Letters to the Editor

It is our intention to include letters to the Editor as a regular feature of the UR Magazine and your contributions are invited. The University is entering an exciting era and alumni opinions can serve a useful purpose as Alma Mater grows in greatness.

The recently completed Alumni Report showed that alumni are interested in the University's programs and have constructive, informed opinions to share. This column will be a forum for alumni thoughts, criticisms and plaudits. You are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity to be heard.

The '72 Spiders entered the NCAA District III playoffs following their best season in history. New coach Chuck Boone took over a squad that had only six seniors and turned it into the Southern Conference champions and the first Spider baseball squad to compete at the district level.

The season started in the cold and snow in Norfolk when the Spiders split a twin bill, beating George Washington, 4-1 behind Al Selby’s five-hitter, and losing to Dartmouth by a 6-4 count. After being rained out against Maryland, UR tuned up for its first SC action by beating Columbia, 9-2, as Reggie Dunnavant went 4-5 with 6 RBI’s.

A sweep over Davidson opened the Spiders’ conference season. Selby won his third straight, 5-4, in the opener, and Roger Bowles picked up an 8-6 win in relief in the nightcap. Dunnavant continued his strong hitting, raising his average to .556. Richmond then swept a twin bill from Old Dominion by 7-5 and 2-1 scores. The second game was a one-hitter for Gary Moore.

Two doubleheaders against tough SC competition followed. Both were split. UR traded 2-1 games with The Citadel, the opener being a nine inning heartbreaker for Selby. Roger Hatcher beat Furman 1-0 in eight innings, as Dunnavant hit a home run in the bottom of the eighth to win the game. Furman won the second game, 5-4. A 17-3 loss to Virginia Tech followed, and the Spiders settled down to a ten game SC schedule.

After having a twin bill against William & Mary and a single tilt with Virginia rained out, the Spiders headed to East Carolina for two games. Hatcher’s second consecutive two-hit shutout along with his RBI single gave UR a 1-0 win in the opener. ECU rallied for a 6-0 win in the nightcap, as UR only got two hits. The Spiders stood 5-3 in the SC, and then had to play four doubleheaders in eight days against VMI and William & Mary.

They started off with a 7-3 win over VMI, behind Hatcher’s pitching. They won the nightcap for Tommy Northam 4-3 in eight innings on Kenny Francisco’s RBI triple. This win, combined with ECU’s sweep over Furman put UR in first place for good. The Spiders stomped the Keydets in the opener of the twin bill in Lexington, 13-5. The nightcap saw the Spiders break up a close game on Les Keenan’s homer and Larry Pishioneri’s RBI single in the fifth, and go ahead to win 7-3. Four games back to back with traditional rival William & Mary followed.

The first two were in Richmond, and the Spiders raised their home mark to 10-2 by sweeping the Indians, 5-3 and 10-2. Hatcher won his fifth straight in the opener, aided by Keenan’s third HR of the season. The nightcap was a Richmond romp, as the Spiders scored five in the first and coasted home with the win. The two teams then switched sites, but the outcome remained the same. UR clinched the SC championship with a 4-3 win in the opener by scoring three in the top of the seventh, the game winner scoring on Keenan’s sacrifice fly. Selby was the winning pitcher, raising his record to 5-2. Keenan’s RBI single in the first inning and Northam’s fine pitching led the Spiders to a 1-0 win in the second
But the regular season wasn't over yet. The Spiders got their chance to revenge the 17-3 pasting that Virginia Tech had given them. The game in Blacksburg went 13 innings, and UR won, 3-2, on Bill Daly's HR. Hatcher won his sixth straight going the distance against the Hokies and allowing just five hits and two walks. The win gave the Spiders the 1972 Big Five championship. A sweep of Appalachian State followed by 5-4 (in nine innings) and 6-5 (in eight innings) scores. The opener was won on Francisco's triple and the nightcap on winning pitcher Roger Bowles' single.

The Spiders closed out the season with a doubleheader against Old Dominion and then were rained out at Navy. They split with ODU ending their 11 game win streak. The Monarchs won the opener 4-1, while Moore beat them 3-0 in the nightcap.

The Spiders finished 21-6 and set numerous records along the way, including a school mark in total victories and SC wins. Dunnavant finished first in SC batting. As a team, UR finished first in SC hitting and sixth in SC pitching.

The long lay-off for exams and a case of playoff jitters plagued the Spiders in the NCAA District III competition in Gastonia, N.C.

In addition to the Spiders, the following teams competed: University of Mississippi (the eventual winner), University of South Alabama (entered tournament ranked number two nationally), Florida State University, University of Jacksonville, and the University of Virginia.

Facing old rival Virginia, the Atlantic Coast Conference Champs, in the afternoon game, Richmond seemed confident of victory over a team that William & Mary, loser of four games to UR, had swamped. But errors at crucial times resulted in numerous unearned runs while the usually potent Spider batsmen had difficulty solving the forkball offerings of the Cavalier pitcher.

With the final score, 18-2, it was difficult for the Spiders to be anything but embarrassed with their showing. One bright spot was the hitting of Senior centerfielder, Les Kennan. He went two for three to lead all hitters.

The next morning saw Richmond battle always powerful Florida State before losing 10-5. The game was much closer than the score would indicate as Kennan stroked five straight hits (3 singles, a double and a 396 foot home run). His hitting display gained him entrance to the NCAA national record book for most hits in a game.

