1978 by the bequest of his wife, Sally Harbaugh Clopton.
Donor: Clopton, a private investor from Richmond, Va., was a graduate of Richmond College in 1917. He died in 1967.
Criteria: For worthy and needy undergraduate students from the Richmond area or from Virginia.

The Quincy Cole Memorial Scholarship in Piano Music

Established in 1969 through the bequest of Quincy Cole and the Windsor Foundation, which Cole founded through his will and named for his home, "Windsor," in Windsor Farms.
Donor: Cole, who attended Richmond College in the Class of 1912, also studied piano at Boston's New England Conservatory. He was one of the founders of the Richmond Symphony, a prominent musician, and vice president of Virginia Machine and Well Co.
Criteria: For a qualified student of piano.

May Alcott Thompson Evans, W'21 and H'64

The May Alcott Thompson Evans and William Ney Evans Scholarship

Established in 1978 by a gift from Mrs. May Thompson Evans.
Donor: Mrs. Evans, of Alexandria, Va., was a graduate of Westhampton College in 1921, with a master's degree from Columbia University and an honorary Doctor of Social Science degree from University of Richmond in 1964. She had an active career as teacher, administrator and information officer with government and private agencies, having organized and been the first director of the North Carolina State Employment Service. Through this gift she has memorialized her husband, William Ney Evans, a commissioner of the U.S. Court of Claims for 27 years who died in 1973.

Criteria: For a Westhampton College student in political science.

The T. Franklin Fary Scholarship

Established in 1982 by a gift from T. Franklin Fary.
Donor: Fary, a resident of Middlesex County, Va., is a retired civil servant, farmer and landowner who lived most of his life in King and Queen County and Washington, D.C., where he worked for the federal government.
Criteria: For a student exemplifying good citizenship, leadership, scholarship and sportsmanship.

William B. Fitzgerald, R'26

The William B. Fitzgerald Scholarship

Established in 1981 by a gift from William B. Fitzgerald.
Donor: Fitzgerald was a 1926 graduate of Richmond College, with additional degrees from Yale and Columbia universities. He had a distinguished career as an economist, along with positions on the editorial staff of Encyclopedia Americana, the American Foreign Service, and as economic adviser to American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co.
Criteria: For a worthy student in financial need, with preference given to a Virginia resident.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grandis

The Harry and Harriet Grandis Scholarship

Established in 1975 by a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grandis.
Donor: Mr. and Mrs. Grandis of Glen Allen, Va., have numerous business and real estate interests in the Richmond area, which have included the development of the Eastgate Mall shopping center and several apartment complexes. They are owners of a registered polled hereford breeders farm. Mrs. Grandis's father, Nathan Gumenick, is a member of the University of Richmond Board of Associates. Criteria: Preference is given to a student from the Virginia Home for Boys in Richmond.

The Garland and Agnes Taylor Gray Scholarship

The Agnes Taylor Gray Scholarship was established in 1962 by a bequest from Mrs. Garland Gray. Mr. Gray had been a regular contributor to a history fund since 1957 which, when he died, was used to establish the Garland Gray Memorial Scholarship Fund in History in 1982. The two funds were combined into one scholarship in 1983.

Donor: Garland Gray, R'21 and H'64, was a trustee for 40 years and was a state senator from the Southside area of Virginia for 29 years as well as owner of Gray Lumber Co. and president of the Bank of Waverly. His wife, Agnes Taylor Gray, graduated from Westhampton College in 1923. She died in 1962.

Criteria: For majors in history from the area which Sen. Gray served in the state Senate: Southampton County, Surry County and Sussex County. Awarded on the basis of need.

The Holdcroft Memorial Scholarship

Established in 1942 by the bequest of Samuel W. Holdcroft. Donor: Holdcroft, a native of Richmond, was an executive with Kress Stores in New York. He died in 1941, leaving a trust fund in honor of his wife, Grace Coe Holdcroft; his sister, Evelyn Holdcroft Hillsman; and his niece, Marion Evelyn Sibley.

Criteria: For a deserving student at the University of Richmond, with preference given to a young man or woman of the Leigh Street Baptist Church in Richmond.

The Josephine W. Holt Fellowship in Modern Foreign Language

Established in 1963 by the bequest of Josephine W. Holt.

Donor: Miss Holt, who served as director of modern languages in the Richmond city schools for many years, laid the groundwork for the direction of the University's foreign language curriculum. During her lifetime, she established two scholarships for students in modern foreign languages from John Marshall and Thomas Jefferson high schools, respectively. She died in 1962.

Criteria: For a major in modern foreign language, for study at the University of Richmond or abroad.

The Mary Corling McCrea Scholarship

Established in 1979 by a gift from the McCrea Foundation in memory of its benefactor, Mary Corling McCrea. Mrs. McCrea and her husband, Archibald, owned Carter's Grove in Williamsburg, Va.

Donor: The McCrea Foundation was founded by Mrs. McCrea and is now headed by the John Welsh family of Houston, Texas, descendants of Mrs. McCrea.

Criteria: For a worthy Westhampton College or Richmond College student.

The Newland Scholarship

Established in 1968 through the bequest of Wilbur A. Newland.

Donor: Newland, of Ellersong, Va., died in 1965 at the age of 44.

Criteria: For a deserving student at the University of Richmond; currently being used for University Scholars.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Dorth Oldham, R'41 and H'74

The Oldham Scholars

Established in 1983 for exceptionally able students to receive full tuition, room and board, and a stipend for summer study and travel.

Donors: Mr. and Mrs. W. Dorth Oldham of Nashville, Tenn. Oldham, a graduate of the University of Richmond and member of the Board of Trustees, is president of Dorth Oldham Investments.

Criteria: Outstanding leadership in high school and the community; character and personal motivation; superior score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test; rank in the top 10 percent of graduating class.

The E. Claiborne and Lora M. Robins Scholarship for Children of Employees of A.H. Robins Co.

