Introducing
UR's Sixth President

Dr. Samuel Alston Banks, president of Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., is the unanimous choice of the UR Board of Trustees and its Presidential Selection Committee as the sixth president of the University of Richmond.

UR Rector F. Carlyle Tiller announced the election after a special meeting of the board July 28. Dr. Banks will begin his duties full time on December 1.

Following the trustee meeting, Dr. Banks and his wife, Dr. Joanne Trautmann Banks, met the University community at a special faculty-staff meeting. Immediately afterward they were also introduced at a news conference attended by media representatives from television, radio, newspapers and magazines in the Richmond area. At each meeting, Rector Tiller introduced Dr. and Mrs. Banks, who spoke briefly and then answered questions.

Dr. Banks has been president since 1975 of Dickinson, the nation's 10th oldest college, which was founded in 1773 and is one of the nation's 14 colonial colleges. Dickinson has tripled, as have the levels of annual giving and support for faculty development. Dr. Banks secured for Dickinson the largest ($1 million) challenge grant ever awarded a four-year liberal arts college in America by the National Endowment for the Humanities. The grant was given for the support of a nationally-recognized program for international education.

A native of Florida, Dr. Banks received a bachelor of arts degree in English literature from Duke University, a master of divinity degree in theology from Emory University and a Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Chicago.

Dr. Joanne Trautmann Banks is a professor of humanities and English at the Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine and Liberal Arts. She was co-editor with Nigel Nicholson of the six-volume edition of The Letters of Virginia Woolf, and she has written numerous books and articles on literature and medicine.

Mrs. Banks received her bachelor of arts degree from the University of Wisconsin-River Falls and the master of arts and Ph.D. degrees from Purdue University. RF, DW

They moved so easily among the crowd of well wishers one would have thought they were enjoying a homecoming. Putting names together with faces, shaking hands warmly, Sam and Jo Banks looked as if they just had been away from old friends for a time.

Actually, the occasion was only their second official visit as the future president and first lady of the University of Richmond.

"We do feel at home," Dr. Samuel Alston Banks said during a free moment at the faculty colloquy, one of the official opening events of the new school year. "We are already a part of the web."

Dr. Banks will not become UR's sixth president officially until December 1. He needed the time between his election July 28 and then to help Dickinson College make a smooth transition. He has led America's tenth-oldest college since 1975.

The visit to the UR campus was a homecoming of sorts for him. Some years ago he made the twisting trip down Boatwright Drive as a member of Duke University's tennis team, where he played on the Blue Devil team with the college roommate of UR professor of English, Dr. John C. Boggs Jr.

"I remembered that drive and the lake, but everything else has changed so dramatically," Dr. Banks said. When asked about the outcome of the match, he said diplomatically, "We were very fortunate."

Dr. Banks went to Duke without a scholarship because that was where he wanted to go to college, even though the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill offered him a tennis scholarship and the University of Georgia offered him a scholarship to play football. Dr. Banks still plays tennis and is a scuba diver and underwater photographer. He also can be found pacing the sidelines enthusiastically during Dickinson football games.

He earned an undergraduate degree in English at Duke and went on to Emory University for a master's in theology and to the University of Chicago for a Ph.D. in psychology. The degrees he sought and the positions he accepted later all reflect what he calls his desire to help people "make the broadest and deepest sense of their lives."

To that end, he has been a practicing psychotherapist—at one point he was the only counselor serving a 130-mile strip of Florida. He has counseled both medical doctors and seriously ill or handicapped patients. He was one of the country's pioneers in incorporating humanities into the medical school curriculum.

He is an ordained minister in the United Methodist Church and was a pastor for 10 years.

He even has used one of his hobbies, magic, to help patients talk about their fears about pain and illness and death. Tearing up a card and putting it back together might be a way of getting a child to talk about an amputated leg and the grief that it won't be made whole like the card, he said.

Dr. Banks in fact is so proficient in the art that he holds memberships in the International Brotherhood of Magicians and the Society of American Magicians. He was apprenticed at the age of eight to one of the country's leading magicians.

Dr. Banks has unusual experience in the classroom. He has served on the faculties of undergraduate, graduate, theological, medical and law schools. As much as he enjoyed teaching and counseling, however, he found himself moving toward college administration. He said he found that no matter how much he helped people as counselor and teacher, the institutions shaped them far more than he could. He became a college administrator, he said, to help "develop institutions to serve people's deepest needs."

His wife, Dr. Joanne Trautmann Banks, shares those concerns. She too is a pioneer in making the humanities a part of medical education. A literary scholar of international reputation, she is professor of humanities and English at the Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine. The Society for Health and Human Values recently gave her its annual award as the person who has done the most toward "the furtherance of human values in medical education." Her husband also is a former recipient of that award.

Even more recently Mrs. Banks was named fellow of the Institute for the Arts and Humanistic Studies at Penn State, one of only four faculty members at that university so honored this year for their national or international reputations in their fields.

Despite the enormous energy she puts into her teaching and scholarship—she is author or editor of nine books—she sees her primary role as that of wife of the president. Last year she served as hostess for over 100 events at the president's home.

"Being the wife of the president is a position of seriousness," she said, "not only in the traditional social ways" but also in helping the president in his role as spokesman for and representative of the university.

The Bankses have taught courses together, and some of their work with the handicapped helped them with their own son, Piers, a nine-year-old who is multiply handicapped. They both have enormous energy and agree that "life is a series of fascinating puzzles." Imagination, play, laughter all help them get through crisis situations, they agree.

The Bankses even share a love of magic. Each year their present to the senior class at Dickinson is a full-scale Doug Hemmings/David Copperfield type of stage magic show, complete with grand illusions. She is not his assistant but a co-magician, Dr. Banks says of his wife.

Why did Dr. Banks come to Richmond? The president-elect says: "Only once in 30 or 40 years is there an American university that is ready to do incredible things. The University of Richmond is that university. It has and is gaining the resources. It is developing strong momentum in admissions, program and reputation. I believe that it has the perspective to dream a great dream and the will to fulfill it."

APPLYING THEMSELVES

Freshmen Set Banner Year for Admissions

By Randy Fitzgerald
R'63 and G'64

Record numbers of high school students, especially those living along the Eastern seaboard from Virginia to Connecticut, consider the University of Richmond the place to go to college.

For the 711 spots in this year’s entering freshman class, the Admissions Office received 5,126 applications, the highest number ever. In the 20-member Southern Consortium, which includes some of the best colleges and universities in that area, UR ranks behind only Vanderbilt, Miami and Wake Forest in numbers of applications.

“We are simply deluged with applications,” says Thomas N. Pollard Jr., R’53, dean of admissions for Richmond and Westhampton colleges.

Why is UR such “a hot college,” as it was described in a page-one article last year in the Washington Times? Christopher J. Gruber, R’85, an assistant director of admissions, who meets with prospective students and parents constantly, thinks it’s the appeal of a “relatively small university with the offerings of a much larger university, thanks to its endowment” (about $205 million).

UR also is “a teaching university,” Gruber says, that “caters to students in many, many ways.”

Gruber had been “selling” UR long before he became a full-time member of the admissions staff. The first person he had to sell was his father, Bernard F. Gruber.

“When I was in high school [in the Philadelphia area], everyone was going to Richmond,” he said. Gruber also was considering Boston College and The Pennsylvania State University. Chris’s father, a Penn State alumnus, was urging his son to go there. After a visit to UR, however, the elder Gruber fell in love with the campus. “Now he’s the first one to sign up for Parents Weekend,” Chris Gruber says.

Gruber also worked as a student tour guide—he now is the staff person in charge of that select group of students.

Gruber and the other staff members in admissions have been aggressively marketing the University, using strategies ranging from “ice water receptions,” at which information and ice water are served to prospective students in their hometown areas, to a pioneering videotape program.

