Editor's Comment

Change is in the wind at the University of Richmond. You can feel it as you walk about the beautiful, rolling campus. There is a feeling of excitement and anticipation.

Some of the changes are immediately noticeable—the new 225 bed Lakeside dormitory for men and the excavation and construction at the site of the new athletic center.

But other changes, not so readily seen by the casual visitor, are also taking place. And these changes should have great effect on the way the university lives and works.

Several new persons have been hired to help relieve many of the burdensome duties of the administration. A university business manager, a personnel director, a controller, an executive director of development and his staff of four have been hired during the past year. These new persons are making it possible for the university's top leaders to concentrate their energies on the subject which most needs their attention, the job of guiding the university to a position ranking with the nation's best.

Another change will be quite evident as you leaf through this issue of the University Bulletin. As the new editor, I hope you will like the changes in format and style. I will be happy to receive your comments.

A Search for Relevance

Plotting orientation activities at the University would have taken a map of the city and enough pin-pointing flags to make the map resemble the strategy board of the European Theater.

Allies were faculty, upper classmen and Freshmen successfully united against time. Their mission: Survey and invade as many spheres of relevant knowledge as possible within one week.

This year the battle grounds were on bold new fronts in addition to the old one of successful introduction to college.

At Richmond College there were straight-from-the-shoulder talks and discussions on "How the University Lives and works," "Coping in College: Sex, Drugs and Stress," "Study Skills and Reference Skills," "Student Politics on Campus," "Alienation Today: Why the Generation Gap?" "Student Culture and Academic Effort," "The New Morality," "The Rights and Responsibilities of Students," "National Student Political Movements" and others. Experts from the city and a deputy assistant attorney general from Washington lent further scope.

Westhampton College joined in these and undertook, in addition, 10 seminars based on "Concept of the 20th Century." Divided voluntarily into groups led by faculty advisors, each seminar had some 20 participants among the Freshmen who had signed up during the summer. Armed with background material gleaned from suggested... books, the students studied “Existentialism Imagination,” “An Introduction to Art,” “Why Theater,” “The New Morality,” “What’s New in Music,” “Human Biology in the 20th Century,” “Knowledge for Survival in the 70s” “History, Revolutions—Then and Now,” “The Crisis in the City,” and “The Nature of Man.” No You-Me-and-The-Book sessions these! The seminars of two formal meetings allowed for a third to be fixed by the participants; hence the implication of a non-terminal program. During the second session of the art seminar, students toured the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts with a guide; they enthusiastically voted for a third session of experimentation in the art department.

A tour of the A. H. Robins production and research departments highlighted the “Knowledge for Survival in the 70’s” seminary. The crisis in the city was seen firsthand on a tour that included contrasting residential neighborhoods, industrial areas and illustrative spots along the James River, as well as traditional landmarks and historical data.

The deans of students in the two divisions of the University explained the innovations with a justifiable trace of pride. “The outcome of an evaluation between freshman and faculty last year was a strong feeling that our orientation needed more emphasis on meaty, intellectual matters,” said William E. Baker of Richmond College. “This meant confrontation of the problems that bother students as members of the university and as people. It was agreed that lectures were not the whole answer; we needed group interaction, and we needed individual concern. We only had two big meetings and the rest were voluntary small groups.”

“Freshmen expect some sort of intellectual experience from college even in the first week,” said Westhampton’s Miss Clara M. Keith, quickly pinpointing the value of a freshman’s characteristic eagerness to learn. “In structuring this experience, we hoped to lay the foundation for development of skills of reasoning, critical and creative, and to encourage the results to carry over into classroom experience later. We selected a broad topic for our seminars,” she continued, “to give information from the viewpoint of many disciplines—humanities, fine arts, science, technology, history, sociology.”

Dr. Austin E. Grigg, Dean of Richmond College, noted during his address early in the orientation week, “Why do we in higher education live and work? We exist in order that man may study himself, his creations, his universe and the ideas man has recorded about the nature of existence. We are here to help you to grow and to expand your insights. We are knowledge curators and mind stretchers and riddle seekers. We are engaged in the most exciting venture of all—to help you to find your answer to what existence is all about.”
Alumnae-Alumni Will Honor Dr. Modlin at “An Evening with the President”

Alumni, alumnae and parents in several Virginia cities and Washington, D.C., have the opportunity to share a delightful evening of conversation, good food and serious talk about the University of Richmond with Dr. and Mrs. George M. Modlin.

