UR sends out fourth college president in seven years.

Fulfilling The Prophecy

How far has UR come in achieving the goal?
Come May 29 through June 1 to see old and new friends and to celebrate the University's newly renovated Sarah Brunet Memorial Hall. Known as the Refectory, the building that once was the men's dining hall has been remodeled and refurbished to serve as a center for alumni activities on campus and as a home for the Alumni Office of Richmond College and The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business, the Alumni-Development Office of The T. C. Williams School of Law, as well as the Institute for Business and Community Development and the Women's Resource Center.

How Far Has UR Come In Achieving The Goal?

By Randy Fitzgerald, R'63 and G'64

When E. Claiborne Robins and his family gave the University $50 million in 1969, Robins said the money was to be used to make his alma mater "one of the finest small universities in the country." He set no time limits. He gave no blueprints. A few years later he echoed his goal and put it in sharper focus. The gift's purpose, he said, was for the University to achieve "academic excellence to the degree that [it] will be recognized nationally as one of the truly outstanding private institutions in the nation."

Over fifteen years have passed since he stated the dream and gave the means for making it come true. Has the University become one of the nation's finest in that brief time span? Or perhaps a better question: How far has UR come, and how far does it have to go in achieving the dream?

UR administrators and Trustees asked themselves these questions about the undergraduate program at their fall retreat in Williamsburg. They took as their starting point a full-page article that ran 10 years ago in the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Called "UR Seeks Ambitious Academic Role," the article presented an in-depth assessment of how far the University had come in the five years since the Robins gift.

It went on to say UR administrators were looking forward to a University goal of becoming "an institution widely known as intellectually exciting and creatively stimulating." National prominence could come within 20 years, one administrator said. UR could become as respected as such colleges and universities as Amherst, Williams and Connecticut Wesleyan.

Some would argue that those goals have been met in 10 years, not 20. In November 1983 U.S. News & World Report listed "the nation's best campuses for undergraduate study." UR made that list, along with the above-mentioned Amherst, Williams and Connecticut Wesleyan. The list was compiled from questionnaires sent to the nation's four-year college and university presidents, who were asked to consider "the quality of academic courses, professors, student bodies and general atmosphere of learning provided."

UR's ranking came in the "comprehensive universities" category. That category, determined by the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education, includes universities that "offer professional programs, such as engineering and business administration, along with liberal-arts curricula." Universities in this category offer master's degrees, but offer few if any doctorates. Amherst, Williams and Connecticut Wesleyan belonged to the "national liberal arts" category and were among "the most selective of the national smaller schools," according to U.S. News.

The other comprehensive universities cited with UR as the best seven east of the Mississippi were Bucknell, Wake Forest, Furman, Depaul, Skidmore and James Madison.

vate, Baptist-related universities—may make more sense than comparisons with Amherst, Williams and Connecticut Wesleyan, which are liberal arts colleges, according to Dr. Zeddie Bowen, UR Vice President and Provost.

"We're not trying to imitate any other institution; we're trying to become the best University of Richmond we can be," Dr. Bowen said. Comparing UR to Amherst, Williams and other national liberal arts colleges is irrelevant, Dr. Bowen said."We're going in different directions. They're excellent schools, among the best; but having The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business makes us significantly different. Having The T. C. Williams School of Law makes us different.

"The way we can be measured on common ground is on the quality of our students and how selective we are," he said. "Our goal is to be in the category of having the best students."

Dr. Bowen does want UR to be like the better national liberal arts colleges in being attractive to the nation's brightest students: "We must seek the best students on the basis of their quality," Dr. Bowen told his audience at the Williamsburg retreat. UR Dean of Admissions Thomas N. Pollard Jr. agrees with that goal and thinks that UR is well on the way toward achieving it. Speaking of the 1983-84 academic year Dean Pollard said: "It became obvious that the University had reached national identity, for applications came from 41 states and several foreign countries. The quality of the student was also substantially increased. . . . The average SAT scores for those candidates enrolling was just over 1100. There is no question that this year marks the crossing of the threshold from a regional institution to one with a developing national identity. . . . Our reputation has become one of nationwide proportion."

The reasons UR now recruits not just in Virginia, but outside of Virginia, particularly in the Northeast, the South and the Midwest are not all ones of national aspirations, either. Intra-state competition for Virginia's better students has become intense over the last 10 years. Since 1974 the growth of other colleges and universities in the Commonwealth has been startling, according to Dean Pollard. In 1973, for example, James Madison University enrolled 2,990 Virginia students; ten years later, 6,259 Virginians enrolled at Madison. George Mason's growth is similar: 1,084 Virginians enrolled there in 1973; 6,675 in 1983. The list goes on: U.Va. attracted 5,392 in '73 and 9,550 in '83; VPI went from 8,942 in '73 to 14,441 in '83.

Richmond, like other private colleges and universities in the state, shows a decrease from 1,753 to 864 Virginians in this same ten-year period (1973 to 1983). The increases at the state universities—with their lower tuition rates—"have come out of the hides of private colleges and universities," according to Dean Pollard.

In fact, those two factors, the growth of Virginia's state colleges and universities and UR's increasing national reputation, have contributed to a reversal of the Virginian/non-Virginian freshman enrollment ratio at UR: from 81 percent Virginian, 19 percent non-Virginian in 1968-69 to 21 percent Virginian, 79 percent non-Virginian this year.

The Old Dominion still leads the other states both in numbers of students at UR and numbers of applications, but by fall 1984, New York was ahead of Virginia in the number of applications for next year's freshman class, 1,937

Over the past 15 years UR has worked on attracting those brighter students. UR has gone from accepting over 80 percent of its applicants in 1969 to only about 54 percent in 1979 and about 48 percent in 1984. In 1974, the mean SAT scores were 1025; in 1979, about 1063. In 1984 they crossed the 1100 mark for the first time (1110). Only 18 percent of entering freshmen nationwide are scoring that high, according to Dean Pollard. Those scores probably will continue to rise.

To help attract the nation’s best and brightest students, UR has followed a concept outlined in the 1974 Times-Dispatch article: "making scholarships possible for the brightest of students." The article pointed to a 1974 "faculty proposal that scholarships be awarded on a basis of merit as well as need."

Back in 1969 the University awarded "a relatively small number of scholarship funds ... to needy and deserving students," according to Dr. William H. Leftwich, Vice President for Student Affairs. Today "we have moved increasingly into programs of no-need or merit-based financial aid which have generally succeeded in bringing into the institution a cadre of high-calibre students." About half of the 33 percent of UR students on financial aid receive merit-based scholarships.

The University’s merit scholarship programs now include the Oldham Scholars, the University Scholars, the National Merit Finalists and the CIGNA Scholars.

In 1983 W. Dortch Oldham, R’41, and his wife Sis gave the University $2 million for the Oldham Scholars Program. This fall the first four scholars enrolled. They won their scholarships in competition with students from all over the country. All four gave up scholarship offers at other universities to come to UR. Their scholarships are full tuition, room and board for four years and a one-time $1,500 stipend for summer study or travel abroad.

University Scholars receive an award of one-half of UR’s $6,750 tuition, as do National Merit Scholarship finalists. Richmond-area minority students who are selected as CIGNA Scholars receive $5,000 annually, plus additional need-based aid for which they qualify.

UR also is trying to win back a portion of its Virginia constituency as well with "a program of competitive packaging of financial aid designed to attract Virginia students and certain others of high quality," according to Dr. Leftwich. "But, the competition with low-cost state institutions is tough," he said.

Dr. Leftwich summarized the progress of financial aid in the post-Robins gift years: "The changes and the growth in our Financial Aid Program have been phenomenal and no less dramatic than the growth in the University’s endowment, in our physical plant and, indeed, in the overall quality and stature of our University."

The blueprint in 1974 also called for "a blue-ribbon faculty that, in turn, will attract blue-ribbon students." How far has the University come in reaching that goal? A long way, says Dr. Sheldon R. Wettack, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Dean Dr. F. Sheldon Wettack, Dean of Faculty of Arts and Sciences

"The liberal arts core curriculum remains strong."

Wettack told the Trustees in Williamsburg that the percentage of Arts and Sciences faculty with terminal degrees had jumped from 73 percent in 1974 to 90 percent in 1984. Research output also has increased dramatically. UR faculty members published 41 articles and 39 papers in 1974. In 1984 those numbers have jumped to 90 and 106, respectively. Dr. Wettack also notes that the recent papers and articles appeared more often in national rather than regional or local outlets, as in earlier years.

"The liberal arts core curriculum remains strong," Dean Wettack said. The University came through the storm of change in the 1960s with its liberal arts philosophy intact. Although English has lost its position as the most popular Arts and Sciences major to economics, it still remains a popular choice. University wide, the most popular major is business administration.

"The nice thing about a business major at UR is that students pursue it in a liberal arts setting."

small size of the UR's Business School made it nearly unique in Virginia, with Washington and Lee perhaps coming the closest to being like UR. UR's Business School offers a dedicated faculty who teach both undergraduate and graduate students. "Teaching is our first priority," Dean Reuschling said, "but our faculty are also productive scholars and practitioners."

The faculty at The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business also are involved in the community, Dean Reuschling said. A recent article in the Harvard Business Review charging that faculty members didn't understand "the real world" doesn't stand up at UR, Dean Reuschling said. He told the Trustees that besides their roles as scholars and consultants, UR faculty are involved with the real world in UR's industrial faculty fellowship program, in which faculty members spend one to three months in industry; in the management development program, a two-week program in the summer in which middle and upper-middle management from around the country participate; and in faculty involvement in the 6th Street Marketplace minority training program.

The business school faculty has more than doubled since 1974 (from 16 to 39) while the student body has not changed much in number, from 320 to 352. One significant change, though, is that in 1974, 279 men and only 41 women majored in business. In 1984 those numbers are 194 men, 158 women. The increase in the faculty is in part a response to a new graduate program, but also to the increase in economics majors, as well as to meet the needs of students majoring in liberal arts who take business courses. "Many liberal arts majors want some business background today, and they can get both at UR," Dean Reuschling said.

Has the University achieved academic excellence, national prominence?

U.S. News & World Report is not the only national magazine that suggests the answer is "yes." Town and Country in December 1983 said that "observers contend that Robins' largesse alone has made the University into a major institution."

These are some of the facts: the nation's college presidents rank UR as one of the best places in the country for undergraduate study; UR attracts some of the brightest students, judging from SAT scores, from most of the states and several foreign countries; faculty members continue to grow professionally; the endowment ranks among the nation's highest; and the financial commitment to the academic dream is strong—the goal of the current $55 million "Cornerstones for the Future" development campaign is to strengthen overall academic programs.

Based on these measurable criteria, the answer to the question is "yes," according to Dr. Bowen. "We have made substantial progress toward becoming one of the finest small private universities in the nation."

She Could Outrun Us All
A Tribute To Fanny Crenshaw

By Dorothy Wagener

She burst into their lives swinging a hockey stick "with a force that made you tremble for the life of those in front of her."

Her enthusiasm was so contagious it swept the girls along with her into hockey, tennis, basketball, and track—and this in an age when higher education was not thought proper for genteel young ladies, let alone four years of regular physical education.

A dominant force because of her energy and spirit, Fanny Graves Crenshaw was Westhampton's athletic director from the college's beginning in 1914. Who else but "Fanny G." would have been able to swim 50 miles over a period of time to win a Red Cross fitness award at age 75?

"She taught me my freshman year, the year she retired," said Jane Thorpe, W'58, University of Richmond Director of Alumnae Relations. "At age 65, she could outrun us all. She didn't have to retire, but the story goes that she said when she could no longer climb the rope to the top of Keller Hall gymnasium, it was time for her to retire."

A Richmond native, Miss Crenshaw came to Westhampton with no formal training in physical education, but with a natural enthusiasm and love for athletics that first developed on an extracurricular basis while she was majoring in history and economics at Bryn Mawr College. There she participated in every available sport: basketball, gymnastics, the brand-new game of field hockey, and track, in which she set six world records.

Miss Crenshaw completed her bachelor's degree in 1912 and returned to Richmond to teach math and history at St. Catherine's School when she was recommended to May Keller, Westhampton's first dean.

Miss Crenshaw herself reminisced about the way she came to the newly established Westhampton College during an oral history interview taped in 1975.

According to her, Miss Keller arrived in August prior to the opening of Westhampton's first term in September and inquired about arrangements for faculty to teach the girls. When she learned there were no plans for athletic director, she insisted there should be one, saying, "The work I'm going to give these girls to do they can't do unless they get some exercise." Thereupon President Frederic W. Boatwright gave her permission and she invited Fanny G. Crenshaw to come three afternoons a week.

That first year at Westhampton, Miss Crenshaw had for her equipment exactly one basketball and for facilities "the great outdoors." She had the girls play basketball outdoors on the lawn, run cross country, jump ditches, do "anything I could think of to give the girls some exercise."

In the same spirit, Coach "Fanny G." improvised endlessly in the early years of the college. When there was no basketball gymnasium, she made do with an old unheated barn. When there was no equipment, she made up her own games in the Tower Room of the old North Court building.

At various times, she also taught swimming and life-saving in the lake; held gymnastics classes on the roof of St. Luke's Hospital when students were evacuated from the campus during World War I; and made use of the "old Red Cross building" left on campus after that war. Eventually physical education facilities were built in Keller Hall in 1936.