Established in 1974 by a gift from Mr. and Mrs. E. Claiborne Robins, to benefit the employees of A.H. Robins Co. by offering scholarship aid to the children of employees.

Donors: Mr. Robins, a graduate of Richmond College in 1931 and a University trustee, received a pharmacy degree from the Medical College of Virginia and built the family-owned A.H. Robins Co. into a major international corporation. Mrs. Robins is active in civic affairs and, as an avid collector of gems, her donations have formed the nucleus of the Lora Robins Gallery of Design from Nature on campus.

Criteria: For children of employees of A.H. Robins Co., based on secondary school grades, class rank, scores on Scholastic Aptitude Tests and Achievement Tests, extra-curricular activities, and demonstrated financial need.

Mr. (R'31 and H'60) and Mrs. (H'73) E. Claiborne Robins

The Sturgill and Sturgill Law Scholarship

Established in 1981 by a gift from William J. Sturgill in the name of his law firm. Donor: Sturgill, a graduate of The T.C. Williams School of Law in 1963, is a lawyer in Norton, Va., and practices in a firm with his son and daughter-in-law.

Criteria: A merit achievement scholarship for students from southwest Virginia, preferably the Wise County and Dickinson County area, in The T.C. Williams School of Law.

Dr. Herman P. Thomas

The Herman P. Thomas Scholarship

Established in 1965 to honor Dr. Herman P. Thomas, a long-time professor of economics in the School of Business Administration.

Donors: Friends and alumni continue to contribute as a memorial to Dr. Thomas since his death in 1974.

Criteria: For a senior majoring in economics or business administration.

The Edward P.T. Tyndall Scholarship

Established in 1982 in memory of Edward

ADDITIONAL SELECTED SCHOLARSHIPS

P.T. Tyndall, graduate of Richmond College in 1912, by his sister, Mrs. Overton D. Dennis. Dr. Tyndall was a professor emeritus in the physics department at the University of Iowa after a 36-year career at the school.

Donor: Mrs. Dennis is the widow of Overton Dennis, past chairman of Dominion Oil Co., who was a member of the Richmond College Class of 1910 and a trustee of the University for 34 years.

Criteria: For worthy and needy students, with preference given to students from the Richmond metropolitan area majoring in the physical sciences.

The A.D. Williams Scholarships

Established in 1952 through the bequest of Adolph Dill Williams.

Donor: Williams, a Richmond philanthropist whose father founded T.C.

Williams and Co., a pioneer tobacco firm, attended Richmond College and worked in his father's firm until it was dissolved. He died in 1952. Williams and his family also supplied the funds to establish The T.C. Williams School of Law as a memorial to his father.

Costuming the Show

Theatre Students Learn by Sewing

The theatre is more than acting, more than a show on a stage. Behind the scenes are hours of rehearsal by the actors and directors, and hours of work by technical people on lighting, set design and construction, stage management, props, box office and costumes.

Students of theatre at the University of Richmond get experience in all these areas as they help prepare for University Players' productions. Each theatre course includes a laboratory requirement; in the "Introduction to Theatre" course, for example, a student must do 24 hours' work accumulated as four hours each in the box office, scene shop, costume shop, lights or sound, props, and four hours of their choice.

Ruth Countryman, instructor of theatre arts and costume designer, teaches one such course, "Introduction to Costume Design," and oversees the costume shop in the basement of the Modlin Fine Arts Center. In the costume design course, students are assigned projects in which they pick a play, do costume research and design ten costumes from the play.

In the costume shop this winter, students constructed costumes for the Players' production of "Strider," a play with music adapted from Leo Tolstoy's story about Strider, a piebald horse whose story parallels his master's.

Students who work in the costume shop may be there for credit, as volunteers, or as work-study students. This year, Countryman has three work-study students who are paid assistants.

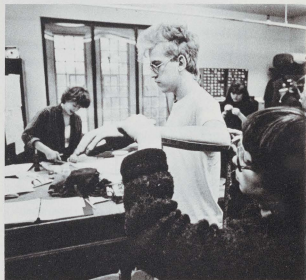

Work-study student Lisa Ficco, W'89, helps in the costume shop, runs the costume rental, and has also taken the costume design course.

"I've learned so much about costumes. Now when I go to a movie or play, I pay close attention to what the costumes say about the historical period and to whether the group might have built the costumes themselves," she says.

Each semester there are also some half-dozen volunteers—students or former students who just enjoy the costume work. One of the volunteers this year, Anne Chambless, W'85, is a former student who now works in the costume shop of Theatre Virginia in Richmond.

"Theatre technicians are really wanted by professional theatres," she says. "I think the University is doing a good job of telling students about the possibility of jobs in the theatre." DW

After getting measurements for Paul Antal, R'89, and other actors Countryman does preliminary planning, shopping for fabric and pulling costumes from storage that will work for "Strider."

UR football player Johnnie Ealey, R'87, prepares to stitch a seam.

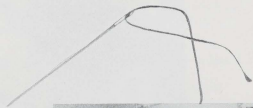

Lisa Padalino, W'89, repairs linings in actual period garments, which are used whenever possible.

Sean Keller, R'90, alters a costume from an earlier production. He is also an actor in "Strider".

Students also have many non-sewing projects, such as constructing hats.

John Countryman (right), director of "Strider" and assistant professor of theatre arts, checks progress of the costumes with Kathryn Langwell, W'88.

Countryman fits a costume on Scott Witmer, R'89, as it nears completion.

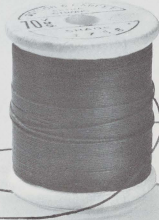

Actors rehearse in costume for the first time. They are aided by students who volunteer as dressers to help in costume changes during the show and to do laundry and maintenance for the costumes after every rehearsal and performance.

UR TO LAUNCH FIRST GREEK DRAMA FESTIVAL IN JUNE

Works of Shakespeare, one of the four greatest writers in the history of world drama, are featured annually at any number of Shakespeare festivals. Yet annual drama festivals that produce the works of the other three great dramatists—Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides—are exceedingly rare.