Southern Conference Coach of the Year, Chuck Boone, was naturally disappointed that the first UR team to ever make the district playoffs didn't show better. But he praised his team for their great season by telling them in their final team meeting, "Don't hang your heads. There aren't many teams that can boast of a 21-8 record."

BOOKER AND MARSH
New Alumni Trustees

Richmond attorney Lewis T. Booker, RC '50, business woman Carolyn O. Marsh, WC '47, of Richmond, and the Rev. W. Barker Hardison of Arlington have been elected trustees of the University of Richmond.

Also, Dr. W. Tyler Haynes, RC '22, who has served a complete term as a university trustee, was elevated to the rank of trustee emeritus.

Booker, a graduate of the University of Richmond and the Harvard Law School, is associated with the law firm of Hunton, Williams, Gay, and Gibson. He is active in the Second Baptist Church and a former chairman of the Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority. His mother, Leslie Booker, was personnel director for Miller and Rhoads department store and formed her own business last year after 20 years with Miller and Rhoads. She is now president and treasurer of Carolyn Marsh Personnel Management, Inc. She received B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Richmond. She is a member of a number of professional and civic organizations, Miss Marsh will serve a four-year term as alumnae trustee.

Mr. Hardison, president of the Baptist General Association of Virginia, has been pastor of Westover Baptist Church in Arlington since 1943. He received a B.A. degree from Carson Newman College and an Th.M. degree from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has been president of the Mt. Vernon Baptist Association and served on the Virginia Baptist General Board. He has traveled widely in South America where he attended a Baptist World Alliance meeting. He has served on the faculty of the University of Richmond's School of Christian Education.
Nine members of what is to become a 100-member Board of Associates to help the University of Richmond fulfill its mission on a human, academic and financial basis have been elected by the University's Board of Trustees.

The new members include top executives of national firms as well as two prominent women—Mrs. Walter P. Chrysler, Jr. of New York, and Mrs. Charles P. McCormick of Baltimore—and Paul Duke, a network television newsman in Washington, D.C.

Three of the businessmen are Stuart Shumate, president of R. F. & P. Railroad; Carlyle Tiller, president of Wheat and Company; and Robert C. King, president of Richmond Motor Company, Inc., all of Richmond.

Also elected were Ralph P. Moore of New York, vice president for finance of Liggett & Myers, Inc.; W. Bernard Whaley of New York, president of Graybar Electric Company; and Ashley D. DeShazor of Chicago, vice president of Montgomery Ward and Company.

“This is another positive step toward achieving our goal of excellence,” said President E. Bruce Heilman of the University. “These distinguished and influential persons will render a very valuable service in interpreting the university’s goals and programs to its various constituencies. They can alert us to opportunities to attract support from individuals, foundations, and corporations for student aid, academic programs and facilities.

In addition, the Board of Associates will help the Trustees evaluate the effectiveness of the programs and services and activities toward strengthening the university,” Dr. Heilman said.

Mrs. Chrysler is the daughter of an alumnus of the University of Richmond and an expert on antiques and art. The Chrysler Museum in Norfolk was given by her husband. Mrs. McCormick is active in a number of clubs and civic organizations in Baltimore, and is the mother of a 1967 graduate of the university, John C. McCormick.

Duke, a newsmen for the National Broadcasting Company in Washington, is a graduate of the University of Richmond and began his career with the Associated Press. He moved to the Washington bureau of the AP and then switched to the Wall Street Journal briefly before leaving the newspaper for his present position.

Shumate is a director of a number of local firms including A. H. Robins Co., the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond and Colonial Stores, Inc. Tiller is a 1948 graduate of the university, president and director of Wheat, First Securities, Inc., First Fund of Virginia and several civic organizations. King is on the Board of Fork Union Military Academy and the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, the Metropolitan YMCA and others.

Moore has spent his entire career with Liggett & Myers after graduating from the University of Richmond in 1938. He was elected treasurer in 1958, a director in 1964 and vice president for finance in 1969. He is a member of a number of national financial organizations and served as president of the New York chapter of the Financial Executives Institute.

Whaley joined Graybar as an assistant in the firm’s Richmond warehouse immediately after his graduation from the University of Richmond in 1936, and moved up the ranks rapidly. He moved to the firm’s New York headquarters in 1960 and was elected treasurer. He was named executive vice president and treasurer in 1969, and to his present post shortly thereafter.

DeShazor is corporate credit manager as well as vice president of Montgomery Ward. He has been with the firm for nine years. Prior to that he was president of a Sears & Roebuck group in South America for several years. He spent 22 years with Sears.

Each board member will serve a three-year term. The board will meet annually and is appointed by the University Board of Trustees.
“MERT” CARVER The Compassionate Psychologist

By Joseph E. Nettles, ’30

Strange, when his colleagues talk about Merton E. Carver, one of the profession’s distinguished psychologists, the adjective that inevitably pops out of the conversation is “compassionate.”

He is a compassionate man. He is a humble man. The prophet Micah was talking about Mert Carver when he asked and answered the question: “What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?”

Mert Carver is a religious man. The same fundamental religion that he blew out of his trumpet to the accompaniment of his mother’s piano in that little Presbyterian church near Scottsville, New York, is the religion he lives by: Jesus, Lover of My Soul, The Old Rugged Cross.