Dr. and Mrs. Modlin are being honored during special alumnae-alumni dinner meetings in Norfolk, Washington, D.C., Roanoke, the Peninsula, Fredericksburg, Lynchburg and Martinsville.

“An Evening With The President” will feature a social hour prior to dinner.

After dinner, Dr. Modlin will talk about his experiences as president of the University of Richmond.

Dr. Modlin's valedictory tour will offer an opportunity for former students to enjoy his comments on the quarter-century he has directed the affairs of the university. In his 25 years as president, the University of Richmond has added 13 major buildings and the student body has grown from 2,296 to approximately 7,000 enrolled in the current session. At the same time, the university’s endowment has grown from approximately $3 million to more than $51,000,000. It certainly has been a great era of growth for the university. There were many challenges for Dr. Modlin.

All alumnae and alumni are encouraged to attend “An Evening With The President” when it occurs in their areas. The dates and cities where the meetings will be held are:

- October 22 ................ Norfolk
- October 29 ................ Washington
- November 17 ............. Roanoke
- November 24 ............ Fredericksburg
- December 3 ............ Lynchburg
- December 8 ............ Peninsula
- December 10 .......... Martinsville

Specific details as to time and meeting locations will be publicized by local Alumnae-Alumni leaders.

Search is on for New President

Students and faculty are aiding the Selection Committee in the search for a new president to replace Dr. Modlin, who has announced his retirement to be effective on or before June 30, 1971.

A committee of five faculty members and seven trustees is undertaking the mammoth job of considering the qualifications of what could number several hundred candidates.

The faculty members represent the faculties of Westhampton College, Richmond College, the School of Business Administration, the T. C. Williams School of Law, and University College. Members of the faculties of these divisions have been invited to submit the names of persons whom they wish to be considered.

Students too have had an opportunity to voice their opinions to the Selection Committee. The presidents of the student governments of the University have met with members of the committee after discussing candidates with their constituencies.

Alumni have been encouraged to submit the names of prospective candidates.

Dr. Robert T. Marsh, Jr., Rector of the Board of Trustees, has requested that any persons who desire to suggest candidates for the University presidency should submit those names with complete biographical information to the Selection Committee. This information may be sent to Dean C. J. Gray, Secretary, Selection Committee, University of Richmond, Virginia 23173.
Emphasizing Quality Education is a fitting theme for the New Annual Giving Program,” announced National Chairman Joseph A. Jennings, Jr. '49 at the Kickoff luncheon on September 15, 1970. “When Claiborne gave his gift he said that this is where the emphasis should lie.”

The occasion was the launching of the 1970-71 Annual Giving Campaign with a goal of $215,000.
According to D. Chris Withers, the University's Director of Annual Giving, the campaign will seek to increase participation in giving to more than 30 per cent over last year, when $182,000 was raised from alumni and friends. "Mr. Joseph E. Nettles, who directed the Alumni Fund over the past 21 years has built a solid base on which the fund can grow. There were 2,400 gifts last year and we hope to raise this to approximately 3,200," Withers said.

More than 1,000 volunteers will be engaged in soliciting funds for the University in the annual fund drive. "There will be more personal contacts as well as a massive telephone campaign," Withers added. Alumnus and Trustee E. Claiborne Robins will again match new and increased gifts.

Funds raised in the drive will be used to offset current operating expenses of the University, including faculty salaries and increased library holdings.

Among those who will assist Jennings will be Robert T. Marsh, Jr. '22, Rector of the Board of Trustees of the University, who will serve as chairman of Trustee contributions and Richmond attorney John W. Edmonds III, alumni chairman.

Others are William B. Thalhimer, Jr., a Richmond business executive, who will serve as chairman of the Associates, which is made up of non-alumni and other friends. And, C. Porter Vaughan, Jr. '40, a Richmond real estate executive and University Trustee, who will serve as chairman of the new University of Richmond Fellows program, which seeks gifts of $100 or more.

Rawley F. Daniel '40 of United Virginia Bankshares will handle the Telefund campaign. Jack Null '47, a real estate executive, will serve as athletic liaison chairman, Mrs. James H. Donohue Ill, W. C. '40, will be Westhampton College liaison chairman, and Judge George Giammittorio of Alexandria will be the Parents Organization Chairman.