Coach Crenshaw was one of the first to introduce field hockey to Virginia when she brought it to Westhampton in 1916. When her girls played Sweet Briar in 1919 it was the first women's intercollegiate athletic contest in the Commonwealth.

Although the students "began hockey with misgiving," they reported in the 1916 yearbook, The Spider, "we soon learned to enjoy the hockey immensely." Somehow it was hockey they identified with Miss Crenshaw, as they wrote in the 1922 Web: "The first time you laid eyes on 'Fanny G.,' she was probably swinging a hockey stick with a force that made you tremble for the life of those in front of her. . . . She goes into everything with the same force and skill with which she swung that stick."

Many years later, Miss Crenshaw was honored in 1976 when Constance M. K. Applebee—the woman who introduced field hockey to the United States and taught Crenshaw the game at Bryn Mawr—established the Fanny G. Crenshaw Scholarship Fund at Westhampton. The fund provides financial aid to a Westhampton physical education major or a student who shows leadership and ability in women's outdoor sports.

In the same taped interview, Miss Crenshaw remembered the spirit of the girls in the first classes. She said they were undaunted by the difficulties caused by lack of facilities or equipment. Although most had had no experience with sports, she said "they were crazy to try anything."

But the eagerness Miss Crenshaw remembered among her students they themselves attributed to her.

"[W]e are as enthusiastic about Miss Crenshaw as she is about her work, and her enthusiasm not only never lags, but also is able to reproduce itself among all the students," they said in the 1916 Spider.

Coach Crenshaw could have rested on her laurels when she retired from Westhampton as director of athletics, physical education and recreation in 1955 at age 65. After all, her accolades were many: not only had she established the physical education department and athletic teams at Westhampton, she later had the swimming pool in Keller Hall named for her and she became the first woman inducted into the University of Richmond Athletic Hall of Fame in 1979.

However, she continued her active life. When she swam 50 miles in the pool named for her at age 75, she said she did so "partly to encourage the college students. I believe that some of them thought that if an old lady could do it, they could, too."

Among her other activities, both before and after retirement, Crenshaw served as Southeast Chairman of the U.S. Field Hockey Association and helped select teams to compete in national tournaments. She also officiated at hockey and basketball games, conducted examinations of women's sports officials and served as a national judge for the Richmond Board of Women's Basketball Officials.

When she died at age 94 on Oct. 8, 1984, she had been the sole surviving member of the original Westhampton faculty for a quarter century. She is survived by a brother, Clay Crenshaw, of Richmond.

Perhaps one of her highest tributes came from her earliest students in the 1922 Web: "Coach Crenshaw, you've done a big part toward showing, through your own life, what the life of a real woman can mean. Westhampton thanks you."

A University Is Its Faculty

Opening Convocation, held at the beginning of each school year, offers a time to assess what has gone before and what lies ahead. This year's Opening Convocation, held Aug. 30 in the Robins Center, gave a more specific focus to this traditional pause for reflection. The faculty—its past and present successes, its responsibilities and the challenges it faces—took center stage.

Distinguished Educator Awards were presented to six faculty members. Dr. Neil Ashworth was installed as the CSX Professor in Management. Convocation speakers William H. Shawcross Jr. and Dr. James H. Hall Jr. also focused on faculty in their addresses. Shawcross, President of the Richmond College Student Government Association, reminded students of their good fortune in having an accessible faculty. "We have become spoiled," he said, "by the faculty here who have devoted their careers to the enrichment of our lives through education."

Dr. Hall, the James Thomas Professor of Philosophy, issued a challenge to the faculty in his speech (the text of which is printed below). "If we have the will and the industry... to be a faculty" in all senses of the word, "then we have the key in our hands to there being, truly being, finally being a University of Richmond."

I have only one point to make on this occasion; and I shall not state it (in so many words) until the very end. But I will state now the simple premise from which I am working:

"A University is its faculty."

I take this to be a transparent truth, and I assume it without argument.

My sole point hinges on it (and a small set of facts).

My own first perceptions of the academy were more than a little naive and romantic. I decided that I wanted to teach without any noble reasons. (For that matter, it was long before I had any clear idea of "what."). It had a great deal to do with the first professor that I ever met—a sandy-haired, bushy-mustached, veteran Spitfire pilot from the Royal Air Force, who was my adviser at the Hopkins in September of 1951. Teaching French with a Scots' brogue, he was dashing in appearance, droll humored, and delicate in taste for fine wines and Cuban cigars. He and his red Morgan Plus-Four (complete with a leather strap across the bonnet) were endlessly pursued by squadrons of beautiful women.

"This is the career for me," I said; and I was on my way into the academy.

There I was, "in college"; and I must admit that I loved college life. Indeed, I loved it so much that it frequently interfered with my involvement in that remarkable university which called me, even at seventeen, "colleague." But, in spite of all the intrusion, I did learn that "college life" was not what the university was all about. The bright lacrosse days of spring, the endless talk into the night "without which youth would be a waste of time," the welding of friendships that still endure—all were good, all were essential to my growth, but none were more than peripheral to the university of which I was a novice member.

Where, then, did I find the es-
We were not, of course, in total harmony (and all that flows from it) that I find it would be what this list only begins to enumerate, then we could find that total commitment of mind, spirit, and energy (and all that flows from it) that I have ascribed above to Spitzer, Glass, and others. When and only when we find it will there be here a university in fact. So, finally, my point...
UR Sends Out Fourth College President In Seven Years.

By UR Magazine Staff Members

When Westhampton College Dean Stephanie M. Bennett assumed the presidency of Centenary College in Hackettstown, New Jersey, on Jan. 1, 1985, she became the fourth UR administrator to become president of another college in the past seven years.

Dr. Bennett joins the honor roll of college presidents selected from administrators serving under UR President E. Bruce Heilman:

—Dr. Charles E. Glassick, President of Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania since 1977 and formerly UR Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost for five years
—Dr. Gresham Riley, named in 1981 as President of The Colorado College in Colorado Springs after six years as UR Dean of the Arts and Sciences Faculty, and —Dr. Melvin L. Vulgamore, who became President of Albion College in Michigan in 1983 after serving as UR Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost for five and a half years.

Dr. Bennett becomes Centenary College's 10th and first woman president in its 117-year history. In making the announcement of Dr. Bennett's appointment, Orin T. Smith, a member of Centenary's Board of Trustees, said, "We have a new president, and I am delighted to say, not just any president—but the perfect president for Centenary College."

Centenary College is a women's liberal arts college with a full-time enrollment of 650 women. It also has a continuing education evening division with a coeducational enrollment of about 800 students.

During her eight and a half years at the University as Dean of Westhampton, Dr. Bennett established the Women Involved in Living and Learning program (WILL), a program offering women students supplemental courses, seminars, workshops, internships and speakers addressing concerns of women. She has served as President of the Southern Association of Colleges for Women and President of the Chesapeake American Studies Association.

Dr. Bennett said she was "excited to have the opportunity to lead a women's college as it addresses the educational needs of contemporary women." She also said, "The experiences at the University of Richmond and Westhampton College have given me the opportunity to be ready to accept this particular challenge."

Dr. Bennett and the three other college presidents who emerged from the University administration all had in common the opportunity to develop their leadership skills at a special time in the history of the University. These four individuals helped to lead the University through its own period of self-scrutiny, re-dedication and growth, occurring in connection with the Robins' gift of $50 million intended to help the University become one of the finest small, private universities in the country.

The four colleges themselves have a great deal in common with the University and with each other. All are highly selective private colleges emphasizing the liberal arts. All also are relatively small in enrollment—fewer than 2,000 students—and all have high faculty-student ratios.

President Heilmann, in accounting for the number of former UR administrators now serving as presidents, points first to the individuals' excellence.

"They were all competent people when they came to UR," he says. "The University seeks the best people it can attract. They added to their experience while they were in leadership positions here, and . . . the University itself excelled and progressed during their time of service.

"If the University is to attract qualified people, it must also offer them the chance to grow as leaders." Several factors come into play here. Dr. Bennett cites the "autonomy given to administrators" as helping them to be successful leaders and to become successful presidents.
Dr. Glassick concurs, saying that “because Dr. Heilman is willing to delegate both authority and responsibility, the administrators working for him get valuable, pertinent administrative experience. His style of presidency, I believe, encourages people to grow and develop—to reach their full potential.”

The four leaders agree that the foremost emphasis in presidential leadership should be on academics. Dr. Riley emphasizes “the importance of a president’s staying close to the faculty and to the academic program.” He calls that principle “the most important aspect of administration at UR which I have implemented” at Colorado College.

Along with academic vision, the presidents stress planning—what Dr. Bennett calls “the articulation of institutional goals and missions.” Dr. Vulgamore says he used his experience in planning at the University of Richmond to finalize a new four-year plan for Albion in his first year there.

The most basic requirement for leaders is that they have followers—that they turn a diverse collection of individuals into a cohesive whole. Of UR’s success in this regard, Dr. Bennett says, “the University has been extremely conscientious about getting consensus and institution-wide agreement on directions for policy and growth. It seems to me that only when you have all constituencies—faculty, students and administration—involved in a planning process... can you have a true sense of moving together to accomplish something of value.”

Politician, Coach, Prophet: A President’s Many Faces

Editor’s Note:
The following appeared in the September/October/AGB Reports. It is a summary of “The Many Faces of the Presidency,” a speech delivered by Dr. E. Bruce Heilman before the American Council on Education in July 1983.

A college or university president is...

...a person of culture. It is appropriate that the person and the office be identified with the symphony, ballet, museums, opera, and other aspects of the “higher things in life.”

...an intellectual, a person of letters who is knowledgeable and wise.

...a person of strong character expected to set moral and ethical standards on campus and in the community.

...an influential public figure often asked to serve on corporate boards, the chamber of commerce, and any number of other enterprises and activities.

...an endlessly accessible individual. Presidents, in fact, do not want even to appear inaccessible.

...an admissions officer. There is no escape from being the court of last resort; the time never seems to come when it is not necessary to deal with special admissions.

...a defender and protector of what the institution represents—someone who must uphold the freedom and flexibility of the academy.

...a person who is youthful vigor without being immature. The chief executive must continue to learn from young people; be young in heart, mind, and spirit; and remain adaptable.

...a salesman and procurer. Obtaining resources is an art and a science; the president must be the catalyst and coordinator for cultivating major donors and instilling confidence in the institution.

...a public relations professional and press agent. Public relations cannot be avoided; to do the job well, the president must relate effectively to the public and the institution’s administration.

...a coach. He or she must be prepared to assume responsibility for all of the losses in college athletics and leave to the coaches credit for the wins.

...a politician and lobbyist before the state legislature.

...a prophet and seer. The world-at-large wants to know what is going to happen to the university or college, and the president must be ready to conjecture.

...a dreamer. Dreams—grown from one’s convictions, ambitions, and aspirations—make the presidency exciting, give it life; they override the negative factors.
UR COMMONS NAMED FOR TYLER HAYNES

Just as the UR student center spans Westhampton Lake, Dr. W. Tyler Haynes bridged the gap between students and administrators when he served on the Board of Trustees Student Affairs Committee back in the early '70s.

That is the way J. Gaston B. Williams, R'73 and L'77, remembers the man for whom the Commons Building was named on Dec. 13, 1984.

Just as the building dams the water, Dr. Haynes "held back a vast reservoir of student discontent and hostility," Williams told an audience that packed the Dry Dock Area of the newly christened Tyler Haynes Commons during the naming ceremony that honored the 1922 Richmond College graduate, who is now a Trustee Emeritus.

Williams and others at that ceremony spoke in recognition of Dr. Haynes' six decades of involvement in student affairs.

UR Chancellor Dr. George M. Modlin, H'71, said it was probable that "no Trustee in the history of the University has devoted as much interest, effort, time, and resources to student affairs" as has Dr. Haynes.

Having the building named for him was "one of the nicest things that ever happened to me," responded Dr. Haynes as he thanked the Board of Trustees for honoring him.

Others who paid tribute included Trustee Charles H. Ryland, R'36, L'39, and H'71; Suzanne M. Cronin, W'85, President of the University Student Union; UR Rector Lewis T. Booker, R'50 and H'77, and UR President E. Bruce Heilman. Also included were an invocation by UR Chaplain Dr. David D. Burhans and a Mozart aria performed by music faculty.

At the ceremony's conclusion, Dr. Haynes' great-niece Noel Haynes Daniel helped unveil a plaque that later was placed at the Richmond College end of the building.

Dr. Haynes has been a UR Trustee since 1963, becoming a Trustee Emeritus in 1972. As Trustee he served as Chairman of the Student Affairs Committee and was known as a strong advocate of student causes. The University awarded him its distinguished service award and an honorary doctor of science degree in 1972.

A 1926 graduate of the Medical College of Virginia School of Dentistry, Dr. Haynes served on the faculty there for 40 years until his retirement in 1968. From 1943 to 1968 he was professor and head of the Department of Orthodontics at MCV.

Dr. Haynes stays active in his fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta, hosting an annual gathering of student and alumni members of the UR chapter at his home. He has also served as regional adviser to Virginia and North Carolina chapters and has been active nationally as well.

Built at a cost of nearly $5 million and completed in 1977, the Tyler Haynes Commons is a three-story building spanning Westhampton Lake. It houses the student activities center, the bookstore, dining facilities, the Jenkins Trustees Suite, and a large multipurpose room. DW

WOMEN IN SOUTH TOPIC OF FIRST FREEMAN LECTURE

"Women in Southern Society" was the title of the first Douglas Southall Freeman Symposium, held on the University campus Sept. 12-14.