Two years ago, UR began sending out a videotape of a film about the University narrated by Earl Hamner, R’44 and the creator of “The Waltons” and “Falcon Crest.” Hamner in the film tells the audience that UR is “a place for dreams in our fast-moving, fast-talking, fast food society.” Helping to give shape to those dreams are UR faculty members, who are “teachers in the truest sense of the word,” Hamner says.

Dean Pollard believes UR was the first college in the country to send a tape directly to students’ homes rather than to guidance counselors.

Separate tapes are also now available on natural science and mathematics and computer science, music, dramatic arts, military science and classics.

The tapes are working well as a marketing tool. In 1985, 2,400 prospective students from a search list requested the tape. Of those, 18 percent applied; and of the students accepted, 48 percent enrolled. Of the 6,434 from student search who did not see the video, only 10 percent applied. Only 27 percent of those accepted enrolled.

Commenting on those figures in an article on his program in Currents, the magazine published by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, Dean Pollard said: “Find me a stock broker who can give you those kinds of figures.”

The film also is shown on campus, where an admissions counselor talks about the admissions process and about the University, after which a student tour guide takes parents and students around the campus.

Pamela W. Spence, associate director of admissions, tells her audiences what she perceives to be UR’s strengths, such as the coordinate college system that allows men and women “double leadership opportunities.” That system, where men and women have their own separate colleges complete with separate student governments, can be found only in two other American universities, Tulane and Hobart & William Smith, she tells her group.

Ms. Spence promises her group that they will know by the end of the hour session what their chances are for admission.

With admissions applications on the rise and the University’s national reputation also increasing, competition continues to get tougher for the limited number of spaces available in each freshman class. The average combined SAT scores for this year’s class is 1155. UR is listed in Peterson’s Competitive Colleges among the “roughly 17 percent of higher education institutions in the country with the most challenging admissions situations.”

The guidebook uses the following criteria: “the application-to-acceptance ratio, the percentage of freshmen who scored 600 or over on both SAT math and verbal exams, the percentage of freshmen who had a composite score of 26 or over on the ACT, the percentage of freshmen who scored over the national average on the respective tests, and the percentages coming from the top half and the top tenth of their high school class.”

Ms. Spence tells her group that the admissions staff takes a long, hard look at the student’s high school transcript. The staff also looks seriously at the SAT scores and achievement test scores. Other factors, such as the required essay, extracurricular activities, recommendations and relatives who are UR alumni, can play a role in borderline situations. But the staff looks longest at the “transcript in this hand, test data in the other,” she says.

The staff also looks for improvement trends in a transcript.
and at the courses taken—"bachelor living" does not rank very high; history and mathematics do.

Finally, the staff looks at the applicant's school. Coming from a school with a good reputation or from one whose students have done well at UR can work in the applicant's favor, Ms. Spence says. Coming from a school that has not produced many good college students can hurt, she adds.

A survey of the 711 members of UR class of 1990 (84 percent responded) revealed five National Merit Finalists, the most ever; 19 high school valedictorians or salutatorians; 18 Governors School participants; 69 religious and church group officers; 227 members of the National Honor Society; and 382 varsity letter holders.

Virginia still sends the most freshmen students (166) but Pennsylvania with 99, New Jersey with 98, Maryland with 78 and Connecticut with 62 are closing the gap.

The appeal to these students and the increasing numbers of applicants each year, according to Ms. Spence, include cost—$10,000 compared to $17,000 for some Northeastern colleges; the personal attention; and most importantly, the quality of the education. "The three best-kept secrets of quality private educations in America are Emory, Davidson and Richmond," she says.

Information Sessions for Prospective Students and Their Parents

Prospective students and their parents are invited to "ice water receptions" near their homes to learn more about educational opportunities at the University of Richmond. The sessions feature current students from the community to talk about student life, an admissions representative to discuss educational opportunities and a film about the University. Programs begin at 7:30 p.m. promptly.

For information or reservations at a session, call the Admissions Office, (804) 289-8640.

Note: The numbers represent the number of students from each state.
The following article is condensed from an address delivered by Dr. George M. Modlin in February 1986. Dr. Modlin, H’71, is chancellor of the University and will become chancellor emeritus on Dec. 1. He served from 1946 to 1971 as UR’s fourth president.

“No single house, with the possible exception of the Governor’s Mansion, has a richer or more complicated history in Richmond than Columbia.” That is Richmond architectural historian Robert W. Winthrop’s assessment of Columbia, the building that served the University of Richmond for 150 years.

Located at what is now the corner of Lombardy and Grace, Columbia was the main building of the Virginia Baptist Seminary and Richmond College from 1834 until 1855 and continued in use for 60 years after the college moved in 1914 to a new campus in the far West End of the city. In Columbia’s nearly 170 years of existence it has had only three owners: Philip Haxall, the shipping merchant and flour mill owner who built it in 1817; the University of Richmond, which purchased it from his widow in 1834; and the American Historical Foundation, which bought it in December 1984. The building now serves as headquarters for the foundation and as its military museum.

Winthrop says Columbia is the oldest building in the Fan District and is “second to the Valentine on the quality of what remains of the original interior.” The Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission considers it to be “one of the finest surviving Federal-period houses in Richmond.”
Mr. Haxall named his estate Columbia, probably after his Columbian flour mills. A delightful article on Columbia written by Mrs. Samuel Chiles Mitchell appeared in the Richmond College Messenger in April 1906. She wrote, "Mrs. Haxall was an intimate friend of Chief Justice Marshall and his wife, and they were often at Columbia. [Also] close friends of the Haxall family, and frequent visitors at Columbia, were General and Mrs. Winfield Scott." As Mr. Haxall was one of Richmond's wealthiest men, Columbia was visited by other leading families of the area.

On November 21, 1834, the Virginia Baptist Education Society purchased Columbia and 7-3/4 acres for $9,500 from Mrs. Haxall after her husband's death. When Columbia became the main building of the Virginia Baptist Seminary in 1834, only Dunlora plantation in Powhatan, the site of Dunlora Academy from 1830 to 1832, and Spring Farm, several miles north of Richmond at the end of Hermitage Road near present Bryan Park, preceded it as sites of what was to become Richmond College and eventually the University of Richmond.

In addition to the main dwelling, the Columbia property included a kitchen, greenhouse, ice house, smoke house, coal house and stable, three of which were brick buildings containing three stories. These were converted into dormitories. The basement floor of the main building was converted into a dining room, a chapel and an auxiliary room. The second floor became two large lecture rooms and a library; four rooms on the third floor served as living quarters.

In December 1834 Dr. Robert Ryland and his family moved from Spring Farm into Columbia, and the students into the dormitories. Dr. Ryland had been appointed superintendent of the Virginia Baptist Seminary in 1832. Additional land purchases in 1835 and 1836 doubled the size of the campus, which eventually consisted of the area from Broad Street to Franklin and from Ryland to Lombardy.

During the next 25 years Columbia continued as the residence of President Ryland. When war came in 1861, nearly all of the 114 students and seven faculty members entered war service.

The Civil War Period
During the war Columbia and other college buildings were used as a Confederate hospital. Several of the soldiers died there, including a brother of President Ryland's second wife, and "bloodstains were long visible on the floors." (Mrs. Mitchell)

After Richmond was taken by the Union army in April 1865, the college buildings were used as a barracks by Federal troops for eight months and were renamed "Camp Casey," after Brig. Gen. Silas Casey, U.S.A., "whose Union troops fought their way to within a few miles of the Confederate Capital." (Military Chronicle, December 1985)

When the Union soldiers left the College, "the library and apparatus were carted off, floors broken through, doors wrenched from their hinges, and general havoc wrought to the buildings and grounds." (Mrs. Mitchell). In 1902 Congress enacted legislation authorizing payment of a $25,000 damage claim that college authorities had pressed for years.