A unified approach among all constituencies will be employed in this year's effort—each profiting by the competitive success of the other. Including parents, who for the first time will be solicited on an organized basis, and other Associates, as well as her loyal alumni, the University has over 15,000 prospects. Each will be solicited either by one or a combination of the personal, telephone, and direct mail methods.

The main thrust will be in accomplishing two objectives:
1. MORE new gifts, no matter what size they are.
2. MORE individuals becoming University of Richmond Fellows, a program comprised of three prestigious clubs of $100 or more.

Century Club membership will be extended to those alumni, parents, and other friends who give as much as $100 but less than $500; President's Club membership to givers of from $500 to $999; Rector's Club membership to those who give $1,000 or more.

"Personally, I am enthusiastic about the new thrust of our Annual Giving Program and hope that you share our enthusiasm. Utilizing the best of our previous campaigns as a springboard for a more intensive effort of wider scope, I feel confident of success. The raising of $215,000 will be one step in the achievement of the University's program of "Emphasizing Quality Education." GIVE and thus SHARE in this exciting venture," concluded National Chairman Jennings.
ADMISSIONS UPDATE:

The Challenge of Change for the '70s

By: Dale W. Donovan and Thomas N. Pollard Jr., '53

In the sixties the tide of World War II babies surged out of high schools and flooded college admissions offices with applications. Admissions directors could pick and choose.

That's all over.

Colleges—especially small liberal arts institutions—are struggling to get enough qualified students. Richmond College faces a serious dilemma—either accept fewer students and a smaller entering class or lower the quality of those accepted and take students whose chances are limited.

Here's what happened.

The population explosion of the late and post war years has subsided, and this group has come and gone through overcrowded classrooms and temporary housing. Government has acted to create community colleges, technical vocational schools, to enlarge state schools, and to a lesser extent, to aid some private colleges. The facilities needed a decade ago are nearing reality. More important, this progress has enabled colleges to enroll better students.

At Richmond the quality of students has increased gradually and steadily. In 1961, the median combined Math and Verbal scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT) for incoming freshmen was 914. In 1969, the median score was 1047. In 1961, 23% of the entering freshmen had ranked in the bottom half of their high school graduating classes. In 1969, less than 10% were in the bottom half of their class (the majority from small private schools). In addition 10% more ranked in the upper ¼ in 1969 than in 1961. There have been steady gains at the higher levels of incoming freshmen and dramatic improvement at the lower levels. The incoming freshmen, are better prepared to succeed.

An even more vital statistic is the remarkable increase in those who complete four years and receive their diploma. In 1951, only ½ of the class that entered in 1947 graduated. In 1969, 54% of those who entered four years earlier received degrees. Better prepared students and a more careful admissions policy and procedure have helped the college do a better job.

With the increase in quality has come an increase in costs, an extremely important factor in the admissions process. Those unable to afford the cost are unlikely to apply or accept even if admitted. Therefore, the number of students able to come to Richmond is limited. Also a student should have SAT scores of 1000 to 1100 and a "C+" to "B" average to expect reasonable success at Richmond. This limits the number of students from which to draw for admission. Recent studies estimate that the number in this group in the entire United States is between 70,000 and 100,000.

As our recruiting efforts have been restricted primarily to Virginia, we are dealing with an extremely small group of potential Richmond College students. We find that students feel the University of Virginia, William and Mary, and to a lesser extent VPI, have more tradition, more facilities, and better images—all at considerably lower prices. A survey that we conducted revealed that more than half of those students who turned us down chose to go to one of these schools. It is an extremely competitive market, and we are not doing nearly well enough. Each year we are forced to offer admission to more than 700 students to come up with a freshman class of 350.

Our survey revealed also that students chose to go elsewhere even though accepted at Richmond for five principle reasons: (1) The cost was too high; (2) geographic location (i.e. most Richmond area and many Virginia students wish to go farther from home); (3) a particular course of study was not available (primarily engineering); (4) would prefer a coeducational institution; (5) did not know enough about the University of Richmond. Obviously, we must recruit more energetically, particularly in view of the last reason. There is certainly much that prospective students should know about the University of Richmond that would persuade them to come here.