To address this imbalance, a group of nine faculty at the University of Richmond is launching an annual Greek Drama Festival this June with Sophocles' play Oedipus at Colonus in the Jenkins Greek Theatre on campus.

The Greek Drama Festival June 10-14 will include four performances as well as a symposium led by an internationally renowned classics scholar, who will lecture on Greek drama before the first performance and then will critique it the next day.

UR faculty participating in the festival are Dr. Homer Rudolf, associate professor of music, as managing director; Dr. Jack Welsh, professor of theatre arts, as artistic director; Dr. Dean Simpson, assistant professor of classics, as dramaturg, responsible for selecting an accurate translation; and Dr. Gene Anderson, assistant professor of music, who serves as music director, composer and arranger of music based on fragments of ancient Greek music.

Also participating are Myra Daleng, instructor of dance, as choreographer; Ruth Countryman, instructor of theatre arts, as costume designer; Reed West, assistant professor of theatre, as scenic designer; Ruth Salisbury, instructor of theatre arts, as makeup designer; and Dr. John Countryman, assistant professor of theatre, as featured actor.

The Greek Drama Festival will be a community event, according to Rudolf. It is being presented in cooperation with leaders in the Richmond Greek Orthodox Church and the Greek community, and is scheduled for the week following the annual Greek Festival. During the Greek Festival, actors will present a few scenes from the upcoming play as entertainment, and UR faculty will present the entire series of public lectures for the festival on Greek drama and the production.

"This idea has been developing for years," says Rudolf. "At UR we have the interest, the facilities, the scholarly expertise, the talent and the enthusiasm. The Greek Drama Festival interests us as faculty because it is a scholarly endeavor, and at the same time it can meet the interests of a large Greek community here in Richmond. When the festival is established, we hope it will be recognized regionally or even nationally."

The production is planned for June so that it will not interfere with the University Players' season and because it will be performed outdoors. The show will be recreated in the early fall for the UR community.

Guest lecturer at the symposium will be Dr. Gordon M. Kirkwood, the Frederic J. Whiton Professor of Classics at Cornell University. Dr. Kirkwood is author of A Study of Sophoclean Drama and A Short Guide to Classical Mythology and is a recipient of fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and other agencies.

The play, Oedipus at Colonus, is one of several Sophocles wrote about the life of the mythical Oedipus. It takes place at the end of Oedipus' life when he is old, blind and outcast, and moves him from the status of a tragic hero to the status of legend as he resolves his own feelings about his past. Written in the fifth century B.C. when the playwright was in his 90s, Oedipus at Colonus—Sophocles' last play—was not produced until after his death.

Support for the project comes from a grant from the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy; ticket sales; some University funding; and fund raising from the community. It should eventually be self-supporting, Rudolf says. DW

FIRST MINORITY STUDENT AFFAIRS DIRECTOR NAMED

The new position of assistant to the vice president of student affairs and director of minority student affairs was filled this semester by Dr. Tina Cade.

"We were looking for someone with first-rate credentials in student affairs who clearly would be able to help us attract greater numbers of minority students and also help us provide high-quality programs for both minority and majority students," says Dr. John Roush, executive assistant to the president and head of the search committee.

The need for more minority representation on campus was determined at a faculty meeting in the spring of 1985. An appointed minority recruitment committee, after researching the problem, recommended hiring an individual in the student affairs office who would be responsible for minority recruitment.

Dr. Leonard Goldberg, vice president of student affairs, says that Dr. Cade initially will have three major responsibilities. The first is the recruitment of minority students, especially from the Richmond area. Because Dr. Cade is from Richmond, she already has numerous contacts in the area's education systems, churches and social agencies, he says.

Dr. Cade's second responsibility is to the minority students already here, Dr. Goldberg says. "She can provide a strong source of support in terms of social, cultural and educational programming. . . ." he says.

Dr. Cade's third responsibility, Dr. Goldberg says, is to work as his assistant. In this job, she will deal with all students, faculty and administrators and assist with programs such as Working on Wellness.

Dr. Cade came to UR from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, where she was the assistant director of student activities and director of the masters program for social work. At Virginia Union University in Richmond, she was dean of students and the director of allied health. Dr. Cade received her bachelor's degree from the University of Cincinnati, her master's in student personnel from The Ohio State University, and her doctorate in administration from the University of Pittsburgh. SR

CONTEMPORARY ART EXPRESSION HIGHLIGHTED

"Contemporary Modes of Expression" was the theme of this year's Tucker-Boatwright Festival, March 9-31, which brought to campus noted art critic Donald Kuspit and telecommunications artist Bruce Breland.

Events during the festival included lectures by Kuspit and Breland; a panel discussion; a tri-city image/sound exchange initiated by Breland and UR students; and a performance in mixed musical idioms by pianist/actress Claudia Stevens. Two exhibitions, one of video works and one of work by Virginia and Washington, D.C., artists, were part of the festival.

"We wanted our students to experience both the diversity of what's happening in art today, as well as the blurring of distinctions between different forms of art," said Dr. Charles Johnson, UR Art Department chairman.

In his workshop at the festival, Breland led UR students in a digital art exchange that went from UR to Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Massachusetts College of Art in Boston, Mass. Breland, who explores telecommunications as an alternative form of expression, is professor of intermedia/video at Carnegie Mellon and editor of Monday Magazine. Lecturer Kuspit, an internationally known writer and critic on contemporary art, is professor of art history and philosophy at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, N.Y., and is editor of Art Criticism.

"Video Transformations," an exhibition of 33 works of video art with a running time of six hours, explored the notion that current video works not only document the performing and visual arts, they "transform" them. An exhibition of work by 32 regional artists in the Marsh Gallery, entitled "Contemporary Modes of Expression: VA/DC Artists," pointed out the diversity of work being done by artists today.