The three-day session consisted of three public lectures by Dr. Linda K. Kerber, Professor of History at Iowa University, and a symposium featuring women historians from across the country along with women who are leaders in the Richmond community.

Dr. Kerber was the first Freeman Lecturer. Her visit was sponsored by the UR Department of History through the Freeman Chair, established last year in memory of Dr. Freeman, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner for his biographies of Robert E. Lee and George Washington. Dr. Freeman, a UR alumnus, was also editor of The Richmond News Leader for 34 years.

Dr. Kerber’s lectures covered women’s history in general; the roots of modern American feminism; and the education of women in America.

Other speakers included Dr. Catherine Clinton, Assistant Professor of History, Harvard University; Dr. Sharon Haley, Assistant Professor of Afro-American Studies, the University of Maryland; Dr. Lois R. Helmbold, Assistant Professor of History, Ohio State University; and Dr. Martha H. Swain, Associate Professor of History, Texas Women’s University. Their talks focused on Southern women, black and white, from frontier and plantation days to modern times. A panel discussion on women today and the problems they face followed the speeches.

Knowing women’s history helps in understanding how women live today. Outstanding women have often become achievers later in life than their male counterparts. In an interview by Katherine Calos, staff writer for The Richmond News Leader, Dr. Kerber discussed one reason for this seeming slowness among women. Patterns of childbearing and childrearing have “a major impact on what society is like, how women live their lives . . . . In men’s careers, the most productive years are 30 to 50. For women, it’s 45 to 65. By assuming that if you’re going to have a productive career, you have to have it between 35 and 45, you’re signalling to women that they’re not hacking it, when in fact, the pattern for women has been quite different.”

The Freeman Symposium was sponsored in part by a grant from the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy. The UR event was part of the statewide Virginia Women’s Cultural History Project. AM

FRANK SODEN, “VOICE OF UR SPORTS,” RETIRES

Frank Soden retired as Assistant Athletic Director this fall, after 15 years with the University. Soden’s name has long been synonymous with athletic contests and community service in Virginia.

As Assistant Athletic Director, Soden worked with Athletic Director Chuck Boone and coordinated the department’s advertising on local television and radio stations. Before joining the UR staff, he spent 20 years with WRNL radio in Richmond, the last seven as Executive Vice President and General Manager. From 1950 to 1980 he served as the play-by-play man for Spider basketball and he broadcast Spider football from 1969 to 1980, earning him the title “Voice of UR Sports.” He also called football action for the University of Virginia (1952-1954) and for Virginia Tech (1955-1968). He was named Virginia Sportscaster of the Year in 1965 and in 1966.

Soden’s community activities include serving as emcee for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon, the Tobacco Festival and the Virginia State Fair. He was recently cited by the March of Dimes for his humanitarian services and named by the Richmond Times-Dispatch as a “Volunteer of the Year.” He is also a member of the Sports Hall of Fame Honors Court.

A host of parties honored Soden at his retirement. In a ceremony at the Robins Center on Sept. 20, University employees gathered as President E. Bruce Heilman presented him with an engraved silver platter. The Athletic Department held its party on Oct. 2 at the Bellwood Officer’s Club. Presentations were made by Coaches Dick Tarrant and Dal Shealy, Spider Club President Brian Marth and others. AM

ADMISSIONS SENDS VIDEOCASSETTES

A new 20-minute admissions film entitled “Faces” is available on videocassette for prospective students in a pilot project that may be the first of its kind in the nation.

Prospective students unable to visit the campus can request to have the film sent to them, says Thomas N. Pollard Jr., Dean of Admissions. UR is “the only institution in the United States, to my knowledge, using cassettes in this fashion,” he says.

The Admissions Office has 600 copies of the videocassette in circulation and has had as many as 2,200 requests for the tape from prospective students.

The tape is sent by UPS so there is no possibility of its being left on a doorstep. It already has a return address on the package so the prospective student need only put it in a mailbox to return it.

The tapes may be used on Beta II, VHS or 1/2 U-Matic videocassette recorders.

The film features professors, administrators and students talking about the University against a backdrop of campus scenes. It is narrated by Gregg Bond, R’86, and Genie Gall, W’86, who take prospective students to classrooms, dormitories, the dining hall, the library and other places on campus.

The Admissions Office has placed 200 complimentary copies of the tape in Virginia high schools. Alumni who wish to view a copy of the tape may contact the Admissions Office. MP
Six professors have been recognized as the University's Distinguished Educators for 1984. They received their awards at Opening Convocation in September.

The winners are Dr. David C. Evans, Associate Professor of History, who joined the faculty in 1973; Dr. Barbara J. Griffin, Associate Professor of English, a member of the faculty since 1970; Dr. Clarence R. Jung Jr., Professor of Economics, who came to UR in 1966; Dr. Daniel T. Murphy, Associate Dean and Professor of Law, a member of the faculty since 1976; Dr. James A. Sartain, Irving May Professor of Human Relations in the Department of Sociology, a member of the faculty for 21 years; and Dr. Lorenzo Simpson, Assistant Professor of Philosophy, now in his fourth year at the University.

Each received a prize of $2,000 and a special citation for outstanding contribution in the fields of teaching and scholarship. Provost Zeddie Bowen said that the awards call attention to "the things we value at the University of Richmond. There are many distinguished educators who are not recognized individually but by the symbolism of this award are recognized with those who are brought up on stage. By these awards we recognize all who are, or who strive to be, distinguished educators."

The annual awards were started at UR in 1975, the result of a challenge gift from the Robert G. Cabell III and Maude Morgan Cabell Foundation. The purpose of the awards is that of "attracting and retaining outstanding teachers and leaders in learning." Winners are selected through a process involving the faculty, students, administrators, alumni and trustees, with trustees making the final determination. AM

ARTISTS SPEAK AT EXHIBIT OPENING

Personal appearances by two nationally-known artists highlighted exhibits of their work in the Modlin Fine Art Center's Marsh Gallery this fall.

Philip Pearlstein, noted American realist painter, lectured in the Camp Theatre in the Modlin Fine Arts Center on Sept. 7 in connection with "Landscapes and Ruins," an exhibition of his watercolor paintings.

The exhibition, supported by a donation from UR alumnus Joel Harnett, consisted of 10 paintings. These works were executed at the sites of some of the most famous landmarks in the world, including England's Tintern Abbey, Egypt's Temple of Hatshepsut, and Machu Picchu in the Peruvian Andes.

Pearlstein is known primarily for his meticulously rendered figures in the studio. The landscapes are a less familiar aspect of his work, but they are marked by the same degree of control and exactitude as the figural paintings.

In his lecture, Pearlstein addressed the factors that have shaped him as an artist. Although his gift as a painter was recognized quite early, he had to support himself and his family for many years by working as a graphic artist. This craftsman's experience at first contrasted with the Abstract Expressionist works he created on his own time.

Later, however, skill and vision came together to characterize the works which have made him famous. The "ruins" in the exhibition are as technically correct as architect's drawings, yet they bear the stamp of the imaginative artist as well.

Pearlstein has taken his characteristic blend of art and technology to bold lengths by becoming one of the first to "paint" using a computer. This skill is in part a teaching device; he has made laser video discs of his works in process. The viewer sees the strokes themselves, one by one, as they are made, while the artist remains invisible. Video facilities in the Marsh Gallery enabled visitors to watch Pearlstein's paintings form on the screen while they viewed the more conventionally displayed watercolors on the walls.

The Howard Finster Folk Art Festival ran Oct. 31-Nov. 2, highlighting an exhibit of the folk artist's work held Oct. 31-Nov. 20. Finster came from his Summerville, Ga., home to participate in the workshops, lectures, panel discussions, musical performance and other events making up the festival, which brought to campus an array of visitors ranging from a country music group to the curator of the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C.

"Sermons in Paint" is an apt title for Finster's exhibit, for his "calling" to express spiritual truths has led him first to preaching, then to creating a blend of folk art, poetry and performance

art. Richmond writer Susan Hankla says of Finster, “His materials are the raw recycled detritus of America and he will just as readily spell out the gospel in cat’s eye marbles, as in conventional lettering.”

His eclectic use of materials was evident in the exhibit. His media included enamel on tin; enamel and glitter on fiberglass; enamel on metal table leaf; oil on TV panel; enamel on plexiglass and mirror with sequins, beads and wood; and glass, thumbtacks and pyrography on plywood.

His subjects are similarly diverse, while still expressing spiritual truths. Dogs, well-known Americans, angels and Finster himself appear in his work.

Adding to the exhibit were videotapes, recordings, slide presentations, photographs, books, letters, magazine articles, Finster’s handwritten “Thought Cards” and poems, all of which helped make clear the vision of the artist whose “reputation is rightfully radiating from Georgia and the South to the entire country,” says Alan Jabbour, Director of the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress.

The Howard Finster Folk Life Festival and “Sermons in Paint” were made possible by a grant from the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy.

Catalogs of the exhibit, featuring a cover created by Finster for the exhibit and a four-page poem, are available for $6.50, post paid, from Ann Oppenheimer, Director, Howard Finster Folk Life Festival, Art Department, University of Richmond, Va. 23173. AM, FH

DEANERY GARAGE CONVERTED TO GUEST COTTAGE

A former double garage at the Westhampton College Deanery has been transformed into the first on-campus accommodation for guests of the University.

Thanks to gifts from Mrs. Ruth Wallerstein Thalhimer, W’22, and others, particularly the Westhampton Class of ’34, the garage has become a guest cottage consisting of a guestroom with two single beds and a bath.

At a formal opening ceremony in January, the cottage was named the Ruth Wallerstein Thalhimer Cottage. Its function as lodging for guest lecturers and artists and special visitors to the University campus began in January.

Finished in a style to complement the Deanery, the cottage has a small front porch and a timber and stucco facade. It is furnished in the Jacobean style with pieces from other campus buildings plus a few new additions.

“The advantage to having a guest cottage on campus is that it will allow our special visitors to become more a part of the college community,” said Jane Thorpe, W’58, UR Director of Alumnae Relations. “Guests will be close to the dorms and dining hall. If they want to invite students or faculty in to visit they can easily do so.”

The garage and the Deanery were originally built for May L. Keller, dean of Westhampton College, 1914-1956. The Deanery continued to be her home until 1964. In 1981 it was renovated and now houses the alumnae office and the dean’s office for Westhampton. DW

Once a double garage for Westhampton Dean May L. Keller, this building now houses guests as the Ruth Wallerstein Thalhimer Cottage.

Present for the official opening of the cottage on Jan. 23 were President E. Bruce Heilman; Katherine E. Bell, W’34; Ruth Wallerstein Thalhimer, W’22; Grace Roland Wells, W’34; Rector Lewis T. Booker, R’50 and H’77; and Director of Alumnae Relations Jane Stockman Thorpe, W’58.
GREAT YEAR FOR SPIDER SPORTS

National recognition came to both the football team and the basketball team during the 1984-85 season, as the football Spiders went to the NCAA, Division I-AA playoffs and the basketball team went to the National Invitation Tournament.

Dal Shealy's football squad posted a 7-3 regular season record, and was selected as one of 12 teams to participate in the NCAA's I-AA football championship. Dick Tarrant's basketball team followed up last year's Cinderella effort in the NCAA playoffs with a bid to the National Invitation Tournament, joining such select company as UCLA, Louisville and Indiana.

The football team got to play its first-round NCAA playoff game at home against Boston University. The Spiders defeated the Terriers 35-33 to advance to a quarterfinal showdown with the University of Rhode Island. Looking to move into the NCAA I-AA final four, UR lost to the Rams 23-17 on Dec. 1 to end one of the finest football campaigns in UR's 103-year football history.

Eight wins, a Top 20 ranking and a I-AA playoff appearance were only a few of the highlights of the season. Numerous records were broken and several prestigious honors were won as the Spiders' explosive offense and tough and tough defense garnered recognition nationwide. Individually, senior offensive tackle Eddie Martin and sophomore running back Greg Grooms were named All-Americans while Coach Shealy was selected Kodak Region II Coach-of-the-Year by the American Football Coaches Association. Junior split end Leland Melvin was selected the team's Most Valuable Player.

It was a memorable season for not only players and coaches but also for fans as the Richmond community was asked to “Join The Home Team,” and join them they did. Nearly 22,000 people were on hand for the regular-season finale against William and Mary, and for the season UR averaged over 15,000 fans per game. They were proud to be part of the Home Team.

“At the beginning of the year, we wanted to have a winning season and make the I-AA playoffs,” said Coach Shealy. “We worked hard toward those goals and accomplished our objectives. It was a very satisfying season and one which I'll always remember.”

The basketball team tied Navy for the regular-season ECAC-South title but lost to the Middies in the tournament final. The Spiders missed out on an NCAA bid but got invited for the second time in four seasons to the NIT.

The Spiders eliminated Tarrant's alma mater, Fordham, in the first round at the Robins Center, 59-57, on a shot by 6-2 senior co-captain Kelvin Johnson from under the basket. Co-captain John Newman, an all-ECAC-South first team selection, scored 35 points in the game. Once again, however, Bobby Knight's Indiana Hoosiers ended Richmond's season by winning at Indiana 75-53.