Why do students come to the University of Richmond and just what do we have to sell them? We think the leading factors have to do with size and location.

We have university facilities and the "look" of a large school, but at the same time each division of the University is small enough to be personal in its interest in the individual. In an era when colleges and universities are becoming stereotyped as dehumanized and computer controlled, a concerned teaching faculty is particularly appealing to a 17 or 18 year old seeking an academic and social home for the next four years.

We have become an urban oriented culture—the city is "where the action is." At the same time, however, the city is shaken by problems that make living there unattractive to many. Our campus, located in suburbia, offers the cultural, social, and educational advantages of a large progressive city and virtually none of the disadvantages.

Geographic location is also favorable. We are far enough away from the massive urban centers of the mid-Atlantic and Northeast to give the student the opportunity to live in a different region than his own. But the distance does not make transportation difficult or expensive.

The University has improved in several ways which are particularly appealing to prospective students. There has been recent emphasis on increasing students privileges and responsibilities which lets the student manage his own academic and social affairs to a greater extent. Changes in the curriculum have and will continue to motivate, generate, and enhance the liberal arts education. The completion of permanent housing with the addition of the new dormitory has made for more attractive living conditions. The new Athletic Center will offer recreation facilities unsurpassed in Virginia.

We have a great deal to offer students, and we must do so more aggressively. Alumni are an important part of the recruiting program. By giving an accurate picture of the school as it exists now with its many appealing features for today's students and by recalling the traditions and values which still remain, alumni provide valuable help both to the University and to young men seeking a sound education.

What sort of student should be encouraged to attend the University of Richmond? The academic statistics are important—a "C+" to "B" average in a college preparatory curriculum, 1000 to 1100 on the combined SAT scores. Also important is the kind of contribution this young man will make to the University. The college needs students who will contribute to the building of a great school rather than the destruction of it. We have been extremely fortunate in the past in having this kind of student, and we must continue to find this type.

We are concerned with accepting students who will succeed in college, both in and out of the classroom. Although we feel there are certain indications of potential success or failure, we do not have a specific requirement or level a student must meet to be considered for admission. We look instead for evidence that the student will be successful—both for his own benefit and for the well being of the school. Well informed, enthusiastic alumni can be important part of this success.
coach Frank Jones' University of Richmond Spiders opened their season with a surprising 21-6 upset victory over N.C. State but crippling injuries to the depth-shy squad playing a rugged schedule do not make the future look too bright.

Richmond was no match for nationally ranked West Virginia and fell, 49-10. The Spiders' offense didn't click and Davidson upset the Red and Blue, 14-5. The offense played well enough against Southern Mississippi but the defense couldn't contain the Southerners and UR bowed in the heat at Hattiesburg, 43-21.

The 1968 Tangerine Bowl triumph over Ohio University was a great thing for Richmond football but it had one bad effect. It put Rats in their schedule do not make the future great thing for Richmond football. Next year should be a good one for a young team, inexperienced at the start of the season, but with much better size, speed and quickness than past Richmond teams. We should mature as the season goes along because of tougher scheduling outside the conference with such teams as Jacksonvillle, Cincinatti and Maryland on our schedule.

Says Coach Lewis Mills; "We will be a young team, inexperienced at the start of the season, but with much better size, speed and quickness than past Richmond teams. We should mature as the season goes along because of tougher scheduling outside the conference with such teams as Jacksonvillle, Cincinatti and Maryland on our schedule."

Three starters who carried Richmond to the finals of the Southern Conference tournament return. They are Jim Hewitt, 6-8 senior center who was top scorer (14.6) and top rebounder (8.5); John Welch (6.4), 6-4 junior forward, and Phil Bushkar, 6-2 senior guard who posted a 6.1 point mark. Stan Ryfinski, 6-7 senior forward, was a regular before he was struck down after 15 games with mononucleosis. He had a 9.1 point average. Hewitt hit on 55.4 per cent of his field goal attempts (158-285) and Ryfinski popped in 86 per cent (37-43) of his free throw tries.

Four sophomores from last season's excellent freshman team (15-4) will push the four lettermen for starting jobs. They are Mike Anastasio, 6-1 guard who averaged 18.5 points for the frosh; Roger Hatcher, 6-5 guard and forward with a 16.9 average; Joe Dauses, 6-8 forward and center with a 9.4 point and 8.5 rebound mark for the frosh, and Ray Amann, 6-9 center who averaged 15 points and 11.7 rebounds.