In the same breath, let it be said that one of his heroes is Charles Darwin, a man who was quite often denounced from fundamentalist pulpits. One of the things he expects to do, now that he has time, is to retrace the voyages of Darwin aboard the good ship Beagle.

It says here that Merton E. Carver, Ph.D. and head of the psychology department at the University of Richmond, retired at the close of the current academic year, but there’s not a word of truth in it. With his usual accuracy, he says, “I am simply changing horses.”

He will continue to get up early in the morning and work in a garden of un speakable beauty. From his garden to breakfast with his Pearl who, with Ruby, his first wife who died in 1965, are the jewels that have given luster to his life for 42 years. So perfect is their companionship, so completely does each complement the other, that Pearl never bristles when he forgets and calls her Ruby, and he is rather pleased when she forgets and calls him Lewis.

From the breakfast table, he will go down town to the offices of Psychological Consultants, Inc., which he founded with his colleague and former student, Dr. Robert J. Filer. With no lectures to prepare, no classes to teach, no papers to grade, he’ll be able to give a sizeable chunk of his time to this professional activity.

And, as always, he’ll read. The 2,000 volumes in his library include everything from learned books in his field to the latest who-dunits.

He began his studies at the University of Rochester where, with some scholarship aid, he was able to live on campus “without being an undue burden on my parents.” After graduating with a B.A. degree and then a master’s from Rochester, he enrolled at Harvard. He settled in Conant Hall, the graduate school dormitory of that day, across the hall from Robert F. Smart, who was to become a life-long friend and colleague at the University of Richmond.

Although they hadn’t completed their doctoral work, both received job offers at the end of the year. Bob Smart went to the University of Richmond, Mert Carver to the University of Rochester. In 1930 he married “that wonderful girl,” Ruby Fellows whom he had met seven years earlier when both were riding a commuter train into Rochester. Ruby, a graduate of Rochester Normal School, continued teaching and Mert returned to Harvard to complete his Ph.D. requirements.

Then came that letter, from Bob Smart, saying the University was looking for another psychology professor. Mert hastened to the campus, was hired by President Boatwright at the princely salary of $2,500, and started to work in 1935.

Now, 37 years later, he is leaving the classroom and laboratory after establishing an enviable record as teacher and consultant. In addition to his heavy teaching load (sometimes as much as 21 hours), he found time to serve, on a part-time basis, as psychologist for the Virginia State Board of Corrections, consulting psychologist to Richmond business firms, and as a member of Psychological Consultants.

As is true of all great teachers, his largest contribution has been in the lives of his students, five of whom are members of the psychology department of the University of Richmond. One of them, Austin E. Grigg, now Dean of Richmond College, after praising Carver’s “enormous technical vocabulary,” his thoroughness as a teacher, and his challenging tests, adds: “Over the years he has been identified as a thorough and deep-thinking professor who has a softness and a human warmth that relaxes students who have problems and perplexities.”

Among others who felt this human warmth was Jean Neasmith Dickinson, a member of the psychology faculty and the coordinator of the University’s Center for Psychological Services. When the little lady on the hill, Dean May L. Keller, would not approve her major in psychology because it was “not a profession for young ladies,” Dr. Carver saw that she got enough exposure to permit her to continue the study of psychology at the graduate level. Then when the late Robert Astrop became ill, it was Carver who brought Jean back to Richmond and he and she were the psychology department for one year.

Although he introduced the clinical approach to psychology at the University of Richmond, Dr. Carver does not consider human beings machines that can be measured on mechanical gadgets and computerized. Psychology, he points out, is the scientific study of human behavior. To him each mixed up, confused person needs understanding and love. There are so many people in our society, he says, who “are lonely, and frustrated and defeated that every psychiatrist and psychologist should welcome the opportunity to untangle their mental kinks. Any member of the profession who lacks compassion for his confused and befuddled patients, should perhaps take a look at his own personality. When any man is examining another’s psyche, his very soul, he should do so with reverence and humility, as well as with scientific objectivity.” And with compassion, the word that all agree best describes Mert Carver’s approach to his profession.

Perhaps no one has ever asked him to preach a sermon. But the piece he wrote for his church’s brochure (it was predestined that this Presbyterian should become a member of Richmond’s Second Baptist Church), is much more gripping than most sermons. Among other things, this scientist says he has “a strong belief in God and in the ultimate triumph of righteousness in this world. . . . What disturbs me to a point of considerable distress is the reckless attempts of some people to debunk basic religion and think they are making some kind of important contribution. It seems to me that in the last analysis most of the world’s problems are consequences of turning away from God or trying to substitute science and technology for God.”

Carver on death: He agrees with the poet that “there is no death, what seems so is transition.” Death is a “biological change and a spiritual transformation.”

Finally, Carver on retirement: “People who are happy in retirement do not actually retire. Happily retired people just do other things and at their own pace. Live each day and enjoy it fully.”
Perhaps Edward Wadsworth Gregory, Jr., should have been a Corporation!

It is difficult to understand how one person could do—and do so well—the many things he has done for the University, the Richmond community and the Commonwealth of Virginia since he joined the faculty in 1946 as professor of sociology.

His significant contributions off the campus have been in the areas of welfare and penal institutions and in problems growing out of the dramatic upswing in the percentage of aged persons in the nation's population. He has served with distinction and courage as chairman of the Virginia Board of Welfare and Institutions, championing sweeping reforms.