The Period 1866 - 1914
From 1866 to 1869 Columbia was the home for Dr. Ryland's successor, Dr. Tiberius Gracchus Jones. From 1869 to 1908 it was the residence of a number of faculty members and their families. These included H. H. Harris, Edmund Harrison, Bennett Puryear and Samuel Chiles Mitchell.
In 1908 the T. C. Williams School of Law occupied the building. An addition was built in 1911 to meet the law school's increasing enrollment and library needs.

Richmond College moved to its new West End campus on Aug. 1, 1914, the day World War I began in Europe. After the United States became involved, the Board of Trustees granted the request of the government that the college buildings and campus be used as a central base hospital for wounded soldiers. The entire college returned to the old campus, and the students and faculty of the law school moved back to Columbia Hall, where they remained for nearly four decades.

There were extensive improvements to Columbia in 1920, and in 1924 a gift from trustee T. C. Williams Jr. doubled the capacity of the building. The law school moved to its new building on the main campus in 1954.

From 1924 until 1974 the University's Evening School of Business Administration used Columbia for classrooms. The Institute for Business and Community Development also used the building from 1963 until 1976, the last year the University occupied Columbia. The building remained empty until 1984 except for three years between 1979 and 1982, when the University rented the property to a secretarial school.

Since 1984: The American Historical Foundation

In December 1984 UR sold Columbia to the American Historical Foundation for its headquarters and a military history museum.

The architect for the restoration of the building, Robert P. Winthrop, writes that "the first floor of the western classroom wing has become the main office area of the foundation. The first floor of the original house has been restored as reception areas and conference meeting rooms. All original materials have been retained and repaired. The upper floor has been renovated to provide professional rental space. "Since there has been no removal of original materials, the building does not have the brand new look of many restoration projects, where the ceiling and walls were removed and replaced. Where items were taken out, period wallpaper has been used to provide the detail and character which were lacking. The owners recognize that restoration is a continuing process, and that the house is just at the beginning of its return to note as a major Richmond landmark. This first phase of the restoration cost about $500,000."

The American Historical Foundation was established in 1979 and has 15,000 members in 29 countries and in every state of the union.

The present museum exhibits include one of the finest existing military knife collections, with knives from the Stone Age and the Bronze Age through World War II and up to the Space Age.

The foundation supports community programs by making Columbia available for military and other community groups.

It is fitting that the building which served as an educational facility for a century and a half continues as the home for yet another educational institution.
The man primarily responsible for bringing the American Historical Foundation to Columbia was Charles H. Ryland, whose own history is intertwined with the University of Richmond's history. Mr. Ryland, R'36, L'39, H'71, is the great-great nephew of Dr. Robert Ryland, Richmond College's first president.

Robert Ryland moved his family and the Virginia Baptist Seminary, the infant institution that would become Richmond College, from Spring Farm in Henrico County to Columbia in 1834. His nephew, Charles Hill Ryland, served for 40 years as a trustee, as treasurer and as librarian of Richmond College. Today, Ryland Hall's two sections are named in memory of Robert and Charles Ryland.

Dr. Garnett Ryland, son of Charles Ryland, was professor of chemistry at the University of Richmond from 1915 to 1945. He was the father of Charles H. Ryland, who was named for his grandfather.

Charles H. Ryland, a self-professed "country lawyer," practices out of his office in Warsaw in the Northern Neck of Virginia. Beyond his professional activities his deepest involvements include his family (wife Betsey and six children), his Baptist church, the University of Richmond and the field of history.

Mr. Ryland was a member and chairman of the Virginia State Library Board, which heightened his interest in archival work. Something of an unofficial historian, he has published numerous articles on the history of King and Queen County, the original home of the Ryland family. Long active as a Baptist layman, he served a term as president of the Baptist General Association of Virginia. He has also been a member of the Executive Committee of the Southern Baptist Convention.

When the University celebrated its 150th year, Charles H. Ryland was chairman of the Sesquicentennial Committee. Most recently he was a member of the Presidential Selection Committee in 1986.

Charles H. Ryland has continued the tradition of his forefathers by serving as a trustee for the University of Richmond from 1961 to 1986, when he was elected a trustee emeritus. During this quarter century he has been on seven trustee committees—including the executive committee—serving as chairman for three of them.

Ryland represents the fifth generation of his family to serve as a trustee. His great-great-grandfather, Josiah Ryland, was a trustee of the Virginia Baptist Seminary in 1835. The first Ryland was followed by two of his sons, one of whom was the first Richmond College president, Robert Ryland; then two of his grandsons; one of his great-grandsons; and finally Charles H. Ryland, one of his great-great-grandsons.

As a trustee emeritus Charles H. Ryland will continue to be an influential member of the board and to be its unofficial historian as he carries on an unbroken line of Ryland family leadership stretching back to the beginnings of the University. GM

Top to bottom are Robert Ryland, first president of Richmond College; Charles Hill Ryland, trustee, treasurer and librarian of Richmond College; and Garnett Ryland, professor of chemistry at the University of Richmond.
In preparation for their 50th reunion last May, members of the Westhampton Class of ’36 were asked to recall memorable experiences from their years here and tell how the college had influenced their lives. Among the responses was a classic reminiscence of Westhampton life by Virginia Kirk Lennox, W’36, which we present below.

Following her graduation with a B.S. in chemistry, Virginia Kirk has had at least two careers. She obtained a certificate in business from the Peirce Business School in Philadelphia, Pa., then worked for the Du Pont Co. for nine years and the Mayo Foundation for four years.

Beginning her second career about the time of the class’s 20th reunion, she earned a master’s in elementary education from Syracuse University in 1958. For the next 16 years she taught fourth and sixth grade classes in New York and Massachusetts, serving also as science consultant for other elementary school teachers. While in Syracuse, she met and married Paul Lennox, a self-employed businessman.

Mrs. Lennox now lives in Chestertown, Md. She has entered what may be her third career—that of managing the gift shop in the Kent and Queen Anne’s Hospital. She keeps up with Westhampton friends and has served a five-year term as Class of ’36 secretary.

I remember a chubby insecure 17-year-old arriving at Westhampton from Pennsylvania ten days after the academic year had begun, delivered by one Miss Jones into the endearing care of one Alice Pugh. Sarah Covey was one of Alice’s many friends, and these three freshmen became great buddies. How those two helped that awkward creature through social and academic trauma: home with one or the other for holidays or weekends, the loan of a brother or a friend for “Stag or Drag” dances, studying for Miss Ross’s English and Miss Wright’s French, etc.

And how they loved Miss Woodfin’s ancient history—the class and the woman. It was she who gave them the beginning of wisdom.

The next year Alice became a day student, and Margaret Bowers moved into the dorm and into the heart and life of this less-shy but still-fat Northern girl. I remember the days these two studied Dr. Ryland’s chemistry and did not study Dr. Prince’s education. Never will I forget the day the fat one brought a pail of tadpoles into the education class after a tramp around the lake, nor the absolute dead silence that greeted the offending one’s lame excuse for being late to class. Never will I forget, either, the night Margaret and the fat one...

By Virginia Kirk Lennox, W’36 climbed through one of the casement windows to sleep all night on the hockey field—just for kicks, of course, but couched in sanctimonious words about ob­serving the stars and listening to the night sounds. The two were never missed, and thus never punished, and the fun died out of the escapade.

The junior year found this now more mature girl an "upper­ classman," completely recovered from a long illness endured durding the sophomore year. When she wasn't studying or visiting, she listened to Mickey Myrick play the piano and enjoyed Mary Virginia White quoting from Winnie the Pooh. She lived in a fourth­ floor room, and friendships with Alice Turner and Lucy Blackwell and Libba Conwell blossomed into study sessions after midnight in the storage rooms at the end of the hall and snacks from home after the Tea Room closed. The girl was thinner for a while; social life improved. Betty Kelly loaned her some evening clothes, and she learned to drink demi-tasse after Wednesday night formal dinners and discuss world affairs quite sensibly with faculty members. However, she felt so well and was so protected by the gentle college doctor, she ate too much and grew fatter than ever.