The Spiders finished at 21-11. That combined with last year's 22-10 record gave UR its first back-to-back 20-game seasons in 31 years. Under Tarrant the Spiders have gone to post-season tournaments for three of the last four seasons. TS, RF
"Make Some Magic" was the theme of Homecoming 1984, Oct. 22-28, and a magical week it was. The Richmond College and The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business Classes of 1939, 1944, 1949, 1954, 1959, 1964, 1969, 1974 and 1979 all celebrated reunions at the Richmond Marriott on Oct. 26. A special thanks goes to the hosts of each reunion event. A selected group of reunions are shown on these pages.

But there's more to Homecoming than reunions. Sponsored by the Student Homecoming Action Committee and the Office of Alumni Affairs, Homecoming 1984 featured a variety of events. A sample of them includes an appearance by Larry Linville, who portrays Major Frank Burns on television's M*A*S*H; a bonfire and pep rally; the Bogle Open golf tournament; The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business Alumni Association Breakfast, with speaker John Mashek, National Correspondent for U.S. News & World Report; the dedication of the new wing at The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business; the football game, where the Spiders beat VMI 45-3; a post-game party in Millhiser Gymnasium, with music by the Kings of Swing; and a Homecoming Concert in Cannon Memorial Chapel, featuring the UR Band and Choir.

Make your plans now to attend Homecoming 1985, scheduled for Oct. 18 and 19. The University will play Northeastern University in football. Under a new plan, reunions will be held on Alumni Weekend, May 31–June 2, 1985. See the inside front cover for more information on reunions.
HOMECOMING REUNITES CLASSES

The Class of 1949 met for its 50th Reunion. Jimmy Robinson hosted the Reunion.

MIDD/TOWN, VIRGINIA

Middle Peninsula Alumnae Club
Peggy Louthan Shepherd, President
Box 444
Gloucester Point, Va. 23062

On May 26, 1984 the Middle Peninsula Alumnae Club met at Virginia Lee Ball Glover's home at Gloucester Point. Evelyn Fouraker, Director of Communications and Editor of UR Magazine, was our guest speaker.

We met again on November 10 at the home of Margaret Proctor Swetnam on Gwynn's Island.

New officers were elected at this meeting. They are:
President—Barbara Reynolds Orrell, Secretary—Linda Webb Taliaferro, and Treasurer—Julie Perkinson Crews. Dr. Gene Anderson of the Music Department was our speaker. Nancy Werner, President of the Alumnae Association, was also our guest.

TWO NAMED TO COURT OF APPEALS

Two UR alumni were sworn into the new Virginia Court of Appeals in January. Chief Justice E. Ballard Baker, L'47, left, and Judge Lawrence L. Koontz Jr., L'65, were appointed to the positions in 1984. Baker, a Richmond resident, was promoted from Henrico County Circuit Court judge, while Koontz, a Salem, Va., resident, was promoted from Salem Circuit Court judge.

Editor's Note: The University was saddened to learn of the death of Chief Justice Baker on March 24, 1985. "He was an asset to the University and to the legal community as well," said President E. Bruce Heilman.
CLASS OF '88 WELCOMED TO WC

Proclamation Night is an annual event at Westhampton College. Each fall freshmen gather in Cannon Chapel to declare that they will abide by the honor code and to write a letter to themselves, to be opened when they are seniors, describing what they hope to learn during their years at Westhampton. The event notes their official status as members of the college community. Meanwhile, seniors open the letters they wrote as freshmen and read their dreams of four years ago. Left, freshmen compose their letters. Right, Tara Mannion, W'83, speaker at Proclamation Night 1984, talks with Janet Muller, W'85, Chairman of the Westhampton College Honor Council.

PAST, PRESENT LEADERS MEET

Despite a difference of 70 years, these women have something important in common: leadership at Westhampton College. Celeste Anderson O'Flaherty created the first Westhampton College Student Government Association and served as its President in 1914-15. Ann Nicolaidis is the 1984-85 President of the same organization. After graduating from Westhampton in 1915 Mrs. O'Flaherty was active in the Richmond community and served as President of the Westhampton College Alumnae Association in the '20s.

ODK INITIATES UR TRUSTEE

W. Dortch Oldham, center, received a surprise initiation into Omicron Delta Kappa in December. Unable to attend the scheduled initiation into the honorary service fraternity earlier in the year, Oldham was initiated during the University's annual Boor's Head Dinner. Chapter President John Melleky, B'85, performed the ceremony as ODK Faculty Advisor Dr. Phil Hart, R'45, looked on. Oldham, H'74 and a member of the UR Board of Trustees, is President of Dortch Oldham Investments in Nashville, Tenn.
SEARCH UNDERWAY FOR NEW DEAN

But next comes the painstaking process of selecting a new dean. Jill Hunter, former Coordinator of the Women Involved in Living and Learning program, is serving as interim dean while the search is underway. The search committee hopes to announce a new dean in early summer.

Those serving on the search committee include Elaine Yeatts, W'64 and a UR Trustee, and Betty Ann Tulloh, W'48, G'49 and a member of the UR Board of Associates. Both are also members of the Westhampton College Alumnae Association Governing Board.

Dr. Bennett was honored at several UR events in December. Particularly memorable, reports Alumnae Director Jane Thorpe, W'58, was a farewell luncheon at the home of Elizabeth Dunkum, W'59 and a member of the UR Board of Associates. She hosted a similar luncheon welcoming Dr. Bennett when Dr. Bennett arrived at Westhampton.

Thorpe has visited Dr. Bennett in New Jersey and reports that the college is in a beautiful old town. “It’s very reminiscent of New England,” says Thorpe.

Editor's Note:
In this issue of the UR Magazine we have included two sets of notes—both odd and even years—in order to bring Westhampton alumnae news up to date and keep it more timely in the future.
Four of our class live at Westminster Canterbury in Richmond: Eleanor McCarthy, Elizabeth Brockenbrown, Martha Chappell and I. Eleanor is in the Health Care Center and so is Elizabeth, temporarily, while a broken shoulder heals. Martha Chappell is one of the busiest volunteers of WCH, an active member of a book club and a woman's club and enjoys three generations of younger family members. She has just returned from a vacation with all three on a South Carolina coastal island. I am very happy also here and enjoy journeying to family celebrations. I also had a nice cruise in the western Mediterranean in May.

Lois Rogers Butler writes, "I am a widow living in my own home. Am very active in my church and enjoy my yard, especially my rose bed. My daughter, Nancy, lives in Towson, Md. She has eight children, six boys and two girls. They come down to see me and I visit them. I enjoy good health and living."

Louise Wilson did newspaper and radio work in various areas before she was invited to apply for a job at Kroger's General Office in Cincinnati. She spent 28 years and became Advertising Copy Chief. She retired in 1961 and her husband passed away in 1969. She brought her antique furniture to Eminence to live with her widowed sister. She enjoys bridge, a literary club and church activities.

Louise Duke Brantley, since her husband's death, has lived alone in her home. She is able to navigate—quite slowly. She has a small art class, attends and loves the 125-year-old church where her father was pastor for 30 years. Her grandson attends Boston U. and her granddaughter is at Princeton on a National Science Foundation Scholarship working on her doctorate.

Louise Bristow Thompson had a back condition during the winter and could do nothing, but after much medication and rest, she feels better.

Claudia Patrick says "no news but I'm still kicking." She sounds really fine as do Thelma Hill Marsh and Juliette Woodson.

Ruth Wallerstein Thalhimer is very well, drives her car, plays bridge and keeps busy. Jeannette Henna attends her church and enjoys a study group there. She knits caps for premature babies at a Richmond hospital and does volunteer work for the Red Cross.

Leslie Sessions Booker was unable to go to Europe as she had planned because of eye trouble. However, she, with Hannah Coke and, of course, her daughter, had a trip to Winston-Salem and Blowing Rock, N.C. She has had to slow down, but with her spirit and determination I believe she will improve before too long.

Hilda Lawson Jecklin had a trip to Europe in June. They visited Paris and went to Switzerland, Germany, Amsterdam and Brussels. Back home she enjoys her new Chrysler and keeps up with many activities.

Mary Fugate is involved with the 200th anniversary of her church and is proofreading the final copy of the church history. She had a nice visit with her brother and his family from North Carolina.

Elizabeth "Rat" Hoover is living happily with her sister whose husband has been in a nursing home for several years. Her sister's house in Orlando is lovely and she has a new car which both enjoy.

Celia Levinson Meyer and her husband are both grandparents. There are three grandchildren, all college graduates; one is in computer work, one in films, both living in California; and the third is a recent graduate from Pittsburgh. The older granddaughter graduated from Carnegie Tech, majored in music and plays the French horn. This summer she is playing with a group from Glacier Park, Mnt., and in the fall she will go to Europe for 10 months where they will play first in Amsterdam and then in the different countries. Their second granddaughter will enter college this fall.

Now for my grandchildren, and I think they have set a record: five were married in one year and all with lovely church weddings. Can any of you beat that? Then this fall two will enter UR—one to study law and the other business.

Bernie Whitlock Bowles, Norma Coleman Broaddus, Joanna Savedge Elliot, Inez Delarue, Pauline Bevis, Agnes Jones, Louise Wilkinson Morton, Eva Sanders and I attended a luncheon at the Deanery April 7 celebrating our 60th reunion, together with Richmond College 1924 and Law School 1924. There were about 30 present. We are indebted to Davis Ratcliffe for his efforts in planning the affair and for inviting our class to meet with the “boys.” Also to our president, Louise Morton, and to Jane Thorpe, who contributed so much to the occasion. After a delicious lunch, we sang college songs and watched a nostalgic movie tour of the campus. It was called “Where Dreams Unfold” and was narrated by Earl Hamner.

Except for Bernie Whitlock Bowles, the same members of ’24 attended the alumnae luncheon June 2 with three additional members: Mabel Allen, Helen Anderson Hendricks and Mary Myrtis Cox. After services in the chapel on Sunday, we went to lunch at the Tobacco Company restaurant. guests of Mabel Allen and Helen Anderson Hendricks, who entertained us so graciously.

I had a telephone call from Estelle Billups Pettit recently. She visited in Florida this past winter. She tried to get in touch with Carlene Broach Watterson and finally reached her son. Carlene is a nursing home now.

Anna Hardaway White has two new addresses—she will be dividing her time between her two daughters. Anne lives in Wilmington, N. C., May in Southport. Anna sold her home in Oxford and moved the first of June.

We were saddened by the death of Katherine Kirk Bain’s husband and we extend sincere sympathy to her, to the children and to the grandchildren.

There was a wonderful article in the March “Religious Herald” about Eva Sanders. It recalled the time in 1954 when Eva was presented The Most Excellent Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth II. This medal is reserved by the Crown as one of its highest honors. In December 1983 Eva gave the medal and other memorabilia to the Virginia Baptist Historical Society at UR.

Jue (Julia) Decker Bristow brought me up to date on a few of the ’25ers. She and “Monk” celebrated their 50th anniversary recently at Tides Inn. Both sons and the three grandchildren were there.

Mickey (Idaline) McVeigh Ratcliffe and “Rat” are in Richmond for the winter. They spend their summers in White Stone and their winters in Richmond.

Mildred Jones has moved to Westminster-Canterbury House in Richmond.

Jue (Julia) Mason Rowe Root remains in the Virginia Baptist Home in Newport News.

I talked with Martha Lipscomb Walsh and learned that she is recovering from a fall which resulted in a badly injured elbow. Her sister is living with her, so she has someone to help her while she heals.

Billie (Alpha) Gordon Atwill wrote that she appreciates her way of life at Medford Leas. She is limited in some ways but is sufficiently active to keep her spirits up.

A special treat to me was a visit from Virginia McDaniel Cone in October. She still enjoys her “mountain-top home” near Black Mountain. Georgia Mae Crews wrote of her teaching again at Hargrave Military Academy in English and Spanish. She served as vice-president for a section of the Academy’s three-year campaign “Securing the Future.” She enjoys activities for her church and she teaches English on a volunteer basis to a young man from Panama City. These preceded her annual trip with the Wild Life Federation, which included a stopover in Salt Lake City to see her sister and brother-in-law. The Federation offered many classes to its members.

Eleanor Waters Ramsay’s last letter indicated she was doing quite well. She keeps active and peppy. She and John look forward to a safari to some mountain retreat each summer.

I, too, am doing quite well. I’m most grateful for my relatively good health, for my old friends and for all the friends I’ve found here in this Home!

A note filling me in on your doings would be most welcome.

A group from the class gathered for a four-day outing at Graves’ Mountain Lodge in September. Those attending were Mary Stevens Jones, Helen Moon, Elizabeth Barton, Genie Riddick Steck, Miriam Figs Rankin, Louise Hardaway.
Boswell and Mary Richardson Butterworth. With us also were Louise Figgs Nicollis '28 and Carolina Beattie '31 and guests Fred Steck, Weston Rankin and Harold McNeal. Jimmie Stuessy Mattix and Rosalie Gore Hinson had to drop out at the last minute.

Violet Cervarich Simpson and Bill both had heart surgery in 1984, but they are progressing nicely now.

Thelma Pruden Stanton and husband have moved back to Florida.

Ruth Haverty has built a house adjoining her sister's and now lives on the outskirts of Smithfield.

Virginia Perkins Yeaman and Tom had trips to Salt Lake City in the spring, and also to Ireland, New Orleans and Kentucky. Miriam Figgis Rankin and Weston spent some time in England and Scotland in May and went to Seattle in August. Louise Hardaway Boswell had a trip in October to Tahiti, New Zealand and Australia. Ruth Cox Jones and Dick went to France in the spring. I went with a group to the Holy Land in February and in October on the UR trip to the British Isles.