Although he insists that Otis Brown, head of the State Department of Welfare and Institutions, gives him more credit than he deserves, Brown credits him with fathering penal reforms that will "phase out" the Virginia penitentiary by 1980.

Wads Gregory was one of the first professors Dr. Modlin brought to the campus when he became president in 1946. The new president and the new professor operated on the same wave length and Modlin learned to rely on Gregory as an excellent class room teacher, an interpreter of the University of Richmond to the larger Richmond and state constituency, and as an excellent department chairman. It is this last role that his colleagues in sociology would underscore. A little department when he took over the reins, it now has one of the largest enrollments and is one of the most respected departments in the institution. Its faculty has grown from two to five full-time members.

His appraisal of the problem of the aged in Virginia, first published in the University of Virginia News Letter, became an appendix of the White House report. The concern of Dr. Gregory and other sociologists for the "senior citizens," kept alive by the grace of God and the skill of modern medicine, led to the creation of the Virginia Commission on the Aging.

At the State level his most significant contribution was as a member and for seven years chairman of the State Board of Welfare and Institutions. After only one year on the board, this "freshman" was elevated to the chairmanship. He was re-elected each year.

In the words of Otis Brown, Dr. Gregory brought "a rare balance of the practical and the theoretical—the academic and 'horse sense'—in his approach to the business of the State Board. Philosophically, he weighed the questions before the Board from the vantage point of an astute, well-rounded, public-spirited citizen.

Brown soon found what all of Wads Gregory's colleagues know, that he has a delightful sense of humor and a collection of hilariously funny stories. He can even laugh enthusiastically when the joke's on him. As it was, in an incident that occurred in Southampton County when Dr. Gregory, in his official capacity, was examining one of the penal institutions, nominally for young first offenders.

But one of the inmates, Gregory noted, was by no means young, apparently a man in his mid-fifties or older. "What's he doing here with these young men?" chairman Gregory asked. "Well, he's a first offender," he was told. Next Gregory asked, "Does he have any education?" Wads is still chuckling over the warden's answer: "I don't know but he has a degree from the University of Richmond."

At this point, it should be noted that Dr. Gregory had an especial interest in the jail programs in Virginia and fervently declared that the lockups in some communities were more disgraceful than the crimes for which some of the misdeemans had been committed. He was instrumental in 1967 in initiating a movement to upgrade the jails by improving their facilities. The 18 worst jails in Virginia were singled out for improvement. As a result, 16 substandard jails have been replaced and eight additional jails are now under construction. Brown reports, adding that Virginia is now recognized as having one of the best jail programs in the nation.

Summing up, Brown says, "The Department of Welfare and Institutions and the citizens served by the Department will benefit far into the future because of the quality of leadership and caliber of service rendered by Dr. Gregory."

His plans for retirement? He hasn't mapped out any precise schedule but his program is certain to include a great deal of reading in his own field and a great deal of reading for sheer pleasure. And, of course, he and his Margaret, to whom he has been married since 1934, will continue to trot the Globe. They've been five times to Europe and know the British Isles and the Scandinavian countries better than most Cook's Tour guides. And they've made excursions into northern Africa.

But that still leaves a whole lot of world to see, including Australia, which may be their next port of call.

Like the retired professional baseball player who gets a pass to all the games, Dr. Gregory has received from Otis Brown a pass that will admit him to all the jails in Virginia. Who could wish for anything more?
The weatherman didn't cooperate as leadened skies and rain tried to ruin the annual alumni parade back to campus for Alumni Weekend. However, Dr. Robert F. Smart's retirement after 43 years service to the University attracted a large crowd of alumni who were anxious to show their appreciation for his years of labor.

The weekend started with a good crowd of 68 golfers who braved a cool, wet day to play the always beautiful James River course. Paul Strauss, B'70, warmed things up with a blistering 71 to record the low score of the day.

While the men were getting wet, West­hampton alumnas were enjoying three outstanding programs in their annual Alum­nae College.

Class reunions and a performance by former film star, Lil­lian Gish, attracted large crowds while a happy group enjoyed good food and good music at the Country Club of Virginia Friday evening. A program featuring University Rector, Robert T. Marsh, Jr., '22, Alumni Trustee, C. Porter Vaughan, '40, and University President Heilman was the main Saturday morning attraction. The three men brought alumni up-to-date on recent happenings and outlined where the University is now headed.

Dr. Smart's remarks following lunch brought gales of laughter from an overflow crowd. Recalling humorous and nostalgic incidents of his experiences at UR, he kept his audience spellbound. While this was happening, the Westhampton Aquanettes staged an exhibition in Crenshaw Pool.

The grand finale was the unveiling of a handsome portrait of Dr. Smart and the presentation of gifts from alumni and alumnae. The Westhampton Alumnae Association presented the Smarts with an engraved silver tray and the General Society of Alumni gave Dr. Smart a leather bound book of letters from former students.

It was an enjoyable weekend. One with something for everyone, and everyone who attended thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Co-chairmen Suzanne Kidd, John Robbins and Ross Hotchkiss had done themselves proud.
The "Traveling Spiders" in London

London has survived the onslaught of the "Traveling Spiders". Eighty-eight tired and happy travelers flew into Dulles International Airport after a delightful week in one of the world's greatest cities and London will always be London, but most of the UR Alumni will never be the same. Even those who had traveled extensively were now sold on the idea of joining future alumni trips.