Came the senior year. The fat one loved wearing the cap and gown for all kinds of occasions, for she felt the flowing robe hid her enormous flesh. A class in music appreciation led to Saturday afternoons spent in the music room listening to the Metropolitan Opera programs. Who among us can ever forget the night 13 Westhamptonites piled into one taxi for a trip into Richmond for a real-live performance of "Lohengrin"!!! Drama was exciting too.
The University Players became part of her life, and the Debating Society opened doors for stimulating encounters beyond the chemistry lab. Induction into Tau Kappa Alpha, the National Forensic Society, was one of the highlights of her college life.

And so it came about—graduation. The girl who wrote poems for "The Messenger" that were never published; who made puppets while in the hospital for "The Princess and the Page," Miss Lutz' marvelous English class; who spent one whole summer at the Philadelphia Public Library digging into Greek mythology and copying costumes for the May Day festival; who worked her way through all four years waiting tables, manning the Reading Room, doing a little tutering; this girl, who nearly didn't graduate with her class because she'd failed to sign up for extra gym after surgery that had cost her one-half a semester of classes and a whole year of gym, finally made it—Class of '36—still fat, still awkward, but older, questionably wiser, loaded with marvelous friends and useless information—a college graduate!

So here we are, 50 years older, being honored in 1986 at this, our 50th reunion. Our girl is no longer fat. She may be somewhat wiser. She is still loaded with useless information. And the friendships made those many years ago have endured and continue to endure and enrich her life, and through her, the lives of others.

Westhampton taught her many things, not the least of which being the futility of cluttering the mind with facts rather than ideas; for facts can always be found in libraries and encyclopedias (occasionally even in newspapers), whereas ideas are products of the mind. Westhamton taught her how to think, and having learned how to think, how to cope with the problems of living, It gave her opportunity by way of a direction, a certain fulfillment, a desire to pursue and take pleasure in excellence.
Above all, Westhampton gave her pride in her womanliness, and a sure hope for the boundless good that lies ahead for the women who follow, year after year, until they too, in spite of all obstacles, reach this very pinnacle—the 50th reunion.

DISTINNUISHED EDUCATORS NAMED AT CONVOCATION

On the first day of fall classes the University holds Opening Convocation, the ceremonial beginning of the new academic year. This year's Convocation on Aug. 28 in the Robins Center brought together students, faculty, staff, administrators and friends of the University to honor faculty members and to meet UR's president-elect, Dr. Samuel Alston Banks.

Students and faculty at UR are partners in a "contract," said Dr. Banks in his remarks. Students can expect a "freeing education" as their teachers pass on traditions and theories, while faculty have a right to expect "involved, enthusiastic questioning" from their students.

"This two-way stretch between sharing traditions and asking questions will give you . . . a life of orientation and a sense of where you are," Dr. Banks said.

Others who addressed the group were Amy Hall, president of the Westhampton College Government Association, and Dr. Barbara Griffin, associate professor of English.

A new era for the University was the theme of Dr. Griffin's address. Today's students have different values from those held by their teachers when they were students, she said. When students of the '80s question the ability of a liberal education to serve them in the business world, Dr. Griffin urged her fellow-educators to view the questions as a challenge and a sign of involvement rather than a threat.

The new era will also bring change because of the University's self-evaluation, she said. "Vision-making is hard work" and the "self study will guarantee that we get to the business of vision-making."

Distinguished Educator awards were presented to six faculty members. Receiving awards were Joe Ben Hoyle, associate professor of accounting in The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business, who also received the award in 1982; Dr. John W. Outland, professor of political science; Robert E. Shepherd Jr., professor in The T. C. Williams School of Law, who also received the award in 1981; Dr. Paul Stevens, assistant professor of English; Marion J. Stokes, professor of mathematics and computer sciences; and Dr. William E. Walker, associate professor of psychology.

Also recognized were the following new chair holders: Dr. William E. Walker, named to the MacEldin Trawick Chair of Psychology; Dr. Harold W. Babb, B'72, associate professor of marketing, to the F. Carlyle Tiller Chair of Business; and Dr. Robert C. Dolan, assistant professor of economics, to the Joseph A. Jennings Chair in Business.

BETTER IMAGE OF WOMEN IN TV URGED AT FORUM

About 100 members of the television communities in New York, Los Angeles and Canada gathered on campus for three days in June to discuss "The Role of Women in the Future of Commercial Television."

The national symposium hosted by the University was followed in July by a visit to Los Angeles from the program’s directors, UR professors Dr. Robert S. Alley, Dr. Irby B. Brown and Dr. Jane H. Hopkins.

Symposium participants included TV producers, directors and writers. While at UR they also took an evening to tour Williamsburg and another to attend a reception at the Governor’s Mansion. An outgrowth of that event was a visit from Gov. Gerald L. Baliles to Hollywood to seek additional films to be made in Virginia.

The opening session panel discussion on campus starred actress Susan Sullivan, who plays the role of Maggie Gioberti on "Falcon Crest"; that show’s producer, Earl Hamner, R’44 and H’74; U.S. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Col.; and Thomas F. Leahy, executive vice president, CBS Broadcast Group. The panelists responded to a speech given by Rep. Schroeder. Giving the keynote address the next day was Virginia L. Carter, senior vice president of Embassy Television.

Rep. Schroeder told the audience at Friday night’s opening session that she could identify only with "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" when she was growing up. Today’s “Cosby Show” is a “feminist’s dream,” she said, and that helps prove that television has come a long way in its treatment of women and of the family, she said. It has a long way to go, however, when one considers that “the media treated the ERA as a catfight” and that she and other women in politics are asked on such shows as “Meet the Press” to discuss only so-called “women’s issues.” Rep. Schroeder is a member of the House Armed Services Committee, yet she is not asked about “SALT II or BMX bombers.”

The participants, after two days of group discussions, adopted a number of “propositions for action” suggesting ways they could work both within the television community and without to improve the image of women portrayed on television and to give more opportunities to women in the industry both in front of the camera and in other capacities.

Suggestions included starting a "mentor" system for women beginning in the industry, the bringing about of more “multidimensional portrayals of both sexes” on television, and meetings with television executives to discuss concerns with issues related to women in the industry.

The University will sponsor a follow-up at another location to see whether the suggestions are coming to fruition. The UR symposium directors also volunteered to develop a pilot workshop program to be offered to other campuses across the country.

The program directors also called for more coverage in the media on the role of women in TV. At press time they were working on an article about the symposium to be submitted to TV Guide. RF

UNIVERSITY TO UNDERTAKE NEW SELF STUDY

The University has embarked on a self study that will encompass all areas of campus life from its mission statement and academic curriculum to management of the endowment and maintenance of buildings and grounds.

The study is required about every 10 years of all accredited colleges and universities. UR is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS).

The purpose of the study is not really so much to determine whether UR will maintain its accreditation but rather to be a "planning and self-evaluation process," according to Dr. Zeddie P. Bowen, vice president and provost. Accreditation for a college like UR probably is a foregone conclusion, according to Dr. Bowen. But the process does enable a university to assess its strengths and weaknesses, he said.

The committees will study UR’s purpose and institutional effectiveness, undergraduate and graduate programs, the faculty and administration, student and
IN MEMORIAM:
JAMES A. SARTAIN
Dr. James A. Sartain, a member of the UR faculty for 23 years, collapsed and died Sept. 26 in Boatwright Memorial Library following a long illness. He was 64.

Dr. Sartain was the Irving May Professor of Human Relations in UR's Department of Sociology. He had recently been reappointed to that endowed chair for a second six-year term.

In 1984 he was named a Distinguished Educator.