Tom Rudd and Virginia Yeaman attended the first Douglas Southall Freeman lectures at the University in September.

Genie Steck and Fred attended their oldest granddaughter's wedding in May and celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in October.

Our sympathy is extended to Pat DeHart whose wife, Frances Sykes (Pannie) died in the spring.

Helen Moon and Mary Stevens Jones have moved to Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond during the past year.

Our class scholarship, with the help of so many of you, is growing nicely.

Let's keep it up!

I am sending in news for the magazine. Please write and keep me posted.

Alice Richardson Connell had a visit with Corinne Morecock recently.

Frances Noblin says she loves hearing about her Westhampton classmates. A yard man has taken over most of the outside activities which she used to enjoy doing.

Margaret Oliver Saunders had a trip abroad this past summer.

Lucy Wright Pitts and George had a week's stay at Jekyll Island, Ga. Their son, Gary, who gave them the trip, drove them down.

Virginia Prince Shinnick and Bill spent two weeks at Virginia Beach. Shirley Gannaway Campbell and Merrick joined them for dinner one day during their stay.

Grace Watkins Lampson was in Richmond and brought her granddaughter to look over Westhampton.

Lauretta Taylor Sullivan and Gene joined the cruise crowd for a September trip from Montreal to New York City. Our class baby, Barbara, has a son who was married in October and Lauretta and Gene hoped to fly to Harrisonburg for the occasion.

Mary Faulkner Jordan and Bob joined the Dean and Jane Thorpe on the UR trip to romantic Europe in the summer.

Nancy Buxton Cowan had a trip to Virginia in October.

Our love and sympathy to the family of Phyllis Johnson Pope who died in July. And our love and sympathy to Page Caithorne Spellman whose husband, Clark, died last summer.

Because there has been no '32 class notes since the report of our 50th reunion, I'll try to bring classmates up to date.

Ruth Cole Weber lost her husband in February. She had planned to come to the reunion but had to cancel at the last minute.

Marie Davis Deatherhauer's husband died in Richmond, December 1983. Marie returned to live at their home in Florida.

Jane Little Gray and Buss welcomed a grandchild in May. They flew to California to visit their son and family and greet the new arrival. They then took a bus tour up the coast to Big Sur, Yosemite and Lake Tahoe.

Valerie Lemasurier Jones has had eye surgery. Her husband had a bypass operation on his leg this summer to relieve a blocked artery.

Elizabeth Capitaine Beatty's youngest daughter, Mondella, was married in February in Oklahoma. She is employed as Senior Merchandise Manager at a J.C. Penney store in Bartlesville, Okla.

Cappy has been enjoying corresponding with Katherine Brugh since she learned that Katherine is living in a nursing home in Harrisonburg.

Our oldest grandson, a rising senior at Woodson High School in Fairfax County, was selected to attend the Governor's School for Gifted and Talented students at Blacksburg this summer. His younger brother's science project, which he entered in a regional competition in the D.C. area, won a second place and a $75 cash prize award.

Their parents, Charles Jr. and Nancy, were in Richmond for Nancy's 20th reunion at Westhampton.

We are sad to report that Virginia Tabb Moore died April 30, 1984. She was past president of the Virginia Home and a member of its Board of Trustees for 50 years.

Richmond, Va. 23223

Ann Dickinson Welsh and Goody delayed their trip to Ireland with Mary and Edward Peple last summer due to illness and expect the new year to bring other trips.

Etta and your secretary with a group of Richmond friends enjoyed a late fall trip to Lisbon and Madeira.

Share your news!
when we have our reunion.

Hazel Weaver Fobes and John moved to Chapel Hill for the winter but planned to return to Webster to celebrate the holidays with their children and grandchildren.

Jean Shafer spends as much of the year as she can at her farm in the valley of Virginia and returns to Richmond for the winter.

Lottie Brit Callis’ mother celebrated her 94th birthday on March 11.

Lucille Drake is enjoying her new apartment since her recovery from surgery.

Jacqueline Johnston Gilmore vacationed on the West Coast, and she traveled in Portugal two weeks in Budapest where she met a friend of mine, whom I had met some years ago at a Baptist World Alliance meeting.

Margaret Taylor Gallaway toured the British Isles and visited relatives in England after the tour.

A friend and I spent a week in London and visited Devon, Cornwall and Yorkshire. We were in York the night the minister burned.

Katherine Sergeant Newby
3810 Atlantic Ave.
Virginia Beach, Va. 23451

Our 50th reunion dinner took place in Keller Hall. It was attended by 21, plus a few husbands and Miss Wright. We were given copies of Miss Turnbull’s biography of Miss Keller from Dean Stephanie M. Bennett, and a compilation of the activities of each classmate from 1934-1984. The dinner was delicious and the conversation scintillating. Craig Rowl and Wells, our new president, everyone really enjoyed the evening.

Our sponsor, Miss Jean Wright, suffered a stroke during the fall, and all hope that she will be well and strong again.

What news could be more exciting than our 50th Reunion beginning May 31? That she will be well and strong again in the spring and each commented on her cheerfulness and how much they enjoyed reliving with her the fun times they had together at Westminster.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Jane Carroll Slusser on the death of her husband.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Nancy Chappell Pettigrew who went to Folly Beach, S.C., with her daughter and grandchildren in July. In October she went on the URI trip to England, Scotland Wales and Ireland.

Elizabeth Angell went to Nova Scotia in July and to Switzerland in August. She’s now taking a class at VCU in Old Testament.

Virginia Kirk Lennox is volunteer manager of the Women’s Auxiliary gift shop for the Kent and Queen Anne’s hospital in Chestertown, Md.

Martha Riis Moore and two sons had for two months three French college students who are studying in a school of economics in Paris. While in Richmond they had opportunities to observe American business practices.

Mary Ellen Stephenson volunteers as a teacher of English to several foreign adults in Fredericksburg.

In July Helen Falls conducted a group of 19 on a tour that started at the Passion Play in Oberammergau and ended in the British Isles. Martha Cosby Rucker was with the group. She and Helen live at Lakewood Manor where Martha has her own garden plot.

Judith Hodges Schulte and Harold and Alice Pugh Bartz and Warren went to the Passion Play.

Boo Owens Page and Sidney spent some time at Chautauqua this past summer and Bobby Brock Clevenger had a trip to Mexico.

Sarah Poole Batkins took a cruise to the Caribbean in April with Marion Clarke ‘33.

Sue Bonnet Chermside and Herbert volunteer four hours each week at their regional library and walk three miles a day on the Chessex Nature Trail.

Lou White Winfree and Westwood had a visit from their granddaughter and her 18-month-old son in August. Eleanor Whitehead Straffin entertained her daughter-in-law and three grandsons at Virginia Beach.

Ruth Parker Jones traveled to Disney World and Nags Head with her children and grandchildren.

Dot Harrison Enslow, Bobby Brock Clevenger and Helen Denoon Hopson are grandparents of new granddaughters.
Betty Allison Briel's husband has been ill. We hope Larry will soon be better.

Peggy Louthan Shepherd took her granddaughter to New York City. In July she spent several weeks with her son Tom in Charlottesville. August saw her at Virginia Beach for her usual 10 days. During that time her three children and their families joined her for four days.

The Richmond area members of our class got together for lunch on March 2 at the Virginia Museum. Douglas Gee Baldwin, Jo Mallory Cosby, Mildred Gafford Davis and Adele Donati Bagley were there, as well as Helen Gray, Virginia Ellis Powers, Henrietta Harrell Smith, Lula Good Effrianfree, Olive Messer Lewis and your class secretaries, Anne Walker and myself. Olive drove from Tappahannock to be with us.

Some of us brought scrapbook items, which led to a lot of reminiscing. Doug and Jo agreed to work on a new "memory book," looking ahead to our 50th reunion a few years hence. Maybe some of you have something to add to the collection—a snapshot, news item or memento? It so, please send it along to me and I'll see that they get it.

We had a discussion meeting in an effort to get things started in connection with our next reunion in 1988. Mildred and Hennie agreed to serve as co-chairmen of a committee that will plan for this event. Anne and I will concentrate on contacting class members. We’ll be calling on some of you to help us, too.

Dick and I spent most of the month of June on the West Coast visiting with three of our four sons. We attended the graduation of our youngest son, Mark, from the John Bastyr College of Naturopathic in Seattle. Later on we visited with Rick in Berkeley and George in San Francisco.

That was a great reunion in June, wasn’t it? It was such a joy to renew cherished friendships and catch up on everyone’s news.

Elizabeth Ashbrooke Jackson says most of their travel is related to Hunter’s great passion for golf. They go to California often to visit their daughter and family.

Dot Shell Wood enjoyed a trip to China. Family gatherings take place at their home at the river and in Richmond.

Anne Epes Regester has time now for church and women’s club activities as well as summer and winter gardening, after 36 years of teaching!

Elizabeth Burch Fowlkes’ husband, Norman, is recovering from heart bypass surgery following an attack in February 1984. They hope to visit South America soon, having enjoyed trips to Europe, the Middle East, Asia, Australia and New Zealand.

Dippy Danner Hryharrow writes: number one son is engineer with Hardin & Co., Atlanta; number two son owns Sud’s restaurant, Durham; and daughter Dale is partner in Behavioral Associates—conducts international workshops all over the United States and overseas.

Jane Straus Frank has six grandchildren. George retired in January 1984 and set up a new direct marketing service at home.

Jessie McElroy Junkin estimates their car registers 24,000 miles per year spent visiting churches in eight states after 41 years of missionary work for the Presbyterian Church in China and Taiwan.

Charlotte Saxe Schieberg’s mother died in August 1984. We send our sympathy. Charlotte retired May 1983 as Associate Professor of Social Work at Va. Commonwealth U., but returned part-time September ’84.

Christine Duling Sponsier enjoys teaching piano. Her youngest daughter, Susan, was named Outstanding Young Woman of the Year 1982.

Charlotte Anne Beale retired twice from a career of city and county teaching and guidance counseling.

Margaret Harris Quick’s daughter Peggy hopes to complete her nursing course in May 1985; son William is a graduate of a Texas Bible college; another son became service manager of a Ford agency in Richmond; youngest son, Kenneth, is celebrating remission from a myasthenia gravis attack beginning April 1981.

Martha Elliott Deichler and Eddie are finishing their final year with the Brockport, N.Y., church after which they will move to their summer place in Tully. Martha swims regularly, volunteers at the hospital and leads a library story-hour. Over the years they have parented students from ten different countries.

Irene Strode Luxford is semi-retired and enjoys serving as substitute teller in several branches of Sovran Bank.

Emily Rucks Shaub has lived in Japan, Vietnam and Europe during her husband’s Army career. They have traveled in Asia, Europe and the Middle East. A new career in exports in their retirement affords continuing travel.

Elizabeth Mitchell Driscoll and Robert enjoy East Coast trips in their motor home. Their fourth son graduated from college in June 1984 and they plan a trip to Phoenix where second son is on the staff of a hospital.

Virginia Shuman Marchant’s granddaughter graduated from Va. Polytechnic Institute and State U. in 1982. She and A.B. have moved back to Virginia.

Cally Ross Wiggins is enjoying gardening, needlework and volunteer work with the hospital auxiliary and her church.

Hermine Hoen Phillips has qualified as librarian, in engineering drafting, ophthalmic medical assistant and technician, and licensed practical nurse, plus being wife and mother of three children. One daughter passed the Florida Bar in October 1984.

Lois Lyle Mercer is enjoying having her two children and their families and sister Kitty ’40, living in Richmond. Retirement gives more time for travel and photography while continuing a busy volunteer life.

Marian Wiley Ellett and Julian welcomed Rebecca Gatewood Ellett in September 1984... their second granddaughter and fourth grandchild. They had a lovely trip to the West Coast, following England in 1983 and France in 1984.

Betty Conrey VanBuskirk and Bruce live six months in Pennsylvania and six months in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Bruce retired in 1979 from construction engineering.

Elise Bradshaw Kintner, whose music gave us all such a lift at the reunion, has been working on child abuse prevention and recently became a Doncaster Fashion Consultant.

Judy Florance just returned from a trip to New York where she was fortunate to see the Van Gogh Exhibit and in New England.

Rosalie Oakes and sister Ann 43 toasted in 1985 in Budapest with the UR tour.

Charlotte Dunson Moore and John planned a trip to England for three weeks at the end of August. They had a trip to California in June to visit daughter Susan, Jerry Sevier and their three daughters, one a newborn, Elena. They had a trip to New Haven this spring for John’s class reunion. Charlotte with Bella Hertzberg Jacobs, who is busy with her job on the National Council for the Aging.

Maude Smith Jergens and Fred traveled to Oregon and California in July to visit son Charles and their daughter Corliss and her family. Charles’ work in soil testing is done to insure the safety of the construction of building on the California soil. Traveling over 8,000 miles, they visited the museum at Palo Alto and other spots along the way.

Myra Ann Gregory Hitch and Bob have homes in New Jersey and Chester, Va. I called her in Chester and happened to find her there. She was there to oversee repairs on their boat. They have plans for extensive traveling in the fall.

Millie Gustafson Donohue and daughter, Julie Higgins, traded houses in March. Millie is now in South Richmond on Rockfalls Drive, where she is very happy.

Lucy Baird and Millie have plans to meet with Jane Thorpe in September to make plans for our 45th reunion. Most of the activities probably will be held on campus, where dormitory space will be available. After Lucy and Millie have this meeting, they will call a meeting of the local alumnae and we will proceed with plans. Then we will get in touch with you. If you know of any “lost” alumnae from our class, let me and the Alumnae Office know.