The first alumni tour of one-week duration left Dulles on May 7 aboard a Boeing 707 charter jet, and from that moment on everybody was pure enjoyment. The consensus was that the London travelers will be signing up early for the many future one-weekers already being planned.

There were some for whom the London trip was a disappointment. They were the nearly one hundred who hesitated before attempting to make reservations.
Estate Planning Council Composed of Top Tax Authorities

The University of Richmond has established an Estate Planning Advisory Council, composed of many of Richmond's leading tax authorities as part of its educational estate planning program, President E. Bruce Heilman has announced.

The council, to be headed by attorney Carle E. Davis of the Richmond law firm of McGuire, Woods and Battle, will "advise the university of ways by which prospective donors may make larger investments in the University of Richmond through a better understanding of both federal and state tax laws," Dr. Heilman said.

Charles W. Patterson III, the University's Director of Estate Planning, said that the University of Richmond is "fortunate to attract so many of these estate planning professionals, to serve on our council. The University should benefit greatly during the years ahead because of their willingness to give their time and talent to our institution."

"One of the first functions of the council will be to conduct an educational seminar in estate planning during the latter part of this year or early 1973," Patterson said.

In addition to Davis, attorneys on the Board and their firms are Bowlman T. Bowles, Jr. of Mays, Valentine, Davenport and Moore; Robert L. Burrus of McGuire, Woods and Battle; Doug Conner of Conner and Conner; Roland C. Woodward of his own firm; R. Alton Wright of Williams, Mullen and Christian; and Dr. R. Rodney Johnson of the University of Richmond law faculty.

Bank trust men on the council are Clinton Webb, vice president and Edwin W. Thompson, vice president and trust officer, First and Merchants National Bank; John E. Campbell, vice president and trust officer, and Frank O. Brown, trust officer, both of United Virginia Bank/State Planters; Robert C. Rogers, vice president and trust officer, Southern Bank and Trust Co.; John T. McGrann, senior vice president and senior trust officer, The Bank of Virginia.

Others on the council are Forrest W. Brown Jr., a partner in the CPA firm of A. M. Pullen and Co., and Guy E. Webb Jr., manager of Horsely, Williams and Webb Insurance Agency.

Three university trustees are on the council. They are L. Dudley George, president of Richmond Guano Co., representing the trustees; Dr. Ernest L. Honts, executive director of the Virginia Baptist Foundation, Inc., representing the Baptist denomination; and Mrs. Beecher Stallard, representing Westhampton College.

More than a year has passed since the University of Richmond Choir returned from its first European tour. Thanks to the generous contributions of many alumni and friends, the trip was a great success. In the future, the choir hopes to offer the same exciting and rewarding experience to its members.

Alumni were largely responsible for the success of the first tour, and we'll be asking for your support again. Our fund raising efforts will continue to revolve around the original S&H Green Stamp drive, however we encourage you to save all your trading stamps as well as Bonus Gifts coupons and cigarette coupons, in fact anything that can be converted to cash or trading stamps. SPIDERS LOOKING TO POWER RUNNING ATTACK

by Frank Soden, Director
Athletic Public Relations

It won't be long before another football season is here, and, for the Spiders of Coach Frank Jones, it gets underway September 9 at Chapel Hill, North Carolina when the University of Richmond takes on North Carolina. The game marks the second straight season the two will have met in the curtain raiser, won last year by the Tarheels, 28-0.

Despite that start, Richmond went on from there to capture the Southern Conference Title, the third under Jones that it has won either outright or tied for since he came to the University of Richmond in 1966. The championship earned them an appearance, their second, in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Florida, against Toledo.

In all, eleven lettermen—including three All-Southern Conference performers Ray Easterling (CB), Milt Ignatius (DT) and Bob Conrad (C)—were lost from last year's team. Jones, however, does have 20 lettermen returning. They will form the nucleus of this 1972 edition, headed by three others who made the All-Southern—Barty Smith (RB), Pat Kelly (LB) and John Nugent (DE). The twenty returnees are equally divided on offense and defense. The offensive has in addition to Smith and Billy Meyers the following: Joe Sgroi (SE), Russ Croom (OT), Tommy Shiflett (OG), Gary Moore (OG), Jay Jones (SE), Drew Tryens (FL), Weldon Edwards (TB) and Joe Brocato (OT). Other than Nugent and Kelly, those returning on defense are: Ken Taylor (DB), Vic Moye (MG), Lee Pearson (DE), Terry Hogan (DT), Scooter Burgess (DT), Walt Prillaman (LB) and Mark Shelton (DB).

Naturally, the offensive key will be the 1-2 running punch of Smith and Meyers (427 yards, 5.1 avg.). Meyers had to miss the Spring intra-squad game due to an operation but is expected to be at his best for the season. Smith, according to Jones, may well be one of the five best backs in the nation and has a shot at becoming Richmond's second All-American performer.

One of the problems that besets Jones is the finding of a #1 quarterback for the departed Ken Nichols. In the Spring game Harry Knight and Phil Burckhalter handled the teams with both doing good jobs. Either could get the call or it could go to Dave Yount, a talented transfer from the University of Buffalo, with Rich Muscarella in the wings.