During his career at UR, he served as chairman of the Sociology Department, as Methodist campus minister and as Wesley Foundation director. He helped develop the University’s advising program and interdisciplinary studies program.

Before coming to UR in 1963, he had taught at the college level ten years, including eight years at Stetson University in DeLand, Fla.

Dr. Sartain was also a professional musician who played clarinet and saxophone in jazz bands as well as in the Louisville Symphony.

Dr. Sartain served as a consultant on the desegregation process for the Richmond Public Schools from 1966–69 and was the chief author of the “Sartain Report” in 1968.

He is survived by his wife, Sarah Mathewes Sartain; a daughter, Frances Leigh Sartain of Ocala, Fla.; and a sister, Mrs. Janice Sartain Lindley Haynes of Harrisonburg, Va. DW

IN MEMORIAM:
JOHN N. DALTON
The Hon. John N. Dalton, ’80, governor of Virginia from 1978 to 1982 and a University trustee, died of lung cancer July 30 at the age of 55.

Dalton had been a member of the UR Board of Trustees since 1982; earlier, he was a member of the Board of Associates from 1974 to 1982. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from UR in 1980.

His wife, Edwina P. “Eddy” Dalton, has been elected to fill his seat on the board. Mrs. Dalton served as co-chair for the 1983-84 Metro Richmond campaign, a segment of the Cornerstones for the Future development campaign.

To honor Dalton, the trustees have approved a $10,000 scholarship in his name at The T. C. Williams School of Law.

Dalton was a member of First Baptist Church of Radford and a watchcare member of First Baptist Church, Richmond. He was a director of CSX Corp., Ethyl Corp., Figgie International and Signet Banking Corp., among others.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Ted E. and John N. Dalton Jr.; two daughters, Dr. Katherine Dalton Mika and Mrs. Mary Helen Dalton Tyler; a sister, Mrs. Dottie Updike Gallop; a half-brother, Jesse C. Key; his mother, Mrs. Jessie T. Key; and his adoptive parents, Judge and Mrs. Ted Dalton. DW

THEATRE SEASON PROMISES VARIETY

Ranging from farce to musical revue, the University Players’ 1986–87 season will include four “very theatrical” productions, says Players’ Director Dr. Jack Welsh, professor of speech communication and theatre arts.

“All the productions this year are governed by a love of the theatre,” Welsh says. In the season’s Oct. 9–12 opener, the farce “Enter Laughing,” love of the theatre was literal: a stage-struck youth wanting to become an actor against the wishes of his parents. Adapted by Joseph Stein from Carl Reiner’s novel, the comedy was directed by Dr. John Countryman, assistant professor of speech communication and theatre arts.

The classic Japanese drama “Rashomon,” scheduled to run Nov. 20–23, will be a theatrical production in the sense that it will require elaborate costumes, wigs, oriental makeup and even choreographed stage fighting with samurai swords. Dr. Welsh will direct the play, adapted by Fay and Michael Kanin from the famous Japanese storyteller Akutagawa.

“Strider,” a musical play based on a Leo Tolstoy short story, will run Feb. 19–22. Welsh says this production will be theatrical in a different sense; it will require a bare stage and actors who “play at being horses,” as the story is told through the eyes of a piebald horse. Written by Mark Rozovsky, the play will be directed by Dr. Countryman.

The musical revue “Tomfoolery” will close out the season April 16–19. Based on satirical songs of Tom Lehrer, the show is “chock-full of irreverent humor,” says Welsh, who will direct the production. He characterizes the show as “sheer presentational theatre” because it requires only a small cast and a pianist who performs the songs.

All UR Players’ performances take place in the Camp Theatre in the Modlin Fine Arts Center. For show times and ticket information, call the theatre box office at 289-8271. DW
FALL SPEAKERS ADDRESS ART, LAW, ENVIRONMENT

A round-up of fall speakers and events on campus includes a satellite teleconference, a gallery exhibition by a leading American painter and addresses by nationally prominent speakers.

Narrative realist painter Jerome Witkin was on campus Sept. 4 for the opening of "Moral Visions," an exhibition of his paintings and drawings in the Marsh Gallery of the Modlin Fine Arts Center. Co-curated by the Marsh Gallery and the Pyramid Arts Center Inc., of Rochester, N.Y., the exhibit and Witkin's visit were sponsored by Joel Har nett, R'45.

Witkin gave an informal gallery talk about his work and later led a drawing workshop. New York poet and art critic John Yau lectured on Witkin's work and its relationship to art of the '80s. The exhibition ran Sept. 4-25 at the University before traveling to the Pyramid Arts Center for a show Oct. 24-Nov. 29. Later it will go to the Rockford Museum of Art in Illinois, Jan. 10-Feb. 22, 1987; and then to the Triton Museum of Art in Santa Clara, Calif., in June 1987.

"Religion in Jeffersonian America, 1769-1830" was the topic of the third annual Douglas Southall Freeman Symposium held Sept. 10-12. The Visiting Freeman Scholar this year was Dr. Noble E. Cunningham Jr., professor of history at the University of Missouri-Columbia, and former UR faculty member from 1953 to 1964. He lectured on "The United States in 1800: Henry Adams Revisited."

Other historians taking part in the symposium were Dr. William Lee Miller, chairman of the Department of Rhetoric and Communication Studies at the University of Virginia; Dr. James H. Smylie, Ernest Trice Thompson Professor of Church History at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond; Dr. Josephine F. Pacheco, W'41, professor of history and director of the Center for the Study of Constitutional Rights at George Mason University; and

Dr. W. Harrison Daniel, William Binford Vest Professor of History at UR.

The Freeman Symposium was sponsored by the UR Department of History with funds from the Douglas Southall Freeman Professorship in History and a grant from the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III spoke on campus Sept. 24. As one of about 65 sites in the country, the University received a telecast via satellite of the conference, which was the last event of the Forum on Biodiversity co-sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C.

Taking part on the program in Washington were the forum chairman, Dr. Michael Robinson; and several keynote speakers, including tropical ecologist Dr. Edward O. Wilson and botanist Dr. Peter H. Raven.

The forum was organized to acquaint the public with the problem of the rapid destruction of the Earth's natural habitats and to hear the views of distinguished scientists and scholars on the subject. UR's participation was coordinated by the local chapter of Sigma Xi, a national honorary society for engineers and scientists, and Dr. William S. Woolcott, D.A. Kuyk Professor of Biology at UR.

Painter Jerome Witkin on campus for the opening of his exhibition, "Moral Visions"
William D. Ruckelshaus was the keynote speaker Oct. 10 for another environmental program, a symposium on campus entitled, "The Dying Bay: Challenge and Response." Ruckelshaus was the twice head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The symposium on the Chesapeake Bay also included a workshop Oct. 11 with a panel discussion by regional environmental leaders. Sponsors included the GTE Foundation Lectureship Program, the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy, the Virginia Environmental Endowment and at UR the Robert R. Merhige Jr. Center for Environmental Studies and other University sponsors.

Also scheduled to appear on campus this fall is attorney F. Lee Bailey, who will speak Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. in the Robins Center. His visit is sponsored by the Student Speakers Board and made possible by the Floyd D. and Elisabeth S. Gottwald Student Speakers Endowment. On Nov. 3 the University Student Union will sponsor an address by a representative from the Cousteau Society. DW

SPIDERS HOST GEORGIA TECH IN CFB TOURNEY

The UR Spiders on Nov. 28-29 in the Robins Center will play host to ACC basketball powerhouse Georgia Tech, as well as Stanford and Rice in the first annual Central Fidelity Holiday Classic.

The tournament, which was first announced two years ago by UR President E. Bruce Heilman and Carroll L. Saine, G'66, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Central Fidelity Banks Inc., is expected to become one of the nation's finest.

Georgia Tech was the preseason pick last year as the nation's top team. Bobby Cremins' squad went on to a 20-win plus season and the NCAA playoffs, as did the Spiders.