In her performance in mixed musical idioms, Claudia Stevens used piano in combination with vocal and theatrical idioms. She has achieved national acclaim for her performance of 20th-century American music and has recently turned to performance art. She teaches at the College of William and Mary.

The Tucker-Boatwright Festival, begun in 1954, brings to campus authorities in literature, music and the arts. This year's festival was sponsored by the Art Department. DW

SIX SORORITIES COLONIZE WITH 475 PLEDGES

Four hundred seventy-five women in Westhampton College and The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business are now pledges of the six national sororities which colonized at the University during rush.

Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Gamma, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Pi Beta Phi are the first sororities to colonize on campus since Westhampton College opened its doors in 1914. The University approved a sorority system last year. The colonization is one of the largest in American college history.

Some 595 women out of a total 1,297 registered to rush sororities from Feb. 7-10. Rush began with an orientation meeting in the Cannon Chapel. There the women received the rules of rush and were divided alphabetically into 12 groups.

Rushes attended two days of open-house parties where they got a chance to look over all six sororities. Then for two more days, the women went to "Get Acquainted" sessions to have half-hour interviews with representatives from each sorority.

On Tuesday, Feb. 12, sororities extended invitations for preference parties. Then on Saturday, Feb. 14, bids were extended. Each sorority had a base quota of 86 members plus seniors. NC

FIRST FEMALE ROTC COMMANDER AT UR

The University of Richmond had never had a female battalion commander in its 34-year history of ROTC until Kathi Lynch, B'87, was appointed last fall.

Lynch was appointed to her position on the basis of her academic record and her performance at an advanced camp attended at Fort Bragg between her junior and senior years. At camp, Lynch demonstrated skills that placed her in the top one percent of the 4,000 students attending from 113 universities along the East Coast. She said she had accepted the ROTC scholarship because "I saw the potential to get more involved, to develop leadership skills and make decisions."

Lynch's responsibilities include command over a cadet corps of about 250 ROTC students from the University of Richmond, Virginia Commonwealth University, Randolph Macon College, Hampden-Sydney College and Longwood College. She is the liaison between those students and Lt. Col. Frank Broome, head of that cadet corps. As the top cadet at UR, she also conducts the ROTC Leadership Lab.

Lt. Col. Broome says of Lynch, "She is top drawer in every respect. She has poise, unusual maturity and is extremely dedicated. She contributes much of her own time to the program. She will be successful at whatever she does, be it the Army or the business world."

Kathi Lynch, B'87

Lynch has asked for training in finance during her four years of active duty because she plans to go into accounting after the service. She said, "I have talked with company recruiters who have told me that I will be slightly behind coming out of the Army, but that former army officers advance faster because of their discipline and maturity."

Lynch also is involved in several other activities that complement her career goals. She is one of four elected officers of the Accounting Society. She was the business manager for Homecoming 1986 and handled a $16,000 budget for the week's activities. As a Theta Chi Little Sister, she was also captain of their intramural sports team which won last year's championship. SR

LAW NEGOTIATION TEAM IN NATIONAL COMPETITION

Two third-year students at The T.C. Williams School of Law represented the University in the 1987 national finals of the American Bar Association Law Student Division Negotiation Competition.

Malcolm P. McConnell III and Kirk T. Schroder made up UR's two-man team that participated in the competition held in New Orleans on Valentine's Day. Their performance was the first ever for the University on the national level.

Rutgers University's law school won the national championship, but the point totals for the other eleven schools were not announced, McConnell said. He said he felt that he and Schroder acquitted themselves well in the competition. "We accomplished what we set out to do" in both morning and afternoon rounds, he said.

The competition began with intra-school rounds across the nation. One team each from roughly 55-60 law schools around the country was selected to go to one of 12 regional competitions. McConnell and Schroder, the winners at T.C. Williams, went on to win in regional competition with teams from the law schools at the College of William and Mary, Washington and Lee University and the University of South Carolina. That competition was held in the law offices of Kaufman & Canoles in Norfolk, Va.

For McConnell, the competition was his second in a national championship as a UR student. As a senior at Richmond College, he had the starring role in "Hiawatha," a UR Players production that won a nomination to compete in the American Theatre Festival. The regional competition was held the next year in Gainesville, Fla., when McConnell was in his first year at T.C. Williams. McConnell received permission from the law school to perform in Florida, where the UR production took first place, and at the Kennedy Center, where UR and five other college and universities performed as co-national champions.

McConnell then continued his law school studies, and last summer he married his Minnehaha, the former Virginia E. Griffiths, W'84, who co-starred with him in the UR production, and who now is a second-year T.C. Williams student. Both McConnells are third-generation UR students.

Schroder also went to the University as an undergraduate and achieved the distinction of becoming the first UR student to earn concurrent degrees from The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business and Richmond College.

Schroder earned 150 hours for his separate degrees in philosophy and business. The normal one-major degree requires about 120. He also found time to be president of his senior class, to organize the Homecoming Action Committee, to head the Student Athletic Board and to run his own mail-order business. NC,RF

LABRECQUE URGES STREAMLINED BANK SERVICES

Thomas C. Labrecque, president and chief operating officer of The Chase Manhattan Bank, told an audience of about 310 people at the sixth annual Winter Business Forum in February that allowing banks to offer a fuller range of financial services would increase the efficiency and safety of the financial services industry, with direct benefits to consumers, businesses and government.

The event, held at the Commonwealth Club, is UR's annual forum of free private enterprise for corporate leaders. Past speakers have included Eastern Airlines' Frank Borman and Xerox's David Kearns. Speaking at this year's afternoon session was Dr. Jane H. Hopkins, assistant professor of organization development at UR's Institute for Business and Community Development. Her topic was "In Search of Leadership."

"Consumers, businesses and the entire American economy are shortchanged under the present Depression-vintage system of bank regulation," Labrecque told his audience.