Offensively, help is also expected from Junior Billy Gene Harris, Sophomores Larry Maner, Trib Hammer, Mike Mahoney (WR), Clay Eubank (TE), Ramon Perez (C) and Bill Daniels (OT).

The defensive line should be reasonably strong although it may depend to an extent on the play of such newcomers as Sophomores Steve Bischof, Mickey Mahoney and Ace Owens as well as Freshman standout Billy Mock (LB) who played outstandingly in the Spring game, intercepting three passes returning one for a 75 yard touchdown.

The weakest area might well be the defensive backfield which will be looking for help for Taylor and Shelton. Place kicking chores will again be handled by All-Southern Conference Keith Clark (15-15 EPK, 5-12 FG, 30 points). To do the punting Jones and his staff will be able to call on Jay Jones and Vic Moye both of whom were used in that department last year.

Just how much help, if any, will be available from the incoming freshmen remains to be seen.

The coaching staff believes this '72 edition may well be an overall better team than the Southern Conference championship eleven of '71, but it will depend chiefly on whether the quarterbacking situation is solved and whether or not the interior offensive line and defensive backfield come around satisfactorily.

Schedule-wise only one new opponent is on the Spider schedule—Northeast Louisiana from Monroe, Louisiana. They will be met in the first of six home games on September 23rd. Two other outside-the-conference opponents in addition to Northeast Louisiana and North Carolina will be West Virginia at Morgantown on September 16 and Southern Mississippi at City Stadium, October 14. It marks the first time USM will have played in Richmond.

All six conference opponents are scheduled with only Furman and The Citadel on the road.

Captain Carl Wood led the UR track team to a 5-1 mark in 1972 dual meets. Wood went on to finish second in the NCAA meet and is presently preparing for the Olympic qualifying test.

A two-time All-American, Wood set a school mark by scoring 26⅓ points against Old Dominion and a Southern Conference mark when he won the 440 intermediate hurdles in 51.0 at this year’s conference meet. He won the state 440 intermediates for the fourth time (52.4) as well as in the South Carolina Relays and Florida Open Meet. “Carl is the only trackman from the Southern Conference to be a two-time All-American,” says coach Fred Hardy. “If he should make the Olympics, he will be the first SC athlete to do so.” Track and Field News lists Wood as one of the top 12 contenders for the Olympic berth and one of the top five prime candidates. Of the top five, Wood has defeated them all and they have all defeated him in prior meets.

The 5-1 season was the best for the Spider cindermen since 1956 when they finished 7-1. The only loss was to Duke by three points. Hardy says, “It was a very successful season. We had 24 different scorers, led by Wood. While we were weak in weights and field events (especially the high jump), we could run with anyone in the United States.”

And run they did. UR set three SC records in the conference meet this year—440 relay, 440 dash, and 440 intermediate hurdles. The 440 relay team of Jerome Napier, Norman Williams, Peter Macheras, and Weldon Edwards capped a fine year by winning the SC championship with a 41.4 mark. They had won the South Carolina relays in 41.9. Their 41.4 mark also set a school mark. Napier set new SC and school marks with his 47.5 in the 440 at the SC meet. Wood set the other record with his 51.0 in the 440 intermediates. UR placed three men in the top five in the 440 intermediate hurdles at the SC meet. Jim Detwiler (56.5) was fourth and Aubrey Rosser (57.4) fifth. Napier (21.7) and Macheras (21.9) finished 2-3 in the 220.

Hardy only loses eight seniors. Wood is the top loss, but missing from next year’s cindermen will also be Fred Guest, Frank Hardy, Ken Popovich, Larry Chowning, Ronnie Gosper, Bill Alford, and Tom Carson.

Guest set a school mark with a 9:12.4 in the 3,000 meter steeplechase at the state meet. He also holds school marks in the three mile and two mile runs. Chowning holds three UR indoor marks.

The season began with a 98-47 win over Mt. St. Mary’s. After a week in Florida, the Spiders returned to Pitt Field and beat ODU, 112-33. A tri-meet at Virginia was next, with Duke scoring 68, UR, 63, and U. Va., 61. The dual meet season closed with wins over Virginia State (84½-69½) and VMI (103-60). UR finished fourth in the state and SC meets.
Ideal communication between faculty members and college administrators would be achieved, to loosely paraphrase an old definition of a university, by placing a professor on one end of a log and the president on the other. With the total full time faculty at the University of Richmond growing to 225 for the 1972-73 term, such direct contact between administration and individual teacher has clearly been impossible for some time.

Recognizing the need for an improved means of communication, the faculties at the University of Richmond in 1968 organized a body called the Faculty Advisory Panel. Each college within the University is entitled to representation by its dean and by faculty members elected to three-year terms. The Panel functions to "provide information and advice to the President and the Provost regarding Faculty interests and concerns as they bear on the life and operation of the institution."

Enjoying a good working relationship with Dr. Modlin, Dr. Smart, and later with Dr. Heilman, the Panel has proved to be a highly productive body. The "Year of Planning" which followed the Robins gift was directed by the Panel and resulted in an extensive report on means of attaining greater excellence at U.R.

At any one time the Panel may have up to a dozen committees at work on matters suggested by faculty members. Topics considered have ranged from problems with the bookstore to qualifications of new faculty members. The Panel committees industriously gather data, frame tentative recommendations, and then report back to the Panel where the entire group decides what action, if any, should be taken. After consultations with the administration, many ideas are formally presented to the president for submission to the Board of Trustees.