The 1987 tournament Holiday Classic will include Dean Smith's North Carolina Tarheels, a team that last year was in the number one spot for most of the season. The University of South Carolina's Trojans and Boston University will round out that field.

"It is our intention to host top caliber teams from throughout the country," says UR Athletic Director Chuck Boone. "Our first two fields are indicative of what we will have in the years ahead, and the fact that we have been able to attract such teams as Georgia Tech and UNC speaks well for our program."

Coach Dick Tarrant said the tournament would serve "as a showcase for our program, our university and our city."

Tickets for the tournament may be purchased by calling (804) 289-8388 or by writing the Robins Center Ticket Office, University of Richmond, Va. 23173. TS

FOOD SERVICES RECEIVES AWARD

The Food Service Department at UR has received a Certificate of Recognition from President Reagan's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped. D. Ronald Inlow, above, UR director of food and auxiliary services, has made a policy of hiring handicapped workers since he came to the University in 1978.

UR Coach Dick Tarrant and Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins are interviewed at a press conference on campus in September.
Roderick B. Mathews, a 1966 graduate of the T.C. Williams School of Law, was voted president-elect of the Virginia State Bar during the general sessions of the Virginia State Bar 48th Annual Meeting held on June 14, 1986.

A partner with the Richmond firm of Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent & Chappell, Mathews has served as chairman of several Bar committees, has been a member of the Virginia State Bar Council since 1980 and a member of the Executive Committee since 1983.

During his years at T.C. Williams, he was a member of the McNeill Honor Society and served as president of the Student Government.

Mathews will serve as president-elect of the Virginia State Bar for one year before automatically assuming the office of president.

Alumni of The T.C. Williams School of Law will be gathering at the Hotel Jefferson, one of their earliest meeting places, on Nov. 7 for their annual Fall Gathering.

The Fall Gathering, a traditional event open to all law alumni and law students, will feature a special tribute to Dean Thomas A. Edmonds and will kick off a weekend of activities.

Other activities include golf and tennis tournaments, a pre-game brunch, an afternoon of great football as UR takes on Virginia Tech, and a post-game barbecue sponsored by the Student Bar Association. The classes of 1981, 1976, 1971, 1966, 1961, 1956, 1951, 1946 and 1941 will be celebrating reunions.

FIFTY FRESHMEN FIND THAT GOING TO

When new students arrived on campus Aug. 23, about 50 of them already had a connection to the University of Richmond: they are "chips off the old blocks," children of alumni/ae parents. The "Chips" and their parents were guests at a special luncheon at the Westhampton College Deanery Aug. 23. Nearly 150 attended.

Following is a list of some of the alumni/ae children who enrolled as freshmen this fall. Listed first is the student's name, followed by the names of parents who are alumni/ae and the student's hometown.

Westhampton College students are:

Cabel Anderson; Juan R. Anderson Jr., R'55 (deceased), and Mrs. Anderson; of Richmond;

Deborah Bourne; Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Bourne; of Richmond;

Kimberly Bunch; Richard E. Bunch, R'62, and Mrs. Bunch; of Short Hills, N.J.;

Teresa Comunale; Edwin E. Comunale, R'51, and Mrs. Comunale; of Fort Salonga, N.Y.;

Jennifer Jenkins; Dr. Jerry L., R'64, and Aleta Goodwyn, W'63, Jenkins; of Midlothian, Va.;

Ellen Johnson; David W., R'64, and Martha Hartman, W'64, Johnson; of Moorestown, N.J.;

Lori Jones; Larry M. Jones, L'64, and Mrs. Jones; of Lawrenceville, Va.;

Robbin Kohler; M. Tyler Kohler, R'49, and Mrs. Kohler; of Garrison, Md.;

Margaret Lowe; Frederick B., L'66, and Nancy Loughridge, W'64, Lowe; of Virginia Beach, Va.;

Andrea Marshall; William R. Marshall Jr., L'65, and Mrs. Marshall; of Richmond;

Lisa Neurohr; John P. Neurohr Jr., U'73, and Mrs. Neurohr; of Mechanicsville, Va.;

Deane Potter; Betty Williams Potter, W'53, and Mr. Potter; of Virginia Beach, Va.;

Mary Ranson; Emma Bibb Ranson, W'64, and Mr. Ranson; of Fork Union, Va.;

Rebecca Riddle; Benjamin A. Riddle Jr., R'59, and Mrs. Riddle of Hampton, Va.;

Donna Rossetti; Joseph P. Rossetti, R'60, and Mrs. Rossetti; of Emmaus, Pa.;

Greg Wright IV, center, with his father, Greg Wright III, R'69, and grandfather, Greg Wright Jr., R'41.

LAWYERS GROUP NAMES EMROCH FELLOW

Emanuel Emroch, R'28 and L'31, has become a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, by invitation of the organization's Board of Regents.

The American College of Trial Lawyers is a national association of 4,200 Fellows in the United States and Canada. Its purpose is to improve the standards of trial practice and the ethics of the trial branch of the legal profession.

A prominent Richmond trial attorney, Emroch is also a charter member and first president of the Virginia Chapter of the American Board of Trial Advocates, established in 1985.

Emroch is a partner in the firm of Emroch & Williamson in Richmond. The Emanuel Emroch Lecture Series was created at the T.C. Williams School of Law in 1984 with a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Emroch, their son, Walter, and friends.

FRESHMEN GET ACQUAINTED

Incoming freshmen got a chance to meet each other prior to arriving at UR at "Get-Acquainted" parties sponsored by some alumni/ae chapters.

David, R'68, and Linda Steger and Ken, B'77 and L'83, and Jean Baskerville, B'77, Alcott co-hosted a cook-out for Atlanta freshmen and upperclassmen at the Stegers' home on Aug. 12. John, R'81, and Susan Clarke, W'81, Nagy and Jack, R'44, and Kathy Mumma, W'45, Atkinson co-hosted a picnic Aug. 17 for Philadelphia freshmen and their parents at Valley Forge National Park. Gerri Daly, W'78, and Julia McNeal, W'82, co-hosted a reception for Baltimore freshmen Aug. 20 at the home of Julia's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. McNeal.

Westhampton College Alumnae Clubs hosted events for freshmen in their areas. In Richmond, Cindy Creasy, W'75, was in charge of a dinner held in the Deanery for the Richmond area freshmen. Terese Pollak was pleased about a major retrospective exhibition of her work by the Anderson Gallery of VCU which opened Sept. 7, 1986, and lasted through Oct. 5, 1986. Included was a special oil painting of hers, "The River," as well as 44 drawings executed on her European trip in 1962.

Gladys Lumsden McCutcheon has a visit from her daughter who lives in Georgia and who is interested in a Virginia college for her daughter.

Mary Hart Willis Humfrey has special contacts with 135 people who call her "Aunt," as well as mental stimulation from crossword puzzles.

Mary Blackwell Hunnald is the unseen force in helping her daughter attain her Ph.D. at the Bowman-Gray Medical School of Wake Forest U.

May Thompson Evans has established a second scholarship in the UR Department of Political Science for a Westhampton senior majoring in political science.

Virginia E. Lane's vision has been restored following the onset of hemorrhage and large obstructive clots. This blessing together with good walking companions, programs in Bible study, choir practice, exercise classes, plus council and administrative meetings leave little time for worry.

Elizabeth Elsea is still kicking and that is what counts at this time. A high jump contest is just what we need!!

Cammie Robinson Hess—world traveler, “movie star” when her picturesque yard invites, great companion when asked to attend other events, plus council and administrative meetings leave little time for worry.

A letter from Pearl Powell Prillaman with clippings from the Roanoke paper brought news of Mildred Pope Anderson's death. We send our sympathy to her husband, Ernest.

Elizabeth Hale seems well and appreciates all of the many things that are done for the residents at the Culpeper Baptist Home.