Consumers, he contended, could realize substantial savings if banks were added to the locations where they could shop around for insurance. Municipal governments could sell their revenue bonds at more favorable rates. And businesses could avoid reliance on "a small coterie of underwriters" to market their commercial paper.

Labrecque concluded by urging prompt Congressional action to streamline and strengthen the financial services system.

The Chase Manhattan Bank operates in 65 countries with more than 48,000 employees. It is the principal subsidiary of the Chase Manhattan Corp. Labrecque is responsible for the operation and performance of the entire corporation. RF

RENOWNED AUTHORS SPEAK ON CAMPUS THIS SPRING

Speakers at the University this spring included a best-selling science fiction novelist, a self-proclaimed participatory journalist, a Nobel Prize-winning poet and a nun who spent seven years in Nicaragua.

Ray Bradbury, critically acclaimed author of Fahrenheit 451, The Martian Chronicles and Something Wicked This Way Comes, spoke in the Camp Theatre March 21. The event, entitled "An Evening with Ray Bradbury," was sponsored jointly by the Science Museum of Virginia and the UR English Department.

Bradbury has written scripts for "The Twilight Zone," "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" and for John Huston's film adaptation of Moby Dick. He helped to design the Spaceship Earth building at Epcot Center in Florida, and in 1986 he published the suspense novel Death Is a Lonely Business.

On April 2, the Student Speakers Board presented George Plimpton, author of Paper Lion, a book illustrating his experiences as quarterback for the Detroit Lions. His speech was entitled "Amateur Among Professionals." Speakers Board events are made possible by the Floyd D. and Elisabeth S. Gottwald Student Speakers Endowment.

Plimpton has degrees from Harvard University and Kings College at Cambridge University. In addition to playing for the Detroit Lions, he played hockey for the Boston Bruins and played in the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Czeslaw Milosz, winner of the 1980 Nobel Prize for Literature and of the 1978 Neustadt International Prize for Literature, presented "The Poet's Voice: A Reading in English and Polish" on March 16. A native of Lithuania, Milosz is a professor of Slavic languages and literatures at the University of California Berkeley. Some of his works include The Captive Mind, Bells in Winter and Unattainable Earth.

Milosz's appearance was organized by the Russian and East European Forum which is co-sponsored by Virginia Commonwealth University, the Center for Russian and East European Studies at the University of Virginia, CSX Corp. and UR.

Sister Julianne Warnshuis, who spoke on campus Feb. 4, worked at a UNICEF school for handicapped children in Nicaragua from 1976 to 1983. While there, she fell victim to regular attacks on her neighborhood in Managua.

Warnshuis says military intervention is not the solution to the turmoil in Central America, and that more than $4 billion in U.S. military aid has caused destitution and heightened national unrest. Her visit was sponsored by Amnesty International. KB

UR'S JOHN NEWMAN NOW AT HOME IN THE NBA

For four years he called the Robins Center "home." He could be found in the main arena at all hours of the day working on his jump shot and open-floor moves. He helped lead the Spiders to three consecutive post-season appearances before graduating. Then the NBA called.

The 29th pick in the 1986 NBA draft, Johnny Newman is one of five rookies on the Cleveland Cavaliers' roster. Now the Richfield Coliseum is home for UR's all-time leading scorer. A 6-7 swingman, Newman is slowly making a name for himself in the play-for-pay league of which most kids only dream.

"Johnny's been gaining confidence," says Cavs General Manager Wayne Embry. "He's learning his identity and what he can and can't do."

A four-year starter for the Spiders, Newman has been used in a reserve role as a catalyst off the bench for Coach Lenny Wilkins' squad.

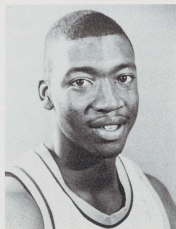

The consummate "gym rat," Newman has spent countless hours in the Ohio complex honing both his offensive and defensive skills. A forward at Richmond, Newman has seen increased playing time at the guard position.

"Switching positions was a big thing for me," Newman says. "I've really been working hard, especially on the defensive end. Trying to play good defense is getting me into games offensively."

When given the chance to perform, Newman has shown flashes of the form that Spider fans came to know and love during his four-year stint at Richmond.

"I've never had to come off the bench before," says Newman. "I just have to be patient and wait my turn. When I get the minutes, I produce. I think that's been seen all around the league."

ALUMNI NOTES

DR. AND MRS. BANKS WELCOMED BY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION BOARDS

Daniel B. Wilkins, B'66 and RBD'74, president of The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business Alumni Association; and the Honorable Donald H. Kent, L'63, president of the Law School Association.

A festive reception and dinner held Feb. 4, 1987, gave the members of the alumni boards of the University an opportunity to welcome to the campus the new president, Dr. Samuel A. Banks, and his wife, Dr. Joanne Trautmann Banks. The officers of the alumni associations of Richmond College, Westhampton College, The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business and The T.C. Williams School of Law all joined to wish the president well in his new job.

A highlight of the evening came as the alumni association presidents presented Dr. and Mrs. Banks with certificates pronouncing them honorary members of the alumni associations.

LAW STUDENTS HONORED AT THIRD-YEAR RECEPTION

On April 2, 1987, graduating third-year T.C. Williams School of Law students were honored at a special reception hosted by the Law School Association. The Third-Year Reception is an annual event designed to familiarize graduating law students with the role alumni play in the development of T.C. Williams. The Law School Association president, Judge Donald H. Kent, L'63, welcomed the soon-to-be alumni and introduced the members of the Law School Association Board. The Third-Year Reception was made possible by the contributions of Dave Jones & Associates Ltd., Appellate Printing Service and Real Title Co.

This year's Third-Year Reception featured a special event: the unveiling of a portrait of former dean Thomas A. Edmonds. Now dean of the University of Mississippi School of Law, Edmonds and his family were present at the reception. The portrait, made possible by contributions from numerous alumni, was a gift to the University from the Law School Association. It will hang in the Moot Court Room of the law school.