Mills says Hewitt was the most consistent player last year. He thinks Welch came along fast and has developed into one of the S.C.'s top players. He's very aggressive defensively. He thought Bushkar played well in the last 10 games of the season. He has moves that cause problems for the opposition. Ryfinski and junior forward Clarke Wiseman can provide offensive fireworks.

Mills believes Anastasio, who had an outstanding freshman year against some of the best frosh competition in the country, gives every indication of becoming one of the finest performers in the S.C. as a sophomore. He has great quickness and confidence on the floor. Hatcher has great natural ability and quickness, is a fine defensive player and anticipates well on both offense and defense. Nader, Gregory to Speak at UR

Auto-safety critic Ralph Nader and comedian and civil rights activist Dick Gregory are two of six lecturers who will appear at the University of Richmond during the coming academic year under the auspices of the University Student Union.

The University Student Union, composed of representatives of the four undergraduate divisions of the University of Richmond, was organized last year to bring to the campus outstanding speakers and to sponsor concerts and dances. Alumni and alumnae are invited to attend the lectures.

Tran Van Dinh, a former member of the South Vietnam foreign service and now a lecturer at New York University, opened the series on Oct. 6 with a lecture on the Vietnam war. Gregory will appear on Dec. 9.

The other speakers and the dates they will speak are David Schoenbrun, former correspondent for CBS and now a lecturer at New York University, Feb. 22; Charles Morgan, Jr., director of the Southern Regional Office of the American Civil Liberties Union in Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 23; Ralph Nader, March 30; and Thomas C. Sorensen, vice president for university relations of the University of California, April 27.

Nader first made headlines in 1965 with the publication of his book, "Unsafe At Any Speed," which charged the auto industry of failing to insure safety in their products. Recently, he has worked in other areas of consumer issues, including the sanitary issues in the meat and fish industry, the dangers of radiation over exposure in the course of medical and dental X-rays, gas-pipeline safety and environmental hazards such as air and water pollution.

Gregory, who reached national recognition as a comedian, has moved into the civil rights field, where he has marched in demonstrations and been jailed in civil rights disputes. He has written two books on race, and lectured at colleges and universities across the nation.

Tran Van Dinh was educated at Quoc Hoc College and Hanoi University. During World War II he fought with the Viet Minh Liberation Army as a guerilla fighter against the French and Japanese. He joined the South Vietnamese Foreign Service in 1954 serving successively as minister to Burma, director general of information and Charge d'Affaires to the United States. He resigned as acting ambassador to the U.S. in 1964. Since then, he has devoted his time to a journalism and teaching career.

Schoenbrun served as a combat correspondent with the 7th U.S. Army and First French Army and was the first American soldier to reach the Rhine in World War II. In 1947 he became the Paris Bureau Chief for CBS and served there for 14 years. In 1961 he was appointed chief correspondent and bureau chief in Washington, D.C. He visited Hanoi in 1967 and his report of that trip appeared in newspapers around the world. He was appointed to the teaching post at Columbia in 1967.

Morgan has been involved in the defense of some of the most controversial cases of the past few years, including the appeal of boxer Cassius Clay, who now calls himself Muhammad Ali; the Army's court-martial of Green Beret Captain John J. McCarthy; and the Georgia legislature's exclusion from membership of the then Representative-elect Julian Bond.

Thomas Sorensen, the brother of Theodore Sorensen who was a special counselor to President Kennedy, was an official of the U.S. Information Agency from 1951 to 1956. During his last four years with the agency, he served as Deputy Director. He travelled widely, including a trip to Moscow in 1962. Prior to joining the agency, he was a newspaper and radio editor in Lincoln, Nebraska.
The Alumni Office is now in Barracks E. But it's not the same barracks E alumni knew from the old days. It's been brushed up on the outside with a new coat of gray paint and totally remodeled on the inside to provide needed office space.

John Clayton, director of alumni affairs, has an office on the top floor of the building at the southeast corner. His office, like all of the top floor which is now the university's development office, has paneled walls, a new acoustical ceiling with recessed lighting, and wall-to-wall carpeting.