The Board has endorsed many proposals developed by the Panel including a recently announced plan to waive tuition and fees for children of deceased faculty members. At times the Panel has studied concerns expressed by the faculty and has expressed support of existing policies. Such was the case when the Panel concluded after careful investigation that carrying of firearms by campus security officers should be continued.

The Panel has been highly effective in representing faculty opinion during important periods of decision making. For example, the Panel offered to help express faculty views in the process of selecting a new Provost. As almost all administrative decisions directly affect the faculty's teaching role, the Panel has been able to provide helpful information to the administration and at the same time to assure faculty members that their voices were being heard. With the Panel and the administration working together in mutual trust and confidence, the nationwide trend toward the union tactic of collective bargaining on college campuses appears hardly likely to gain favor at the University of Richmond.

Dr. Tarver is Chairman of the Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts. He was elected to the Panel in 1968 by the Faculty of Richmond College and served as Chairman of the Panel for the first two years of its existence. He was elected to another term on the Panel in 1972 as a representative of Westhampton College. (Note to readers in the Atlanta area: He is also known to be kind to children, animals and old people. A student was recently quoted as having said, "He is really not all that bad.")
LILLIAN GISH: A Lovely Memory

Glamour and a romantic aura were expected of Lillian Gish. But unexpected facets of the star were equally magnetic—her dedication to the film as an art form, her energy and knowledge, and her keen interest in young people.

Loud applause from near-capacity audiences in the Camp Theater followed the movie heroine’s lecture-demonstrations May 18 and 19. Afterwards, she lingered for personal contact with the young people whom she charged with the responsibility of guiding “a still new medium which is the most powerful of all.” She registered joy in the freshness, innovativeness and directness of the students and noted that they would make the films of the future and mold tastes to come.

The first evening’s program was a history of films utilizing clips from silent movies and commentary. Much of her program, according to one member of the English faculty, is unavailable else-

Who Are Those Guys?

Faces on the Wall, by Dr. Woodford B. Hackley.

Richmond College students who over the years gazed up at the Refectory walls and asked, “Who are those guys?” will find the answers to this question in “Faces on the Wall,” a volume just published by the Virginia Baptist Historical Society.

The book contains 60 sketches of men and women who were prominently identified with the University of Richmond and its predecessor institutions, or the Baptist denomination—or, in most cases, with both.

The sketches were written in 1955 by Dr. Woodford B. Hackley, former professor of Latin at the University, now secretary of the Baptist Historical Society, and a distinguished antiquarian. Although the plan was to publish them in connection with the celebration of the University’s 125th anniversary in 1955, they are now making their appearance 17 years late. Their publication now, editor Hackley says, is due to the “initiative and enthusiasm” of Dr. Blanche S. White, for many years secretary of the Woman’s Missionary Union of Virginia, and with the financial support of both the Baptist General Association and the University of Richmond.

The sketches cover the careers of only those whose portraits were on the walls in 1955 and, of course, do not include the last two of the University’s five presidents, Dr. George M. Modlin, who retired a year ago, and his successor, E. Bruce Heilman.

The hardbound volume of 136 pages is priced at $2.50 and can be ordered from the Historical Society, P.O. Box 95, University of Richmond, Va. 23173.

UNIVERSITY MOVES TO A NEW SCHEDULE

When Labor Day came, the middle of September and the opening of the fall semester couldn’t be far behind. That’s the way it used to be at the University of Richmond.

But beginning with the 1972-73 session, the university calendar will move to a new schedule designed to be more effective and convenient for students, faculty and the administration.

Freshmen will move in on August 24, nearly a month earlier than usual, and the semester will be completed by Dec. 21, so student and faculty can go home to Christmas holidays without having to look forward to returning to school for semester examinations.

They will return to begin the spring semester on Jan. 10, and will begin spring semester examinations on May 3. And another big change is in the commencement schedule. In 1973 commencement will be a one day affair on Sunday, May 13.

Reasons given for the change are that the new schedule more nearly conforms to the public school vacations, and that students will have a better opportunity to compete for summer jobs.

Friends of the Library Honor Alumni Authors

Alumni authors of the University of Richmond were honored by the Friends of the Boatwright Memorial Library at an afternoon garden reception held April 26 at Windsor, a Richmond landmark. Twenty-five authors came from New York, North Carolina, and closer home to attend the event which marked the first time alumni authors have been honored. Approximately 150 Friends and their guests greeted the distinguished alumni who had made their mark as writers. Many of these now are deceased, but their families and living authors are urged to send copies of their work to the University for the Library’s archives.

The reception, a significant first, was in keeping with the continuing activities of the Friends, a year-old organization whose 140 members are dedicated to the development of the Library’s resources. Membership fees are used for gifts to enrich the Library and to program events of literary distinction in the Spring and Fall. Mrs. Evelyn Boatwright Lynch, WC ’25, is president.
CAMPUS PLANNING
CONSULTANT HIRED

The University of Richmond has employed a campus planning consultant to study the physical needs for the foreseeable future.

The national consulting firm of Perkins and Will was engaged to "assemble, analyze and evaluate all data relating to the present and anticipated future circumstances of the University of Richmond with respect to the basic programs, philosophies, and policies which guide the functioning and establish the scope, size and forms of the institution," said President E. Bruce Heilman.