NEWS FROM ALUMNAE CLUBS

Middle Peninsula Alumnae Club
Barbara Reynolds Orrell '55,
President
1511 Lee Street, Box 449
West Point, Va. 23181

The fall meeting of the Middle Peninsula Alumnae Club was held on Oct. 25, 1986, in the home of Mrs. Jane Willis Foliard, W '74, in Urbanna, Va. Dr. Stephanie Micas, coordinator of the Women Involved in Living and Learning Program, reviewed the activities of the WILL leadership program. Karen Froid, student president of WILL, shared her experiences as a participant in this program.

The club's traditional salad luncheon was enjoyed by all. Members were asked to forward salad recipes to the group's president for a Middle Peninsula Westhampton Alumnae Salad Cookbook.

The spring meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Jeanice Johnson Roberts, W '43, at Ford's Colony in Williamsburg, Va.

Suffolk-Franklin Alumnae Club
Lena Thornton Small '47, President
215 Linden Avenue
Suffolk, Va. 23234

The Suffolk-Franklin Alumnae Club met on Sept. 20, 1986, at the Luke House in Suffolk for a luncheon and special program of music by the UR Schola Cantorum. The alumnae attending enjoyed a performance by the students under the direction of Dr. James Erb and learned of the University music program from Mrs. Suzanne Bunting, chairman of the department.

The president, Mrs. Lena Thornton Small, presided, and the group voted to donate $100 to Westhampton College. We will meet next in May in Smithfield and urge all area alumnae to join us.

Campus Memory From 60 Years Ago

Editor's Note: UR Magazine in the fall of 1983 sponsored a campus memories contest in which alumni/ae were invited to remember their days on campus. We published the winning entry, "End of a Homecoming Tradition," by Nancy Day Anderson, W'57, in the Spring 1984 issue. We are pleased to publish in this issue an abbreviated version of Lester E. Tharpe's entry on Dr. Samuel Chiles Mitchell, which won an honorable mention.

Tharpe, a member of the Class of '27, was an outstanding Spider runner during his UR career, serving as captain of the 1927 track team. He set South Atlantic track records in the quarter-mile, half-mile and mile — and his record in the mile was not broken for some 40 years. After graduation, he trained for the 1928 Olympics. The University recently honored his distinguished athletic record when he was named to the UR Hall of Fame in 1981.

Tharpe retired in 1979 from the Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale, Md., after a career that included administrative positions with the central branch of the YMCA and a Maryland refrigerator firm, ten years as a social worker for New York City and a stint teaching high school. He also holds a master's degree from Columbia University.

Dr. Samuel Chiles Mitchell...

Nobody Cut His Classes

By Lester E. Tharpe, R'27

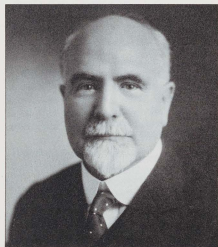

Despite Dr. Mitchell's usual sternness he had a sense of humor, both characteristics which I hope to convey in this article....

I remember one class period which I cut, evidently thinking a few laps around the track would be more beneficial than attending class. Dr. Mitchell always had a list of students he wanted to see at the end of the class. At the next class period my name was included. When my time came, he said, "Mr. Tharpe, where were you last period?"

I sort of threw out my chest and said, "Oh, Dr. Mitchell, I just took one of my cuts," as a University rule allowed three cuts a semester. He bristled; and reaching down to his desk picked up the grade and attendance book. With that little two-inch red pencil he kept sharpened at both ends, he put a big red star at the end of my name. Looking me right in the eye, he said, "Mr. Tharpe, nobody and nobody cuts Dr. Mitchell's classes." Evidently, I never did again....

In lecturing on George Washington, when he finished, he would lean over his desk, and shaking his hand in that familiar way he had, would say, "George Washington, first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen; but gentlemen, he married a widow."

Dr. Mitchell's interests were so focused on high ideals that he evidently had little interest in anything associated with athletics. I do not know that he ever saw me run [on the track team], but I do know he attended one baseball game against William &

Mary my senior year. As I came into the stadium, I remember seeing Dr. Mitchell and thinking since I had played baseball since my youth I might answer any question he might have about the finer points of the game.

There were no questions. In the ninth inning, W&M was leading 2-1. We got a man on base the last of the ninth with two out and Ashby Cook coming to bat. The students were screaming and screaming. "Hit a homer, Ashby! Knock it over the Refectory!" Dr. Mitchell sat there just as calm as if he were to begin a class lecture. Just when the pitcher was ready to throw the ball to the catcher, he learned over to me and said, "Young man, a home run at this state of the game would be of inestimable value to our institution."

He may not have known much about baseball but he knew the value of a home run in the bottom of the ninth inning.

When Mildred Campbell Broome died suddenly in November, her son Dan came from England to attend the funeral with his sisters, Barbara, Judy and many others. We extend our sympathy to them and to the family of Mildred Pulliam Stone whose death occurred last summer.

I enjoyed the October luncheon at which the athletic department honored members of former varsity field hockey teams.

While in Fluvanna County last June, I had a visit with Virginia Kent Loving and her sister at the family home, Granite Hills. They are both well and active.

Rosa Sanders Thomas and I saw a matinee at Theatre Virginia recently, and her daughter Mary Ellen took us to dinner afterwards.

Ruth Powell Tyree lost her husband John and we deeply sympathize.

Wilma "Billy" Spangler Rogers volunteers at the election board and the radio station, and works with a senior group that puts on a "take a senior to lunch" program. One of the TV stations had an interview with her about her Los Alamos experience. A WAC group has been organized in her community and she is corresponding secretary.

Julia Decker Bristow and "Monk" are well and active. Julia is no longer able to drive. Their two sons and their families visited them during the holidays.

Mildred Jones continues to live in the health care center at Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond. Her sister Mary Stevens Jones lives there in an apartment and sees Mildred daily. Rebecca "Becky" Brokenbrough, who says she is doing well, and Elizabeth Butler Arrasmith are also at Westminster-Canterbury.