Sadie Sykes Williams and Harry were in Harrisburg in May and June. They stayed at the elegant Royal Hawaiian Hotel and visited the five islands, where they were escorted by native Hawaiians. One trip over an island was by helicopter.

Pauline Corti passi was in Portland, Maine; Nova Scotia; and Prince Edward Island in the spring. In April, accompanied by her niece, Mary Ilene Corti passi, she visited St. Martins. Pauline works three days a week in a small company in which she is the office.

Frances Bailey Gill and Harvey report the birth of their first granddaughter, born in November 1983 to son Jack and Cathy. Frances and Harvey are going to an Elderhostel at VPI with Libbie Johnson Alvis and Frank. They will study flight and plant life.

We extend our sympathy to the family of Alyse d’Avesnes Speelman, whose death was reported in the last UR Magazine.

Virginia Wood Hawkins toured Nova Scotia in July. Others traveling to Europe last summer were Alese Hardway Prince and daughter, Molly; their visit to Monet’s home in Giverny, France, was a highlight.

“Isn’t” Elizabeth Holden Slipes says Sarajane Payne Arkedis lives in Connecticut and winters in Florida. Naomi Lewis Policoff is still active in the art world in California.

Margaret Brittingham Curtice visited “Isn’t” in October. “Isn’t” had lunch one day last summer with Bitsy Epes Hardy in Blackstone and enjoyed seeing her lovely home.

“Isn’t” had a one-man art show in the Eric Schindler Gallery last fall and thirty of her paintings were sold.

Virginia “Tinsy” Garrett Wimmer is active in her church and enjoys being secretary of her Sunday School class.

What have YOU been doing? Let me know.

Frances Beazley Bell went to southern France in May with the Maine Audubon Society guided by a British naturalist. Miss Wright’s French came back to help her on the trip.

Miriam, daughter of Shirley Hexter Corson, and Michael live in New York City.

Although Jack Fix is retired, Hedy Herrin Fix has been reappointed by Ohio’s governor to a five-year term on the State Employment Relations Board. They traveled to Egypt, Bermuda, California, and a dude ranch of Jackson Hole, Wyo. in the Tetons.

Helen Ridgley Gallaher has retired as Director of Admissions at Harcum Junior College. She and her husband plan travel for pleasure and do volunteer work.

The father of Lowa lita Rowland Hanscom has been ill since summer. Lowa lita and husband visited their son, an architectural engineer at Kiawah Island, S.C., and were caught in a hurricane. Lowa lita has a great-grandson! She also belongs to Toastmistress International and can speak to a group.

Carolyn Babb Heflin and Bill have bought a house in South Carolina and plan to retire there. Bill Jr. is out of the Navy, married to a Richmond girl and living in Sacramento with their three children. Anne and two boys are in South Carolina. David works in Jackson, Miss., where the Heflins live now.

Fay Carpenter Kirchman took trips to Florida and California. Her family went to a Kirchman reunion in Michigan.

Leila Petrice Klaflisky and husband have bought a French chateau-style house on eight acres across the road in St. James, N.Y. They spend half the year there, the other half in Naples, Fla.

In May, Anne Byrd Tucker Moore and Don went to China and Canton. They have a new granddaughter, Julia Anne.

Ann Oakes and two sisters went to Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia. Jo Smith Parker’s husband is with Dover Elevator Co. in Memphis. Their daughter lives in Atlanta and has one son.

Because of arthritis, Mary Jean Shelby Proctor moved into Raleigh’s first Total Life Care Retirement Community, Springhill. She was reappointed by the governor to the North Carolina Arthritis Committee and is co-chairman of the Arts Department in the Woman’s Club (second largest in the United States).

After 32 years with the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Anne Williams Roberts has retired and is returning to Virginia. Daughter, Lucy Anne, is a Duke graduate who did graduate work at Cornell where her husband is the operator of the Synchrotron. They are parents of Anne’s grandchildren, Sarah, two, and Keith, four.

Love to Jeanice Johnson Roberts and Bill at the loss of their 30-year-old daughter, Betty in April. Later they went to Greece, Egypt, Israel, Turkey, Skylan and Wintergreen.

My husband, Dave, had triple bypass heart surgery in June and is doing well. You all who had postals addressed to me, please send them with news of you anytime. Thank you.

This spring Kay Hanley Wery flew from Hawaii to visit friends and family from the Pacific to the Atlantic. We were so happy she could join us for our 40th reunion.

Ann Green Sheaffer and Walt drove from Key Largo to their home in Fort Madison, Iowa, via Richmond to attend the reunion. Molly Warner Stephenson and Jim also drove up from Florida to be with us. From Louisville, Ky., came Anne McElroy Mackenzie and Mac. Down from Alexandria came Norma Sanders Granley and Ed. Evermond Hardee Daniel and Clayton attended from Monroe, N.C. Gene Shepard Keefer and Dick and Dorothy Monroe Hill and Stonie were our Portsmouth representatives. Mother and I flew to Norfolk from Illinois for our Virginia vacation. While she enjoyed her Norfolk friends, I spent several days in Williamsburg with Gene, Betty Muller Tisne and Jan before the reunion.

We were especially happy to welcome from New Jersey Fifi Smethurst and Santa Maxwell Edwards on their first visit back to Westhampton after all these years. Twenty-six class members met at the Deenery on Friday evening. Dinner was served in the garden and our meeting was held in the living room. Louise Walters Anderson was elected President of the class. Norma Sanders Granley will write the class notes, so please keep her informed of your activities. Mimi Hill Boynton volunteered to handle the fundraising letters. Gene Shepard Keefer (chairman), Lois Hester Blackburn and Louise will serve as a committee to offer a proposal for a memorial fund and/or class gift. Please advise them of your wishes.

On Saturday night the class held a dinner for members and guests at Willow Oaks Country Club. In addition to the many husbands we were happy Nancy Dejarnette Hanson from Bowling Green joined us. On Sunday morning Billy Jane and Ballard entertained us at their home for a scrumptious breakfast. It was the perfect way to close a wonderful weekend.

Ann Burcher Stansbury and Warren came up from their home on the Potomac where they have retired. She reported that our class baby teaches French in Beaufort, S.C. Fifi Smethurst is a consultant in pharmaceuticals. Gloria Tyler Robertson appeared with her leg in a cast. Santa has four children and she and her husband had just returned from a seven-week trip to Egypt.

Mimi Hill Boynton has retired from teaching and is interviewing for two psychological associates. She has five children and seven grandchildren.

Helen Curtis Patrick has five children and is still teaching.

Betty Muller Tisne is selling real estate in Chappaqua, N.Y. Her daughter, Elizabeth Goldsmith, married Raymond Hilton III in December 1983. They are both in advertising. Lucy Garnett Lacy is a psychiatrist and her husband teaches at Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa. Mary Alderson Graham and Billy have moved to their new home in Irvington.

We were so happy Doris Hedgepeth Neal came from Roanoke Rapids, N.C. From the Richmond area came Betsy Rice, Helen Barnes Henshaw, Billy Jane Crosby Baker, Helen Curtis Patrick, Mildred Cox Goode, Juanita Tiller Elmore and Louise Walters Anderson.

We wish to extend our sympathy to Dot Inken, Natalie Lum, Rita Muldowney Copley and Crosby Baker who have lost their mothers recently.

Dee Dee Howe Kirk's son, Fleet, finished T. C. Williams School of Law the same week his son Campbell McLane was born. Three weeks later Dee Dee's son Bruce, who attends Gordon Cornell Theological Seminary, was married. His daughter, Emily Anna, born on Christmas Day. Daughter Kathy, W'73, spent seven months in England with Youth with a Mission.

Doris Hedgepeth Neal has two daughters and six grandchildren. Dorothy Monroe Hill's son, Bob, has received his M.D. from U. Va. He is living in Newport News and serving a residency in Ob-Gyn. Nell Collins Thompson has had her book Echoes from the Mills published.

I am happy to report my June visit to M. D. Anderson Clinic, Houston, Texas, was successful and I do not return for a year.

Our thanks go to Gene, Mildred and Billy Jane for planning such a successful and pleasant reunion.

My "plea for news" postal brought results, not the deluge I had hoped for! Until you have this job you don't realize how important it is to keep in touch.

Lil Belk Youell takes the prize for being the most enthusiastic about our upcoming reunion. She volunteered to put together for us a Memory Book, but you have to provide the information for the contents. It would include an up-to-date photo, current addresses, results of a questionnaire which would be sent each of you, and a page dedicated to our classmates who have died. This way, even those unable to be present can participate and enjoy a keepsake. She estimated finished cost around $5. It sounds like an excellent idea which you will hear more about at a later date. Currently, Lillian is Director of the Court Docent Program sponsored by The Virginia Beach Bar Association. The program provides volunteer teaching guides for 6th and 12th graders to teach them about our Judicial System.

Jen Lea Guthrie Yancey met in Richmond with other representatives of reunion classes to plan for our reunion. She will need ideas and a committee, so say "yes" when she asks. Jen Lea retired from teaching so has time to enjoy four grandchildren. She and Scott vacationed at Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard and Newport last summer.

Chotty Thomas Patrick and Hall had a busy year. Both daughters were married and the fifth grandchild was born. Four children live near them in Greensboro.

Nancy Gray Lazenby Stables and Linton are making plans to attend the reunion. Their youngest son was married in November on his parents' 34th wedding anniversary.

Wanda Walton Pace and Warren are enjoying Warren's semi-retirement which allows them to travel and to spend time at their beach home. He works as a stockbroker and does financial planning for clients. Three of their four children live outside the United States. Last spring the Paces had a golf-sightseeing fun trip to the Costa Del Sol of Spain with the Paulsons and Cones.

Betty Clement Adair had news of Carrie Trader Drinkle who is teaching in Bristol. The Adair daughters live in New Jersey, South Carolina and Florida. Betty and Eddy had lunch with Betty Edward-son Neutze when they were vacationing in New Jersey.

Nancy Leslie Chambers and Jack, who is retired, spent October at Outer Banks, N.C.

Ruth Latimer had a cruise from New York to Bermuda and Nassau. A nephew's wedding will conflict with the reunion. It won't be the same without Ruth.

Ruth Maris Wicker, who has returned to Richmond, writes that she will attend the 40th. Ruth has two more years as foreign language teacher in Richmond public schools before retirement. Both children reside in Richmond.
Nancy Leslie Chambers, all of whom lost their mothers during the preceding year. Thanks sincerely for supporting me during my years as class secretary. It's been fun, and I look forward to seeing or hearing from you at the reunion.

It is with great sadness that I report the death of Helen Chandler Shea on May 3, 1984. Our class sympathy to Jack and their children. A U.R. Scholarship Fund has been started in memory of her. What a great way for all of us to remember Helen and Westhampton.

More sadness—Robert Decker Kimball, son of Beth Decker Kimball and Bob, died on May 27, 1984. Robbies had graduated from the Asheville School, Asheville, N.C. on May 26. Beth was unable personally to accept her WC Distiguished Alumna Award on June 2, so daughter Liddie stood in for her. Beth visited us in July and is bravely coping with this personal tragedy.

Jane Vicars, daughter of Margaret Goode Vicars and Joe, is in Europe on scholarship from Va. Commonwealth U. studying languages and art history. She was in Florence, Italy, living with an Italian family and teaching their daughter English while attending the U. of Florence.

Alice Mason Cralle, retired in 1980 after 32 years of teaching. Jesse is also retired. They own a condo at Belleair Beach, Florida, enjoying spending time there and at home in Richmond. Daughter Alice Louise graduated from Westhampton in 1983 and has a small studio where she teaches dancing to 100 little girls and teenagers.

C.L. and I spent four weeks of May and June in Italy, Switzerland, France and Monaco. In Paris we had six days of reunion with the P-47 Thunderbolts Pilots of WW II of which C.L. is a member. We were entertained by the American Ambassador, went to the D-Day Commemoration of 40 years, and much more. We were 500 in number and required ten buses. We came home on June 9.

Contacts renewed after long silences and many updates have come in a deluge—what a joy! Bobbie Freed Roberts became a modern day Sacajawea this summer, traveling via the Columbia and Snake rivers to the route of the Lewis and Clark Trail from Oregon to Idaho. Bobbie's husband is retired (parasitologist in research for U.S. government); one daughter is an executive secretary in California and the other is working on her master's in anthropology-archeology. Bobbie earned her master's in 1970.

Betty Rackley Root, who obtained her degree from the U. of Miami, has a daughter who graduated from that institution's law school. Betty and her husband toured Greece and Turkey last summer.

Mary Brittle Hepler's son Philip was married last December to Mary Rebecca Taylor. Lily's elder son, William Douglas, works at McGuire Veterans Hospital in electronics and her daughter, Ann, is choral director at Amherst High School.

Pam Burnside Gray's newest grandchild is Martha Leece Gray and Pam is delighted she's right in Waverly. Pam's mother came from Florida and visited for several weeks. Virginia Herndon Pugh, with Billy and Betty, visited relatives in South Carolina. Ginnie and Betty were both on the faculty at Virginia's Baptist Music Camp.

Doris Moore Ennis' retirement lasted 28 days--now she is a stockbroker! She and her 15-year-old son Dale spent last Christmas in Seattle with Jan and his wife, and went to Toronto in June. Doris, with Millicent Hutcherson Taylor and Sim, attended the US alumni dinner in May.