The development staff has new equipment to better serve the alumni, and visitors to the new office are most welcome. Others on the top floor are H. Gerald Quigg, executive director of development, D. Chris Withers, director of annual giving, and Ralph J. Canine, Jr., assistant to the executive director.

The old Alumni Office in the Student Center is now the Public Information Office. Randy Walker is director of public information.

On the ground floor, Barracks E houses a classroom, the university print shop, and police headquarters. The print shop was moved from the basement of Boatwright Library to make office space available. The police force has adequate space on the campus for the first time and will have a 24 hour operation.

NEW TELEPHONE NUMBERS FOR THE ALUMNI OFFICE: 282-7746 or 288-1921, ext. 78.

Dr. Loving Retires as Director For Church Relations

Dr. W. Rush Loving, able Director for Church Relations at the University since 1948, retired from that position in September. The post will be filled by Dr. Linwood T. Horne, former pastor of the First Baptist Church in Radford.

Dr. Loving came to the University after serving as pastor of the Hatcher Memorial Baptist Church in Richmond for seven years. Earlier, he was the pastor of the Spurgeon Memorial Church in Norfolk for 14 years.

He was the first to occupy the position of Director for Church Relations, but he did not come to us as a newcomer. Dr. Loving was a 1921 graduate, and he later received his Master of Theology degree at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. An honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by the University of Richmond in 1969.

Dr. Horne, too, is an alumnus; he received his bachelor of arts degree in 1943 after a college career that included presidency of the Philologian Literary Society, editorship of the yearbook and vice presidency of the Baptist Student Union which he helped organize on the campus.

He became pastor of the Brownstown, Ind. Baptist Church in 1949 after being awarded the Bachelor of Divinity and Master of Theology degrees from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Dr. Horne returned to Virginia in 1953 to organize the Walnut Hill Baptist Church in Petersburg, where he served for 11 years before being called to the Radford church.

While in Petersburg, Dr. Horne served as president of the Southside Virginia Area Mental Health Association and clerk and moderator of the Petersburg Baptist Association.

A native of Norfolk, he became the first vice president of the Baptist General Association of Virginia in 1968 and is chairman of the association's committee on boards and committees. He is also a member of the Southern Baptist's Committee on Boards.

The Westhampton College Alumnae Club of the Eastern Shore held a luncheon meeting September 12 at the America House, Cape Charles, Virginia. Mrs. Virginia Clore Johnson gave the invocation.

The president, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones Newton, presided at the business meeting. Guests included Mrs. Mildred Harrell Clinkscales, national president of the Westhampton College Alumnae Association and her daughter, Miss Joyce Clinkscales, a senior and music major at Westhampton. Miss Jenny Floyd, a graduate of Northampton High School, will enter Westhampton College as a freshman this fall.

Following the business session, the president introduced Mrs. Sidney Clinkscales, the guest speaker of the day.

Mrs. Clinkscales told the alumnae of the many changes that are taking place on the Westhampton and University campuses. She and her daughter also conducted a very interesting question and answer discussion.

RICHMOND CLUB
President: Mrs. Gerald Van Ausdall, Jr. (Rebecca Grissom '60), 4516 Southampton Road, Richmond, Virginia 23235

The Richmond Club entertained area freshmen and transfer students at a tea on September 10 at the home of Mrs. A. Ransone Hartz (Carolyn Moss '58). The 75 students attending were welcomed by members of the executive board. Mrs. Charles S. Boone (Alice Clement '60) and Mrs. D. B. Townsend (Betsy Spencer '66), co-chairmen of the student relations committee, were in charge of arrangements.

Again, during orientation week this year, area alumnae took out-of-town freshmen on brief tours of Richmond areas so that the students might be aware of the opportunities the city offers.

After the Richmond Club's covered dish supper on October 21, the University of Richmond Choir will present a program of light music. This will be at Trinity Methodist Church, 903 Forest Avenue, at 7 p.m., and is sponsored by the classes of '65 and '66. Join us and bring your husband and guests (and Green Stamps to help finance the Choir's European tour this spring).

The pecan sale is on, and Gwen Barefoot Raper (355-5352), Tuckie Smart Paxton (272-8919), or Elsa Queen Falls (270-5092) will be glad to take your order.