Idaline "Mickey" McVeigh Ratcliffe continues in the nursing home near their home in White Stone, Va., where her husband "Rat" continues to live. He sees her daily and twice a week brings her home for the afternoon.

Martha Lipscomb Walsh and her sister manage with help in the house and garden. Martha has some difficulty walking. She drives locally and friends take her to Charlottesville and Richmond.

Estelle Myers Thornhill is well, but her cane slows her down. This winter she stayed at home rather than going to Florida.

Elizabeth "Bean" Abernathy continues to be active in her retirement residence in Louisville, Ky., but she no longer drives.

Billie Gordon Atwill says, "from my neck up and my ankles down I am in fair shape." She spends much time reading.

I have had my second eye implant and am beginning to see well enough to read. I hope to begin driving soon.

Helen Moon died Sept. 6, 1986, at Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond, after an 11-month illness following a stroke.

Helen had been paralyzed from her hips down due to polio with which she was stricken in 1932 at age 23, and confined to a wheelchair for the remainder of her life. During those years she maintained a radiance of spirit, courage to surmount all adversities, adaptability to all circumstances, an intelligent interest in local and world events and most of all, in people. She had a delightful sense of humor and attracted an ever-widening circle of friends.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Westhampton College, she taught for three years in Virginia's public schools and for 28 years at Collegiate School for Girls where she was head of the English Department. She was faculty adviser to the school's yearbook. A lifelong dream came true when in 1974 she spent two weeks in England, accompanied by her niece, her husband and a friend who knew England well.

She made her home with her sister, Mrs. George Talcott, and family in Windsor Farms. For the last two years of her life she was a resident of Westminster-Canterbury Retirement Home in her native Richmond where she continued to make new friends and keep up with her old ones. Deeply devoted to her family and church, St. James' Episcopal, Helen will always be an inspiration to those of us who knew her.

As a memorial to her, her college friends decided to make a special contribution to the Class of 1929 Scholarship Fund at Westhampton, which was established at our 50th reunion. Based on academic excellence, with need as one of the requisites, the scholarship fund, we feel, was one of the causes dearest to Helen's heart. Those who wish to contribute to this memorial may make their checks payable to Westhampton College Alumnae Association and marked "for the 1929 Scholarship Fund." The first recipient of the scholarship has graduated from Westhampton and is now in her senior year at Medical College of Va.

Katherine Broyles Kerr 69 Montagu Street, Charleston, S.C. 29401. Finally it is 1987 and our 50th Reunion. On Sept. 10, 1986, I met with Nancy Chappell Pettigrew, Jane Lawder Johnson, Blanche Bristow Williams, Marion Miller Peyronnet, Betty Allison Briel, Louise Thompson Chewning, Jean Hudson Miller, Christine Vaughan Thrope, Mina Karp Moss, Dorothy Hall Shespeard, and Elizabeth Angle for a delightful lunch at the Deanery. Jane Stockman Thorpe, W'58, and Alice Dunn, W'85, met with us as we planned the reunion weekend. You will be hearing about these plans in personal letters.

Ed and Jean Miller are now living at Westminster-Canterbury, in Richmond.

Rhoda Cornish Sparrow wrote about her last son's marriage. Nancy Pettigrew has been on a trip to Scandinavia.

My trips in '86 were a week in Miami, Fla., ten days at Virginia Beach, and a week in Savannah and St. Simon's Island, Ga.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Katherine Broyles Kerr on the death of her sister.

Since our luncheon in Richmond, Betty Briel and Elizabeth Angle have had trips to the hospital. Betty Pleasants Pitts has also been ill. We hope you are all on the mend now.

See you in May!

Class members will be sad to learn of the death of Mary Ann McGue Brockenbraugh on March 24, 1984, "after fighting cancer for over a year." We send sympathy to her husband David who sent the above message.

Lois Lyle Mercer and Howard took a Scandinavian tour in July 1986.

Martha Elliott Deichler and Eddie spent Christmas in Dallas, Texas, with son Allan and family, then had two months in Punta Gorda, Fla., returning to New York in April. Younger son Bill is employed in Pakistan with a child survival project of U.S. AID where wife Shannon is on a four-year assignment with the U.S. State Department.

Elizabeth Mitchell Driscoll and Bob enjoyed a pre-Christmas visit in Phoenix, Ariz., with son Graham, wife Peggy and three grandchildren ages 6, 4 and 18 months.

Jane Langley Boley and Lyle celebrated the arrival of a grandson born in July. His brother, 9, grew up in Japan.

On a 10-day speaking trip to California Presbyterian churches, Jessie McElroy Junkin and Bill taught mountain tribal music they learned from Taiwan aborigines. Jessie and Bill also helped Bill's sister Nettie compile Bits of China, stories of her wonderful experiences in China and Taiwan. The book was published just before she died at 81 the end of October.

Ruby (Dippy) Danner Hryharow, now known as "Dee" according to Betty Conroy van Buskirk, is a real estate broker in Beaufort, S.C.

Betty Conroy van Buskirk and Bruce enjoyed their 50th high school reunions.

Anne Scott "Scotty" Campbell Jacobs wrote that Pete was selected for the UR Athletic Hall of Fame in November. Pete's brother, Bucky, was also chosen.

Garland Wilson Brookes and Gregg spent Thanksgiving with daughter Ann and family in Sarasota, Fla., then stopped on Dataw Island, S.C., to see Will Wilson and his new wife, Cindi. Wilson manages a Weyerhaeuser door manufacturing plant there. Cindi's four-year-old son makes 10 grandchildren for Garland and Gregg!

Elsie Bradshaw Kintner's husband Burton continues his medical practice in Elkhart, Ind., while Elsie serves on a number of boards, often as a fund raiser. Still in demand, her musical programs feature Virginia folk tales handed down through several generations in her family.