Felicity Apperly Hofecker has become a professional writer, being on the staff of the Connecticut-Westchester Business Journals and free-lancing for a lengthy list of other publications, including the New York Times. Felicity, whose husband has a small studio where she teaches dancing to 100 little girls and teenagers. Alice Louise graduated from Westhampton in 1983 and has a small studio where she teaches dancing to 100 little girls and teenagers.

works free-lance in movies and TV in Hollywood. Ann Clark Little and Randal have had several family trips to Virginia, also giving a peek at Sandbridge Beach, with their three daughters, sons-in-law and grandchildren.

Monty Elliott Ownby’s youngest son graduated from Randolph-Macon College this year. Emily Holland Lineberry is still teaching. She has two grandchildren, the youngest one another Emily. Margaret Sabine Brizendine and Jack celebrated their 35th anniversary by traveling to England. Betty Hengeveld Bradshaw has received a certificate recognizing 28 years’ service to the Red Cross. Betty’s son, Tom, has moved to Charlotte, N.C.

Ginny Smith Kynett and Gerry in February cruised the Caribbean. Their new sailboat was launched in April and, upon completion in June, they sailed her home from Ft. Myers. Their daughter lives in Charlotte and has three children, while their oldest son is a pilot for the Goodyear blimp “America,” and youngest son stationed in Saudi Arabia. Jane Conant McCoy worked 20 years for Dept. of Social Services prior to her 1980 retirement. Her two sons live near her while her daughter Deb and family are in Germany. Jane has spent several months there in the past two years, as well as touring Holland, Belgium and Paris.

We extend our sympathy to Jackie Pitt Suttonfield and Wilma Lum, both of whom lost their mothers this year.

I wish I could share with you in its entirety a newspaper profile of Pat Adams Woodhead. She is a dynamo with accomplishments in photography, home design, establishment of a horse stable, teaching students to ride and to show horses, and the first professionally organized library for Pocono Hospital. Last May she toured six European countries.

Boo Koltukian Cowles accompanied Sidney when he had a project in Venezuela last year, living in Maracaibo for three months. February took them to California. Son Sid is with San Diego State U. in research and completing his doctorate in biology from McGill U.; Mary lives in Mississippi; Martha is in New Jersey where she and her husband both teach public school music; and Jim graduated this year from Bethany Nazarene College in Oklahoma City. Betty Hickerson Butterworth and Jack have a new grandchild. Their daughter is an attorney. John is a doctor and Elizabeth is a student at Vanderbilt U.

Arlene Moore Moore’s four children are all married and she has two grandchildren. Anna is a student at Columbus College taking computer science. We are sorry to learn that Arline’s husband, Bob, passed away three years ago. She is a librarian in the Fine Arts Department.

Sarah Brenner Rubin and Milton have both retired--she from teaching and he from Allied Corp. Two grandsons arrived this year, bringing the total to three. Son Mark is an attorney in Richmond, Joel is a TV newscaster in Norfolk and Debbie is a psychiatrist completing her residency at Georgetown U. All went to the beach together last summer.

Jo Hoover Pittman and Bob, while on a trip to Richmond, spent an evening with Mary Crox Marshall and Bob. Jean Brusmey Biscoe and Johnny joined them. Good news about Jean following her serious illness last year--she is back at work and is walking well. Her son is at Va. Commonwealth U. and daughter Julie is at Longwood College. Jo and Bob visited Jo’s relatives in Holland last June, driving south to Italy and Switzerland. Mary and Bob traveled through New England and northern New York.

Seth Darrow Jewell is a real estate broker specializing in waterfront farms and estates on tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay. Seth, her husband, one son (and staff) are Shoreline Realty. Her sons are grown and living nearby. Daughter Jennifer is married to a pilot and lives in Sterling, Va. Stepdaughter Ann is married, lives in Baltimore and has twin boys one year old. Seth is into training retrievers. Our sympathy goes to Frances Stuart Baily for those mother/father Christmas Eve. Frances and three other ladies made a mission trip to Vermont, conducting prayer retreats at several small Southern Baptist churches. Rolen has completed 10 years as Executive Director of the Roanoke Valley Baptist Association. Son John is at Averett College and Patty is living at home.

Arlene Reynolds Schaefer expresses her sincere appreciation to all who participated in the class fund for 1983-84. She did well at a big job and is grateful for your cooperation. Arlene and Joe spent three weeks on a mountain in the Shenandoah Valley, during which time all but their oldest son came for short visits. She says she is “hooked” on genealogy.

On the last day for me to receive your mail there came a wonderful surprise--card from Rosemary Lawson Stickman. Written en route to Maine, she promises a letter for next issue. She has one son, three daughters and one grandchild. Rosemary is attending Sarah Lawrence College.

Thank you with all my heart. Remember me for our next deadline for news.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Vivian Betts Lewis on the loss of her mother. To Lorraine Chapman we send our prayers on the loss of her daughter in an automobile accident and the passing of her father four weeks later. Our sincere sympathy to Frannie Sutton Oliver whose mother died in April, and our warmest wishes to her daughter who was married May 27 in Newport News.

Elizabeth “Libby” Givens Pierce and Bucky spent several months in Florida this winter escaping the cold weather. Later they spent several weeks touring the Scandinavian countries. While Libby was in Florida Barbara White Balderson and daughter Lynn were down for several days to visit with them and then spent a night with me. Barbara and Les are the proud grandparents of a new grandson.

Joyce Gustafson Crawford and Doug are still on “cloud nine” with the arrival of their first grandchild. Doug was hospitalized in September for surgery to remove a kidney. He is doing well now.

Dorothy Brandenburg Halloran’s youngest daughter Amy has entered Va. Polytechnic Institute and State U. Her second daughter Susie has a fellowship to MCC and is working on her Ph.D. in genetics. The oldest, Stewart, graduated from Va. Commonwealth U. in biology and is interested in antiques and furniture refinishing.

Lee Reeves Childress was chairman for the Richmond Club of the Westhampton Alumnae Association’s Arts Around the Lake last year and Doris Balderson Burbank helped by being in charge of the Purchase Prize Sponsors—alumnae and friends who agree to buy at least $25 from any one artist. Lee also writes that her son Earl III remained in New York and has his own construction company, doing mainly renovations of art galleries and studios. Lee is Executive Director of Meals

News is scarce this time so I beseech all of you to send me some so that I can pass it on in the next magazine.

I heard from Pat Atwill Schwartz who lives in Huntsville, Ala. Sadly I report that one of Pat's daughters was killed in an automobile accident several years ago. Her other daughter is a physical therapist. Pat is working as a patient representative at the Huntsville Hospital.

Betty Munsey Spatz and Bob had a trip to Europe in June. Their daughter Katherine graduated from Westhampton this past year.

On a recent southern trip, George and I were able to visit Charlotte Huchins Decker and Hank in Greensboro, N.C. Their daughter Susan was recently married. Both she and her husband are pharmacists in Greensboro. On our return trip, we visited with Milly Wright Outten and Joan in Greenville, S.C. Milly continues her interest in antiques, and her lovely home is evidence of her expertise. Their oldest son, Jeff, was married last November.

We extend our sympathy to Jane Lawson Willis on the death of her sister Frances.

I had lunch with Rosie Varn Ruggles last May when visiting my daughter in Houston. Rosie and John have sold their home in Houston and are enjoying life around a lovely lake some 50 miles from the city. Rosie says not of many of you get as far as Houston but please call her if you do.

Barbara Ferre Phillips wrote that her mother had recently moved there to be with them after her father's death last year. Her son, Eric, is a chemical engineer for Kaiser Aluminum in Baton Rouge and all three daughters live in New Orleans. Barbara is enjoying being a "cottage industry." She has her "Battered Brush" business set up in her home and enjoys doing folk art portraits in the style of the early 1800s to go with antiques and the "country" look.

Jackie Gerson Lowenstein and her husband have an Early American and Colonial Specialty Furniture store in Richmond. She is the bookkeeper. Their oldest son, Henry, received his Ph.D. in Labor Relations from the U. of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, and is a professor in the business school of the U. of Illinois, Chicago campus. Jackie's mother, who is almost 86, just flew to Chicago with her to see their first grandchild and great-grandchild. Jackie's second son, Lee, is a Va. Polytechnic Institute and State U. graduate. He has started his own carpentry and framing business in Rich mond. The third child, Molly Ann, is married to an attorney and lives in Los Angeles. Molly has one more year at U. of California/Los Angeles toward receiving her master's in library science, with a specialty in legal library work. Their youngest son, Sam, is completing three years of a four-year stint in the Air Force and is stationed at Travis AFB near San Francisco. He is a computer specialist and works on the C5 transport. Jackie has had two visits in the past five years from Anne Holmes de Faria who still lives in Germany. Anne's husband is an international lawyer and they have two children.

Eleanor Lee Persons Hays sent a birth announcement of her second grandchild, Amber Hays Stark, born to her daughter, Linda. The birth announcement was made by American Greetings, the company Lee works for part-time as a merchandiser for six stores in the Crystal City area of Arлин ton, Va. Lee enjoyed the article in the last magazine about Dizzy Stuart-Alexander.

In June, Rob, Annie and I flew to London, where we had a great reunion with classmates from the British Staff College where we were stationed in 1966. It was Annie's first trip to England so I had to give her the quick tour. From there we flew to Rotterdam with friends and caught a boat that took us on a three-day trip up the Rhine River. We got off in Heidelberg and spent a week with friends who are stationed here. Then we returned to England and spent a weekend in Bath. From there, Annie and I returned home and Rob went on to Bonn, West Germany, for a conference. I then flew out to Sacramen to check on my parents who are celebrating their 83rd birthdays this year. They are joining us this year for Christ mas so they can enjoy the great-grandchildren. When I returned to Fairfax, we all repacked suitcases and Rob, Annie and I drove to Jacksonville, Fla. to welcome our second granddaughter. Then our son Chip, wife Missy and daughter Katie joined us in Florida. They drove back to Fairfax with me and we enjoyed their two weeks with us and her parents in Springfield. I start back to school Aug. 17. I have been transferred to Fairview School and will move from third grade back to first grade, which is my favorite.

Our 30th reunion was lots of fun for those who were able to attend. We missed all of you who missed it! Nancy Baumgardner Werner arranged a fine get-together on Friday night in the Tower Room for a party. During the evening, slides of scenes of our vintage and of the present day campuses were shown, which were interesting to see when sandwiched in among the chatter. Claire Millhiser Rosenbaum entertained the crowd on Saturday night at their new home in Manakin-Sabot.

Polly Newman Smith's and John
Ran’s daughter, Jane, was married to Kent Dodge on the Saturday of our reunion weekend; Susie Kegan Nuttle and her daughter, Louise, were traveling in England; Barbara Bull Tull and Dickie were in France and Spain. Cos Washburn Barnes and Harry made the Friday night gathering but had to leave Saturday to attend his parents’ 60th wedding anniversary.

Those present on Friday were Macoun Day Banks, Mary Lou Gilbert Dorsey, Beverly French Dunn, Nancy Graham Harrell, Laura Mapp, Ruth Zehner Seibold, Shirley Ward Wingfield, Cos Washburn Barnes, Marcella Hammock Bullock, Sara Sherman Cowherd, Betty Garter Lane, Beverly Fiddy Drer, Sue Perry Downing, Billie Bryan Mackie, Claire Millisher Rosenbaum, Betty Fleet Schmutz and I.

I visited with Jo Sue Leonard Simpson and Rem, Susie Kegan Nuttle and Bill, Betty Rosenberger Allen and Joe, Barbara Bull Tull and Dickie, and Edie Jackson Jones at the Simpson’s place on the Eastern Shore at the end of the summer.

New class officers were named for the next five years. Nancy Graham Harrell is president, Beverly Fiddy Drer is fund chairman and I am secretary.

Phyllis Ann Markey Goldman breeds dogs and owns the winner of the 1984 Bichon Frise Club of America Specialty. Since 1973, she has been involved with this breed of dog. Laurie, her oldest child, is married and teaches nursery school. Hal graduated from the U. of Delaware and Irene has completed her freshman year at Brown U.

I helped write my church’s centennial history and work with the Virginia Library Association’s Public Relations Committee, do some speech writing and substitute teaching. Beverley Burke McGhee writes technical manuals for robot operators. Betty Rosenberger Allen works in Joe’s travel agency, Susie Nuttle is manager of a local corporation. Jo Sue Simpson teaches elementary school; Edie Jones works for better schools in Greensboro; Beverly Lou Kendall West and family were at Rehoboth Beach, Del., for a 25th reunion of the members of the house. Her son Glenn, 14, is into many activities back home in Colorado.

Shirley Hart Evans has been in the travel business for three years. In April she went to Colorado for a ski trip.

Virginia B. Marden 1531 Sproutly St. Portsmouth, Va. 23704

A tip of the hat to those 35 class members who gave $17,000 to the Alumnae Fund.

Sympathy is extended to Joy Winstead on the death of her father.

Anne Black Tallafarros has taken early retirement as an elementary school supervisor.

Carolyn Neale Lindsay reports that daughter Jeanie graduated from William and Mary in May and that her wedding reception was held at Keller Hall. Carolyn continues in her position at Children’s Hospital and Jim is on Va. Commonwealth U. faculty. She and her three daughters were nurses in the TV film “Kennedy.”

Barbara Reynolds Orrell visited Hawaii during the summer.