Agnes Peters Nolan and her husband recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. She has held offices in a number of organizations.

Ruth Haverty writes that she is well and with the help of a cousin she has finished a book about her mother's genealogy. She stays busy with church and club activities.

We send our sympathy to Garland January Conn whose son died after suffering a heart attack while on a scuba diving trip in the Caribbean.

Helen Moon continues to be in very serious condition in the Health Care Unit at Westminster-Canterbury since suffering a stroke last October.

Genie Riddick Steck and husband Fred are planning to move in the fall to a retirement home in Raleigh. They went in June to Ohio to see their daughter receive her Ph.D. in English and her son graduate from college.

Nancy Reynolds Smith is making plans to come to Westminster-Canterbury. She has sold her house in Charlottesville and is renting an apartment there until one is available here.

Thelma Pruden Stanton and husband Fred have moved from Florida to Garden City, S.C. Unfortunately, "Prudy" had a fall and broke her hip during the move.

We are indebted to Virginia Perkins Yeaman for getting out the letters for the alumnae fund each year. Let's show our appreciation by sending in our contributions if we haven't already done it.

Please continue to send me news!
Class members joined in sending sympathy to Dorothy Shell Wood in her recent loss. Her three children and five grandchildren are a great help.

Elizabeth Burch Fowlkes had visits from daughter Ann and two grandchildren ages 13 and 15 and from son Lee's family of four, ages 4-13, during the summer. Husband Norman is making progress, though still on medication following heart surgery.

Elizabeth Edsbrooke Jackson's daughter from California visited her with the children two weeks during the summer.

Garland Wilson Brookes hosted a spontaneous gathering of nearby '39ers and spouses to see Martha and Eddie Deichler who are on their southern tour in January. All four children have moved residences during the year. Mary and family lived with Garland and Greg while their new house was under construction. Betty and family moved to Richmond from Wisconsin. Son Wilson is in Virginia Beach.

Martha Elliott Deichler wrote, "We took a ten-week trip to the southeast and three weeks in Hawaii. Our children are scattered—Philadelphia, Dallas and Pakistan! Now to settle down—craft teacher for Tully Vacation Bible School and four-year-old library Story Lady in the fall, plus choir."

Charlotte Anne Beale is keeping up her church and community volunteer duties.

Nancy Gatewood Whitworth finds that dressing women from her dress shop, "Nancy's," in Wexford Village is not as satisfying as teaching students. She thinks often of returning to Virginia from Hilton Head, S.C.

Hermine Hoen Philips and husband Bill enjoyed a trip to Richmond in May for her 50th Thomas Jefferson High School reunion. Visits to relatives and former neighbors took them from Virginia Beach to Staunton and from Baltimore to Mt. Airy, N.C., via the Blue Ridge Parkway. Hermine and Bill are active in their Episcopal church where Hermine is the newly elected president of the women's organization.

Jane Langley Boley and husband Lyle are happily settled in Virginia Beach. Jane's sister and brother and both Boley children with two grandchildren all live within one mile.

Cally Ross Wiggins and Bruce continue to enjoy living in their over 200-year-old stone farmhouse in Augusta County. Last fall they had a visit with Lavinia (Viv) Winston and Jimmy Edmunds in Halifax.

Ruth House,Kinson's younger daughter had a girl on January 30 of this year. She lives in New Jersey and the elder daughter is in Atlanta.

Evelyn Hazard Angus and Ken spent January and February at Marco Island, Fla. En route home they stopped in Mon-treat to see Jessie and Bill Junkin. In May, Evelyn and Ken welcomed their 11th grandchild.

Christian Duling Sponsler and Orville are enjoying a new screened-in porch at their house.

Juliet Floance is recovering steadily from heart bypass surgery following a heart attack in January. Family, neighbors and friends are caring for her.

Anne Epes Regeister continues to enjoy gardening.

Rosalie Oakes visited one of her god-daughters in the Denver area and friends in Claremont and Pomona, Calif., in July. August was spent in the United Kingdom with sister Ann, W'43.

An overwhelming success, our reunion drew 48 in attendance, thanks to class president Its Holden Silpek and reunion committee members who met and planned events months ahead.

The Friday night class dinner celebration in Keller Hall included the following:

Its Holden Silpek decorated recipe boxes as favors. She enlisted help from husband Ed, son Stephen and daughter Betty Tabb Pruitt who typed and assembled recipes which had been gathered by Teeny Garrett Wimmer and Marion Yancey Petroff. Assisting with decorating tables and greeting guests were Lib Henry Belcher, Alese Hardaway Prince, Bitsy Epes Hardy and Anne Addison Bowling.

Jean Naesmith Dickinson and Margaret Purcell Spindler arranged display tables with samples of various class hobbies and careers. Among those who sent displays were Naomi Lewis Policoff, etchings and monoprints; Its Holden Silpek, oil paintings; Helen Martin Laughon, articles in Antiques and other magazines on silhouettes; and Ann Courtney Woodward, class scrapbook. Mary Owen Bass and Dottie Hewes McGlincy arranged for class biography booklets.

Marion Rawis Waymack read a class prophecy. A. L. and Kitty Spencer Phillips were among those who reminisced about college dating difficulties. Harold and Virginia Omohundro Purcell recited an original poem about our class.

The next morning's breakfast meeting was held at the home of Mac and Toni With Whittet. Mayme O'Flaherty Stone and Dorothy Harshbarger gave tributes to deceased class members: Bernice Stephens Hegarty, Edith Burfoot Lovig, Jane Trevett Clark and Mildred Howerton Jones. Our class secretary, Helen Dodd Driscoll, died shortly after the reunion. Our sympathy went out also to those who had lost a spouse: Margaret Purcell Spindler, Charlotte Patteson Dudley, Anne Addison Bowling, Lib Henry Belcher, Virginia Wood Hawkins, Betty Keesee Rhodes and Margaret Forrer Wren. Congratulations go to Margaret Brittingham and Lawrence Lovig Jr. on their recent marriage.

The class officers for 1986-1991 are: co-presidents, Virginia Wood Hawkins and Toni With Whittet; secretary, Betty Woodson Weaver; treasurer, Elsie Satterwhite Elmore; and fund chairman, Evelyn Cosby.
John and Lowvita Rowland Hanscom are enjoying their townhouse on the waterfront in Charleston, S.C. Their children, grandchildren and two great-grandchildren all live out West.

Ann Chambliss Surber's son George was married last August in Memphis, where his wife works for UPS and he for UNARCO. Ann and daughter Ellen, a veterinarian in Atlanta, went to Hawaii for ten days. Ann and a friend took a five-day mystery tour (each day's trip a surprise) to nine cities.

Harold and Harriet Lewis Goodman now have six grandchildren, two in each family, all located in Richmond. Harold is partially retired and works three days a week in radiology at the Medical College of Va. Harriet is still golfing, gardening and teaching preschool.

Rosemary Ives is working on a B.A. in psychology, to be followed by a law degree. She retired from the Social Security Administration (claims representative in 1983) and has been taking care of her 95-year-old mother.

Jean Bowers McAmmon's husband Sam retired as executive of Hanover Presbyterian Church in November 1985.

In spite of arthritis, Mary Jean Shelby Proctor keeps going every day at the Springmoor Life Care Retirement Center in Raleigh. Daughter Jane's husband works for General Motors in Flint, Mich., but they bring their sons Kim and Michael to see Mary Jean every Christmas. Son Richard and his wife and 4-year-old son Jonathan are in Secunda, South Africa, where he is a civil engineer for a California company.

June Hargrove Cornwall says her two 6-year-old granddaughters have completed kindergarten at St. Catherine's School, where June was headmistress. She has since worked for Bank of Virginia. Both daughters live in Richmond.