Dorothy Shell Wood spent Christmas in San Antonio, Texas, with youngest son Jack and wife Pam, both of whom are physicians, and their two children.

Christine Duling Sponsler and Orville are well and enjoying Alison, 16, and Blake, 14, grandchildren who live close by. Son Bill and family came from New York for Thanksgiving.

Helene Salzman Mellor and husband Ed live in retirement near the ocean on eastern Long Island. Their three children are in Houston, Texas, where the family spent 12 years; in Portland, Ore; and in Bark River, Mich. They spent the holidays with their daughter in Michigan who has a daughter, 17, and boy and girl twins, 5. About three months each year they are at their camp in the Adirondack Mountains, N.Y.

Sally Moore Barnes Link's husband Albert died in December 1986, after a long illness. The Presbyterian church he served for 30 years will name their new administration building for him. The Rev. Link was at one time moderator of the Presbytery and in 1966 he was president of the New Orleans Federation of Churches. We send our sympathy.

Elizabeth Burch Fowlkes and Norman were not able to take their mid-winter trip this year as Norman faces possible hip replacement surgery. They visited son Lyle at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Marian Willey Ellett and Julian traveled and welcomed their fifth grandchild in August 1986.

Rosalie Oakes and sister Ann, W'43, traveled through the United Kingdom for four weeks in August.

Congratulations go to Margaret Forrer Wren and Bradford Darling of Center Harbor, N.H., who were married Sept. 29, 1986, at Myrtle Beach, S.C. The two met on an airplane trip to view Halley's Comet.

Mayme O'Flaherty Stone's family had a big holiday gathering. Her mother, Celeste Anderson O'Flaherty, W15, enjoyed seeing her fourth great-grandchild, William J. O'Flaherty. Mayme is an active organist and community worker.

Marion Nancy Petroff and husband Chris traveled to Dorset, England, to visit Chris' brother for a family reunion. Daughters Martha and Kitty joined them.

Naomi Lewis Policoff keeps busy in her print studio in Berkeley, Calif. Husband Dr. Leonard Policoff is retiring from the hospital staff but will continue consultations. Son Stephen, daughter Susan and granddaughter, Lea, 9, visited recently. Naomi and Leonard are avid bird watchers.

Martha Lillian Beam de Vos, husband Fran and family witnessed the dedication of the Francis de Vos Home Demonstration Gardens at the U. of Minnesota Arboretum in July 1986. Fran was a professor at the university and director of its arboretum from 1977 until his retirement Dec. 31, 1985.

Ed and Its Holden Slipek's son Edwin Jr. was featured on the cover of Style Magazine in Richmond. The cover story included Edwin's public relations wish for local corporations. Son Stephen Slipek's vintage car was pictured in the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Stephen works as the development director of the Maymont Foundation. Artist Its had her first gallery show in 1985. She is a volunteer in the Street Ministry at Second Presbyterian Church.

Among Florida winterers and vacationers were David and Alesie Hardaway Prince and Virginia "Woodsie" Hawkins and her family.

For several years I have been serving on the Historical Panels Committee of the Virginia Baptist Historical Society. We are working with artist Sidney E. King of Milford, Va., who has been commissioned to paint a series of scenes depicting important events in Virginia Baptist teaching at Dunlora Academy in Powhatan County, Va., a forerunner of UR.

The next time you are on the UR campus, visit the Virginia Baptist Historical Society wing at Boatwright Library to see this and numerous other panels created by Mr. King.

Class treasurer Elsie Satterwhite Elmore reports that she and class co-chairman Virginia "Woodsie" Hawkins and Tony Wirth Whitte have decided to place the class treasury balance into a scholarship fund. We hope to reach the needed goal of $10,000 by our 50th reunion. Several generous donations have already been received.

In mailing gifts to the Westhampton Alumnae Fund, designate on the check the amount reserved for the Class of '41 Scholarship Fund. Class fund-raiser Evelyn V. Cosby will be happy to hear from you. Send me your news!

Susan Payne Moundalexis and I had a chat about her conversations with Mary Lee Fountain Ward, Becky Webb Moran and Harriet Stone Anderson. Mary Lee has opened a gift shop called Light Touch. It originally specialized in lighting; they also sell Shaker benches made by her son. Becky started an interior design business last August in her hometown. Her husband is an orthopedic surgeon, her daughter graduated from college and was named teacher of the year her first year of teaching, and her son has graduated from Hampden Sydney and has a scholarship for graduate work in geophysics. Harriet is taking a hospice class and teaches remedial reading; daughter Laura is a freshman at Pfeiffer College and son Mark is at Va. Tech. They took a Christmas trip to California.

Otho and Jo Barker Campbell, on their way to Kentucky, stopped to see Delano and Margaret Rutherford Compton and had a tour of their new lumber drying plant.

Peggy Dulin Crews' husband Merrill was elected to the Orange Bowl Committee, and they hosted the U. of Oklahoma participants around town. Barbara Dulin Polis works a couple of days a week at a tennis and jazz shop.

Nancy Hopkins Phillips and her family moved to Southfield, Mich., northwest of Detroit, last summer as Bill took a new position with another life insurance company. She is teaching at Wayne State U. in the School of Education and completing a Ph.D. at the U. of Michigan. Their youngest, Linda, is in training in Philadelphia before her company sends her to London for two years. In addition, two more grandchildren arrived last year.

Bev Wine Bowers is teaching in a private school specializing in learning disabilities and works with tax preparation service during tax season; her twin girls spent last summer with campus ministries.

Marian Gates Breeden's son Eddie was married in August.

Gary Moore Coleman's son David was married last spring, and daughter Page finished at U. of Delaware. Bob's son Rob graduated from West Georgia U. in August and his older son David works out of Charlotte, N.C. They do a lot of skiing and playing tennis, and she works part-time at a ski shop.

The great benefit of this task is receiving your letters. I enjoy them immensely. Please send more news!