The Tidewater Club had a back-to-school party for new and returning students at the home of Gay Shulman on Sept. 1, 1970. Mrs. Sidney Clinkscales was chairman of this affair and we were pleased to have this part in wishing the girls a good year. How grand it is to have Peggy Saunders among us! Peggy is a member of the Ledger-Pilot Newspaper staff and had individual photos of each student published in addition to their reactions to current news and events. The girls enjoyed Gay's swimming pool and we are grateful for her gracious hospitality.

Bunny Freeman is serving as chairman of our booth at the Flea Market which is planned for October 17, 1970, Twin Drive-In Theatres, Holland Road and Independence Blvd. We're hoping to raise funds for our gift to the college through this effort.

On October 22, 1970 we plan to join U of R alumni for an evening dinner meeting honoring retiring President and Mrs. Modlin. This will give us an opportunity to express appreciation to Dr. Modlin for his leadership and we anticipate a very pleasant occasion.

In January, 1971, we plan to meet for Saturday luncheon at Virginia Wesleyan College. Arrangements are being made by Helen Ballard, a loyal Westhampton alumna and member of the Board of Trustees of Virginia Wesleyan.

A covered dish luncheon is planned in April, 1971, at Coleman’s Nursery in Port­mouth. Special guests will include Alumnae Secretary Louise Long and a faculty mem­ber. New officers will be installed at this time.

We are gathering S & H stamps to help the choir finance their concert tour of Europe and will continue sending the stamps through January.

In anticipation of bigger sales we ordered additional cases of pecans. The profits from these and Flea Market booth will comprise our gift to Westhampton. Special thanks to the alumnae who advanced payment for the pecans. They are Charlotte Beale, Elizabeth Bell, Millie Clinkscales, Jane Given, Florence Harvey, Dottie Lewis, our Secretary-Treasurer, and Gay Shulman.

We are looking forward to an exciting year, one which will require the support of each alumna in our area. Please plan to attend the meetings and become a real strong link in the chain.

Choir Collecting Green Stamps for European Tour

"Take my gasoline bingo ticket, take away my grocery carry-out service, but PLEASE don't touch my Green Stamps." That is what the average consumer is likely to feel when asked for his collection of trading stamps. The little green fringe benefits have been doled out through many a painful contest of trying to make ends meet. And yet, the University of Richmond choir has the gall to ask you for your S&H Green Stamps.

If the choir can collect 16,000 books of Green Stamps, it will redeem them for $32,000 cash. This is the amount needed to finance an 18-day concert tour of London, Berlin, Munich, Vienna and Paris.

WCVE, Educational Television station, plans to film the trip for a series of documentary programs which will be distributed on a nationwide basis through the National Educational Television network. There is a possibility that British Broadcasting Corporation may use the finished programs in its 17-nation network. International representation hopefully will be a happy consolation for the lost hose, scale or dish!

Our choir is an excellent one and is well able to represent our University. However, to do this work it needs your help. Without your stamps and moral support, the friend-making tour on behalf of the University is but a pipe dream.

The deadline is February. Won't you go through that kitchen drawer and rummage for the stamps? Those little green stamps heaped together through our mass effort will mean and be so much more than they could ever be in individual groups.

Send them loose or send them pasted in their books, but please send them to Mr. James B. Erb, Music Department, University of Richmond, Virginia, 23173.

Poll Indicates Only a Few Use Drugs at UR

Only a small percentage of students at the University of Richmond use drugs, according to a poll of a random sample of on-campus students compiled by two psychology majors.

The survey was conducted last May by Rodney Griffith, a senior, and Henry Patterson, who is now doing graduate work in psychology at Bucknell University, under the direction of Dr. William Leftwich, then chairman of the department of psychology.

The poll showed that 92.9 per cent of the 155 surveyed had never used LSD, mescaline or amphetamines and that 78.7 per cent had never used marijuana or hashish.

Fewer than 1 per cent of those polled said they were frequent users of LSD, mescaline or amphetamines. Almost three-quarters of the students who admitted to using the drugs said they used them "rarely."

The survey also showed that only about 3 per cent of the students polled are frequent users of marijuana or hashish.

Patterson and Griffith noted that drug users might have been afraid of exposure and the resulting consequences and therefore may not have answered the questions truthfully.

The 155 who were interviewed were selected by an IBM computer and only oncampus students were surveyed. The poll included 102 men and 53 women which represent 15 per cent of the total enrollment of approximately 1,900 students.