Jim and Rose Koltukian Wallace vacations in Newfoundland, visited son Kevin and wife in Atlanta, and later son Bruce and wife in San Francisco for their first trip out west. In May the Wallaces enjoyed a visit from George and Marguerite Shell Ritchie when they were in Florida.

Bill and Jeanice Johnson Roberts are in their new home at Ford's Colony in Williamsburg, built by son Bill, a local contractor. Daughter Mary Gene was married in Williamsburg in October. My sister Rosalie, W39, and I are off to Britain for a month.

Our deepest sympathy to Margaret Goode Vicars, who lost her husband, Joe, on March 4, 1986.

Martha Edwards Allen has made several rush trips to Virginia lately due to family illness and to help her parents celebrate their 62nd wedding anniversary in June. Please write with news!
and Greece and a trip to Switzerland for Shirlee and Max include a cruise to Italy.

Grace Phillips Wright, a fourth-grade teacher in Chesterfield County, says all three “children” have left home. Two live in Richmond and one is writing and recording music in Nashville, Tenn. Recent travels have included Paris, England and Scotland.

Nancy Johnson White is pursuing a business career as an office manager. She and Clifford have three children: Doug, who received an M.B.A. from Harvard and is a management consultant for McKinsey & Associates; Donna, who is pursuing a new career in teaching at VCU; and Jay, who “gave up boxing for a college career.” The White’s grandson, Robert D. White Jr., celebrated his first birthday four days before our reunion.

Jackie Kilby Brooks’ job with IBM has taken her to conferences in Colorado Springs and Tarpon Springs, Fla. Less charming, she says, have been her working sessions in Atlanta, Indianapolis, Birmingham, Chicago and Iowa City. Leisure time focuses on church activities: board of deacons, retreat center, church building fund committee. She is trying to absorb furniture from her homeplace in Culpeper into her Fairfax residence.

I arrived at the reunion just five hours after returning from three weeks in London, Paris, Rome, Madrid and Berlin. After three days back on the fashion beat at the Richmond Times-Dispatch, I left for a week of fall fashion shows in New York. Daughter Kathy Propert, a graduate of U.Va., is with Owens-Illinois in Richmond; her daughter Kim graduated with honors in music in May, the fifth child to finish college, leaving only Jimmy, 18, at home. She also heard from Mary Norwood Briggs who had just returned from Paris and London on a trip with her daughter’s French class. Barbara’s son was married last August. Peggy and Merrill celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary in Bermuda, along with Tommy and Beverly.

Marian Gates Breedon heard from Mary Ann Williams Haske, who had traveled in Europe last summer, completing course work to be a credentialed alcoholism counselor and is interning in an outpatient alcoholism treatment agency. Their son Paul graduated from U.Va. in May, the fifth child to finish college, leaving only Jimmy, 18, at home. She also heard from Mary Norwood Briggs who keeps busy at Tech. and home; her daughter Kim graduated with honors from Lenoir-Rhyne with a double major in Spanish and international business. Marian’s daughter, Carrie, received her M.Ed. from U.Va. in May and was married on May 31. She is now Mrs. Wallace Dietz and living in Richmond. Marian’s sister Jackie, 64, and husband Fields will be living nearby at Virginia Beach.

Margaret Rutherford Compton received nice notes from Carolyn Phillips Glenn and Caroline Massey Shreve. Carolyn’s son Walter graduated from Florida State U. and is with Owens-Illinois in Roanoke; her daughter Cathy has transferred to Flagler College for its program in education for the deaf. Caroline Shreve has returned to full-time teaching; her daughter Amy was married in April and lives in Hanover County.

Jo Barker Campbell talked to Jackie Connell Atkinson who said she and Charlie had celebrated their 25th anniversary in Europe; their daughter Missy is completing an M.A. in biomedical engineering at Chapel Hill; their son graduated from Duke in electrical engineering and entering the Navy. Betsy Minor McCleland has earned her M.A. in education from Radford U. and is appearing in a play with Va. Tech. Arts Festival. Jo’s youngest, Ben, graduated in May from UR and her company has opened an office in Fredericksburg.

I was happy to receive a letter from Karen Diedrich Gardner who traveled out West with husband Jim for a month, including visits with their daughter Kari in Austin, Texas, and an orthopedics convention in New Orleans. Anne Norris Myers Johnson and husband Robert enjoy their practice of law. Their oldest, Deborah, graduated from Princeton in 1984 and works in New York City; Anne-Marie graduated from U.Va. this year and the youngest, Rob, completed his first year there.

Margaret Spencer Hernandez’s husband Jess is now commandant of the Washington Naval District, and she is working for a home health service in Northern Virginia as their social worker.
I also heard from Cary Hancock Gilmer who wrote that son Greg was doing well following a spinal operation in January; daughter Carylee married Doug Meyers on December 28, the second Gilmer wedding in 1985.

Your secretary and classmates get much pleasure from your letters. Thank you for writing!

Janet Wooden Murlless and her family relocated in September 1985 to Tokyo, Japan, and they plan to be there two years. Husband Bill is investment manager of the Pacific Basin for CIGNA Insurance. She’s taking a language course to help solve the communication problem. Her sons, Craig, 16, and Brad, 14, are attending the American School of Japan.

Noel Swinter Prisler and family have moved from Manassas to Hampton, Va. They were able to get transfers with Allen (now a division of Singer Company). They are enjoying their new location by the water. Daughter Jill took sailing lessons this summer.

I have completed four years of teaching social studies to two classes of seventh and eighth graders at the New Community School in Richmond. Students attending our school are bright but dyslexic. New Community provides a college-bound curriculum for those who desire to pursue higher education while at the same time addresses students’ learning problems. In 1980 I received my M.E. from VCU with a concentration in library/media. The remainder of my workday is spent serving as the school librarian.

Send news to me again by Christmas for inclusion in the next edition of our class notes.

To celebrate our 5th-year reunion, we enjoyed a cruise down the James River Friday night, May 30th. Thanks to Cindy Clark and Grace Schneckener who served as Class of 1981 reunion chairmen.

It was great to see Marilyn Adamson, Lucille Atkinson Wakefield, Sonya Harrow Harrison, Beth Forward Burgess, Bernadette Doutney Harris, Laurie Hooper, Susan Hitchcock and Sherry Smith McCormack.

Laurie Hooper is still teaching in Baltimore. Beth Forward Burgess is a manager at the Laura Ashley shop in Shockhoe Slip, Richmond. Sonya Harrow Harrison and husband, Billy, R'82, moved to Charlotte, N.C., in August 1985. Sonya is teaching math.

Susan Hitchcock is living in Boston and works for the city traffic department.

Cathy Collins Jenkins and new husband, Lee, live in Alexandria, Va. Cathy and Lee were married in May 1986. Jody Buffington, Laura McGuire Mockai and Susan Walker were attendants. Cathy is director of public information for United Way of America in Alexandria. Lee is the production manager/art director for a local graphics company.

Donna Zarrilli Gola and husband Mike have bought a townhouse in West Chester, Pa. Donna is teaching at St. Aloysius Academy and Mike is in commercial real estate. Donna and Mike spent most weekends at their house at the New Jersey Shore.

I have learned that Beth Powell is also in Alexandria, Va., since graduating from the William and Mary law school.

Please send news—a post card will do.

A letter from Erica Orloff gave news that since September 1985, she has been working as a production editor for Prentice Hall Inc., a division of Simon and Schuster. About ten books have been published this year with her interior design and production supervision. She has also sent a few of her own stories to publishers, is working on a novel, and, involved with a writer's group, had the first public reading of one of her short stories.

I received a letter from Cathy Lauder when she returned to Charleston after nine months of living, working and traveling in Europe. She visited countries all over Europe before settling down in a London flat with Anne Barrett, B'85. She continued travels to Switzerland and the USSR while working for an interior design company. Cathy spent the summer of 1986 on the administrative staff of Camp Seafarer in North Carolina where she, along with four others, was responsible for the sailing program.