Betty Jean Parrish Knott joins me in reminding you that 1985 will bring our 30th reunion. Start thinking about this event and details will be sent to you when dates and plans are set.

Edith Borjes Greer is living in Roanoke, Virginia, having been transferred with her husband from northern Virginia.

Betty Brinkley Hayward sends news of Jane and David, her high school students, her own tennis and bowling activities and general life in Madison, Wis.

Barbara Pratt Buley and her family spent the summer in Germany and returned to U.Va. in the fall. Of the other sons, Gordon works in Richmond, Richard and wife are in Texas and Jerry and wife are in Culpeper where he is practicing law.

Betty Lou Kendall West and family were at Rehoboth Beach, Del., for a 25th reunion of the members of the house. Her son Glenn, 14, is into many activities back home in Colorado.

Shirley Hart Evans has been in the travel business for three years. In April she went to Colorado for a ski trip. sympathy were sent to her son and her classmates and friends who wish to do so of Westhampton College in her memory. As Francis and Roberta Taylor attended the 25th reunion, many of us were saddened to learn of the tragic death of Arlene Olsen Jones on Oct. 26. Arlene was among those who attended the 25th reunion, so many of us had seen her then. Expressions of our sympathy were sent to her son and her mother, and a gift from the class was made to the Memorial Endowment Fund of Westhampton College in her memory. Classmates and friends who wish to do so may also make gifts in her memory to that fund; and when such gifts reach $100, her name will be entered in the Book of Remembrance.

We extend our sympathy to Martha Jordan Chukinas whose father died in October. Fifty of us and our good friend Augusta Chapman attended the 25th reunion; and 15 of us (plus the daughter of Dzintina Klaupiks Infante who entered Westhampton as a freshman this year) stayed in North Court. We enjoyed dinner Friday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Modlin (who, unfortunately for us, were away attending his 50th reunion). We were well entertained by Betsy Minor McCommon who sang and played her guitar. Saturday we were delighted to see Elizabeth Ramos Dunham receive the Distinguished Alumnae Award at the alumnae luncheon. That evening husbands and dates joined us for a fun cocktail buffet at the home of Jerry and Mary Trew Biddlecomb Lindquist. A rematch has been called for by both sides of a tennis match—Barbara Dulin Polis and Peggy Dulin Crews vs. Bonnie Haynie Lewis and B.B. Harvey Strum.

Beverly Wine Bowers' twin daughters were chosen to attend Virginia's Governor's School for the Gifted. Tammy was at Va. Polytechnic Institute and State U. and Cindy at Mary Washington. Paige and Sibby Haddock Young, trained by the home ministries department of the Southern Baptist Convention to lead marriage enrichment retreats, have already led several. Sibby is teaching algebra half days and Paige is Chairman of the School Board.

Pat MacDonald Allen, who missed our reunion, is to celebrate the graduation from high school of her son Mark and the 50th wedding anniversary of Dick's parents, has returned to work in the fashion field with her own business as a professional color consultant.

Both Jo Edwards Mierke and Mary Lee Fountain Ward's husband, Don, were reported to be on the mend after accidents. Jo broke one leg and sprained the other in a fall and was in a wheelchair for two months and a cast for over three. Don's right leg was crushed in a motorcycle accident.

Gary Moore Coleman and Bob enjoyed two weeks in San Francisco, Napa Valley, Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver; Mary Trew Biddlecomb Lindquist and daughter Cary spent three weeks in Spain; Beverly Eubank Evans and three friends spent 16 days in England; the four members of Jeannie Rice Hoddler's family were in California for several weeks; Eileen Cordie Harris and family took a ten-day trip to Oregon; Sue Sybert Ritter traveled to Italy, Switzerland and Greece last summer; and Eleanor Dickson Campbell, Leslie and daughters, Sally and Jenny, attended the Virginia Bar Association convention in Bermuda.

Jehane Flint Taylor has returned to Buenos Aires and is headmistress of a private girls' school, which is bilingual. Husband, Sam, teaches at St. Andrew's Scots School; son Dylan is a musician in Philadelphia; and son Sean is a junior at UR.

Margaret Spencer Hernandez received her master's in social work from San Francisco State U. Her daughter Beth is a senior at James Madison U.; son Brian graduated from Duke in 1983 and is now an ensign in the Navy and is going through pilot training; husband Jess is now a captain in the Navy.

Grace Lane Mullinax is involved with arthritis research at Medical College of Va. where Frank is a professor of medicine. She also does volunteer work for Va. Commonwealth U.'s Alcohol in Moderation Committee, Virginians Opposing Drunk Driving, and Virginia Chapter of American Trauma Society.

Cary Hancock Gilmer, after substituting, is now working two-and-a-half days a week as librarian at a nearby elementary school.

Nancy Kipps Hughey's daughter Jo Ann is a freshman at U. of Maryland; and son Mike is working on Ph.D. in chemistry at Purdue U.

B.J. Stamps Bryant is on Boards of Directors of Brookville, Ohio, Girl Scouts and Philipsburg Community Chest. Her daughter Beth is a senior at U. of Kentucky and son Jim, 14, is an honor student who is working on Eagle Scout rank.

Pat Bramble Grace works for Social Security in Baltimore and son David is a sophomore in college. During the summer, Pat traveled to Philadelphia, spent a week touring North Carolina and another week in Colorado. Her address is 17 Helms Fick Court; she would love to hear from any classmates visiting in Baltimore.

Margaret Brower Almond, Hilton, Kristen, 12, and Hill, 14, flew to Albuquerque, N.M., in June for a tour of the western United States.

Leslie Long Tate was at Wake Forest visiting her daughter Leslie and saw Carol Faye Johnston Morgan. Carol Faye's son Richard is a freshman there. Leslie is teaching Latin to the children of several of her Westminster classmates at Tuckahoe Middle School in Richmond. She and Tate have a son, Carrington, 15.

Phyllis Pollack Yaffe and Jack have a son, Andrew, who is a freshman at U.R. Jack is chief-of-staff at a hospital in southwest Miami and Phyllis helps out in his office.

I had a wonderful surprise luncheon visit with Julie Haynie this summer when she came to Richmond to visit Millie Robertson. Julie is teaching elementary school in Denver and was in Virginia to see her family in Reede. She loves Denver and is a ski enthusiast.

In July, Jim and I took our children, Jane, 6, and Jay, 3, to Southern Shores, N.C. for two weeks.

The deadlines for this newsletter have been changed to May 15 and Nov. 15. Please let me hear from you.

Approximately 38 of our class returned for the 20th reunion on Westhampton campus in June 1964. These are some of the classmates who came and exchanged news.

Pat Stinson Beardsley works in Washington, D.C., as a statistician with the Federal Aviation Administration. She has returned to school to get a degree in civil engineering. She wants to build bridges.

Carole Elizabeth Bradley is an elementary school vocal music teacher in Henrico Co. She is active in the River Road Baptist Church choir and the Richmond Symphony chorus.

Betty R. Cheyney obtained her Ph.D. in music and decided to change careers. She is now a lawyer living in Arlingt., Va. She and her husband enjoy music and traveling.

Pat Dabney Denton is a math teacher at a high school in Hampton, Va. She is a baseball spectator with son David, 10, playing Little League and son Allen, 13, playing Pony League and husband coaching a high school team.

Elsa Queen Falls is an assistant professor of biology at Randolph-Macon College in Ashland, Va. She has two children, Melissa, 17, and Mark, 15.

Mary Lou Moschler Forte retired after 15 years of teaching. She and her husband own a small computer business and she is able to work without leaving her home and two daughters Susanne Valerie, 5, and Christine, 1.

Brenda Wade Gordon sometimes works at her husband's dental office. She is producing a new puppet show for dental health education in the Richmond area. Activities of Scott, 15, and Kendall, 12, keep her on her toes.

Jackie Gates Richardson, Fields, and sons Bill, 20, and Andrew, 17, live in Jacksonville, Fla. Fields has just spent several months aboard the USS America. Jackie works part time for Canvas Cutters making all kinds of canvas bags.

Nancy Rae Smith Scarborough is a teacher in Fairfax County. She has two sons Charles, 17, and Michael, 13.

Mary Eleanor Hodges Stickland is a CPA with a company in Richmond. She went to northern Italy and southern France to see husband Bill's new sailboat. He and son Jay, 16, and others sailed across the Atlantic this summer. She and daughter Sarah, 12, stayed on land.

Gay Frith Thompson is a social worker in outreach to older people at Family Service of Roanoke Valley. She is also active in the church where husband, Bran, is a minister. The family with sons Scott, 16, and John, 13, went to Hawaii this summer.

Carol Gilbert Turner is minister of music at Woodland Heights Baptist Church and music teacher at Good Shepherd School in Richmond. Her husband

Bob is a contractor and they keep busy with their four children; Rob, 18, Scott, 15, Ginny, 14, and Spencer, 10. Son Rob is a freshman at Randolph-Macon College.

Elizabeth Todd Uhl works at Moore Business Form in New Jersey. She does volunteer work, likes tennis and plays bridge. Her oldest son is a student at U.Va.

Billie Lynn Lassiter Mercer, Jimmy, son Jimmy, 17, and daughter, Sylvia, 14, live in Fredericksburg, Va. She works as a secretary at Mercer Vault.

Nancy Miller Holland has three children, Amy, 16, Melissa, 12, and Brent, 8. As a member of the Richmond Attorney's Wives she has become very involved in the Henrico County Court Docent Program in which she takes seventh graders on a tour through the courts and jail. She did a great job of planning our reunion. She also makes craft items which are sold in several Richmond shops.

Linda Bradley Rae has two children, Jon, 14, and Carol, 8. She is Director of Talented and Gifted Education and Testing in Greenville County Schools.

Joan Hoch Yowell is active in Girl Scouting, in various volunteer jobs at children's schools, in the aquatic league, the church and the alumnae association. Her daughters are Lora, 15, and Ginger, 12.

Thanks to all who worked on the reunion. News from the other class members will be in the next even column.

Harriet Mann Tomlinson, Ed and Susan, 16, and David, 14, have moved from Ohio to Westminster, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles. Ed is stationed at the Los Angeles Air Force station.
Betsy McIntosh Taylor, Bill and Catherine Randolph live in Savannah, Ga., where Betsy owns two shops called The Mulberry Tree specializing in traditional American decorative arts. Last summer the family traveled to England for Catherine to see where she was born 14 years ago. They restored a house in downtown Savannah but have recently sold it and moved to an island with deer and rabbits! Betsy finds time to volunteer at Christ Church, Historic Savannah and with Child Advocacy programs.
Tucker Hilley Maney’s husband Randy is an attorney for the Justice Department. Tucker teaches math at a community college. They have two daughters, 12 and 14.
Cywood Garrett Hendricks works in her husband’s office in Asheboro, N.C., and has two daughters, Ginger, 6, and Carrie, 3. Both girls are on the Y Midget Swim team and take gymnastics. She keeps in touch with Carol Hinrichs Buskirk, Drannor and their daughter, Martha, 6. She sees Mary Ann Biggs Furniss and John. Carol does all types of crafts and sells them at craft fairs. Mary Ann is in a management position in the computer operations with Holiday Inns.
Cywood urges all ‘66 grads to support the alumnae fund — especially the Catherinette Scholarship Fund — because we all benefited from the alumnae funds or from “the thoughtful and caring personality of our Miss Bell.” She adds that Miss Bell would love to hear from you at 2468 Darden Rd., Macon, Ga. 31205. Don’t forget to put your maiden name and class — that’s all she needs to remember who you were!

Carol Reeder Throckmorton, Dave and daughter Lesley, 3, have moved to Houston, Texas, where Dave has a position with Coca-Cola Foods Division. Carol writes that Sharon Foster Burdick has been a godsend in helping them ease the transition to a new and strange city.

Several '73's had a mini-reunion at Maryanne Ryczak Casterline's home in Fairfax in July. Present were Maryanne, Sharon Foster Burdick, Carol Reeder Throckmorton, Betsy Davis Bushkar, Kelly Hardy, Barbie and Carol Baker, Laurel Faile Scarry and eight children ages 5 and under. The children were supervised for play by Bill Casterline.

Donna Kingery Hudgins and Carter have moved to Fredericksburg, Va., where Carter is the Director of the Historic Preservation Department at Mary Washington College. Carter received his Ph.D. in history from William and Mary in May 1984.

Dr. Susan Stuart Brown has accepted a position as consultant with Blue Cross/Blue Shield in Chicago.

Judith Roberts Willis and Craig live in Atlanta. She is a senior budget and management analyst with Dekalb County and mother to step-son Cleve, 10. Craig is an assistant vice president with C&S Bank.

Libby Hodges Kumin and Danny visited us in August. Libby began her second year of law school this fall and worked for a law firm in Concord, N.H., last summer.

I am enjoying my "retirement" and have discovered this summer after working in Mitch's office for two weeks that I don't want to be a legal secretary and after renovating a small room at home that I am not cut out to be a painter, carpenter or paperhanger. It looks like back to teaching when Greg, 5, and Ben, 3, are older!

Hilary Recht
RD 3 Tunnel Road
Newtown, Conn. 06470

I will be your class secretary for the UR Magazine's "Classnotes" section. Please let me know where you are and what you are doing so other alumnae can catch up on your accomplishments. Please send me your news so I can submit it for publication. Our class notes will appear in two out of the four issues. Remember, people like to read about people they know, so any news is important!

Also, please return your alumnae form to Mrs. Thorpe in the alumnae office if you haven't already done so. Thank you!