The sample was comprised of 34 per cent freshmen, 27 per cent sophomores, 23 per cent juniors and 16 per cent seniors, the same proportion included in the total enrollment.

The questionnaire, which included 26 questions on politics, religion, sex, drugs, campus demonstrations and personal data, listed multiple answers in the majority of questions in order to force students to commit themselves.

The survey also showed that 50.9 per cent generally favored peaceful campus demonstrations while 1.2 per cent were in favor of violent or destructive demonstrations.

Patterson and Griffith stated that answers to political questions indicate "the majority of resident students classify themselves as moderates, favored Nixon in the last election, and support Vietnamization of the Vietnam war. However, they are almost evenly divided concerning how well Nixon is doing his job and on the issue of Cambodia. No major differences were noted between the sexes on political issues."

While the responses usually showed no significant difference among the classes, the poll showed that the longer a student stays in college, the less frequently he attends church or synagogue.

The pollsters stated that a check was made to be certain that the sample reflected the views of the total enrollment and although the registrar was unable to supply figures, "he gave us an estimate on religious preferences and on majors. The estimate he gave us proved to be very close to the sample results."

In an effort to obtain truthful answers, those interviewed were given questionnaires and asked to place them in a ballot box unsigned.

basketball is playing extremely well and has better quickness than any big man prospect on the team. Amann has a fine touch inside and from outside 15 feet.

Two others could help. Senior Guard Bart Eisner, 5-11, contributes leadership upon when ball handling is needed. Soph Jim Barfoot, 6-4 junior forward, had a 9.1 scoring mark for the frosh. Big and strong and mentally tough, Barfoot has an accurate jump shot from 15 feet.
Virginians to Vote on New Constitution

On November 3, the people of Virginia will be asked to vote on constitutional amendments which will revise the Constitution of Virginia. These amendments have been approved by two sessions of the General Assembly and go to the people with bipartisan support, including that of Governor Linwood Holton and former Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr.

Why has it been thought necessary to revise the Virginia Constitution? Thomas Jefferson said it perhaps as well as anyone when he once wrote that “laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind” and that therefore each generation of Virginians should revise the Constitution so that it might continue to be a viable base for self-government in Virginia.

True to Mr. Jefferson’s precept, we have revised the Constitution about once every thirty years—something like once a generation. But it has been 42 years since the last general revision of 1928. Looking back over the change which those 42 years have wrought in Virginia—a doubling in our population, the advent of industry and urbanization, the rise of new and complex problems undreamed of in 1928—the Governor and the General Assembly have recognized the need to update Virginia’s fundamental law.

The revision builds on the existing document. While leaving much unchanged—nothing, for example, has been removed from the Bill of Rights—changes have been made where the Constitution fails to respond to contemporary needs.

At all levels, the revised Constitution brings government closer to the people. Local people are given a greater say in local government by, for example, a new provision which for the first time requires the consent of local people in referendum before a regional government can be created. The powers of judges to fill vacancies in non-judicial offices is limited, again for the first time. It is made easier for the people of a county to have a county government tailored to the needs and wishes of that county.

Virginia’s quest for high quality education is bolstered by the recognition, in the Bill of Rights, of the intimate relation between free government and an educated citizenry and by the implementation, in the education article itself, of the means whereby that worthy goal can be achieved.

Private colleges and universities are not neglected in the revised Constitution. In recognition of the vital role which private education places in Virginia’s system of higher education, a new section in the Constitution makes it possible for the General Assembly to make loans (such as to prospective school teachers) to students attending nonprofit institutions of higher education (other than those primarily dedicated to religious training or theological education). The State will also be empowered to assist private colleges in borrowing money for capital construction; no state money or credit is involved in this proposal.

The capital needs of Virginia’s public institutions—such as mental hospitals and community colleges—will be better met by an enlargement, within defined limits, of the capacity of the Commonwealth, on vote of the people, to issue general obligation bonds for capital purposes. Clear ceilings, tied to revenue from income and retail sales taxes, are prescribed on the amount which could be borrowed.

Government closer to the people, and government more responsive to the needs of people—these are the twin themes which characterize the revised Virginia Constitution. From the venerable Bill of Rights to the new conservation article, this is a Constitution which draws deeply on the constitutional heritage bequeathed to us by our forebears while adding to that heritage the insights of this generation of Virginians.