The firm will recommend plans for meeting the ultimate requirements for the physical plant—land, buildings and facilities essential to successful achievement of the university's purpose," he added. The firm will study the 350-acre campus in Richmond's west end, and the two downtown campus properties of the university at 7 W. Franklin St. and Lombardy and Grace Sts.

The consulting firm will inspect and evaluate the existing physical plant as to age, condition, and suitability of all elements including buildings, utilities and services, vehicular and pedestrian circulation and parking facilities.

They also will confer with university officials and local planning, housing, and transportation offices regarding city planning and other matters.

After completing their study, the firm will make its report to the Board of Trustees.

"In grateful appreciation of your support." The Rector's Club met for dinner May 2, at the home of University Trustee and Mrs. Floyd D. Gottwald, Jr. Mr. Gottwald is Chairman of the Board of the Ethyl Corporation. Members of the Rector's Club contributed $1,000 or more to the University during 1971-72.
Henry Budd's Will Said in Part.

You may put restrictions on bequests to the University of Richmond, but we hope you won't make them as limiting as Henry Budd's. For further information on providing for the University of Richmond in your will, through a life income plan or an annuity, contact:

JUDITH JOSEPHINE TUCKER 1902-1972
By Joseph E. Nettles, '30

Spring was only two days old when all that was mortal of Judith Josephine Tucker was committed to a rain-drenched hillside in Hollywood Cemetery.

In Jo Tucker's garden, at her Forest Hills home that she left just a few months before to enter the nursing home, the daffodils were in bloom and the first new green was showing on the boxwood. More than 150 of her beloved boxwood are now on the campus at Westhampton where she launched her scholarly career and to which she gave 18 years of her life prior to her retirement in 1968.

Miss Tucker came to Westhampton College in 1950 as dean of students and English professor after a notably successful experience as head mistress at Concord Academy in Massachusetts.

President of the graduating class of 1923 at Westminster College where she was a student of Phi Beta Kappa caliber and number one performer on the tennis team, she continued her education at Radcliffe where she earned her master's degree, at Cambridge University in England, at the Breadloaf School of English, and the University of Colorado.

Most of the students who sat in her English classes remember her as an "inspiring teacher." Others remember her as a "hard line dean," who was determined to make "young ladies" out of maturing students who preferred to be college women. All agree that she was a lady of the old school. With the scholarship and charm of the gentelwoman she combined grace and dignity. Some of the students whose protests led to the administration's decision to remove her from the office of dean of students to a full-time teacher in the English department, now, as wives and mothers, appreciate her concern for the young women she felt were committed to her care.

Said one of them, "She was like a parent-away-from home." She added: "When a Westhampton girl was off the campus for the week-end she wanted to know where she would be and what she planned to do."

The "rave notices" come from some of her former students. One, professing that her life's pattern had been influenced by her, exclaimed: "I loved Miss Tucker. She was extra special. She was the very best Westhampton had to offer."

Another remembered that Emily Dickinson, Robert Frost and John Crowe Ranson were among her favorite poets, and seemed to remember that Professor Tucker often quoted this stanza from one of Miss Dickinson's poems: "We never know how high we are/ Til we are called to rise/ And then, if we are true to plan/ Our statures touch the skies."

This same student recalls that Miss Tucker, in assigning poetry to be memorized, would say: If you are ever in a concentration camp or hospital, this will be worth something to you."

Her own scholarship, the poems and the prose stored up in her mind, certainly gave some solace to this brave scholar during her last days on a hospital bed. Although she preferred to be alone as she prepared for her last, long journey, she welcomed an occasional friend, one of whom read poetry to her. Always Robert Frost.

She had known Frost over the years since her first meeting with him, probably at Breadloaf, although no one seems to be sure. He came to her campus several times when she was at Concord and she was instrumental in bringing him to the University of Richmond as scholar-in-residence for several days in 1952. Robert Frost came with his great, bounding dog which he insisted on keeping in South Court. In acknowledging his introduction at his first lecture in Keller Hall, he spoke warmly of his friendship with Miss Tucker.

It was she who had him "in tow" during his stay on the campus, getting him on time to his various public meetings and informal group discussions with students. Like many public speakers, Frost had no appetite for food before a lecture. Afterwards he could be ravenous. Jo Tucker confided to a very close friend that on one occasion, when the hungry man demanded to be fed at midnight, she took him to the only place open at that hour—River Road Tavern, a place definitely off-limits to Dean Tucker's brood.

After her retirement from teaching, she devoted most of her attention to reading, gardening and to her church, Westover Baptist. Members of the women's Bible class she taught there were devoted to her and there were few dry eyes when she told them, just one week before she entered the nursing home, matter-of-factly, and without emotion, that this was her last Sunday with them. A memorial book fund has been established by the class in her memory.
Another perpetual memorial are the boxwoods which she gave to Westhampton over the years, all from her own garden, the last of them transplanted after her death. They outline one side of the walk from South Court to North Court. Others are in front of Keller Hall and outside the classroom cloister.

Her final visit to the campus was at Homecoming last fall when she attended her class reunion and participated in other activities of the week-end. Her health was noticeably impaired and her classmates knew that Jo Tucker would miss the 1972 Commencement.

On her trips abroad she began her collection of children's books, her "chap books" which she delighted to show to visitors to her home on Forest Hill Avenue. Many are of Eighteenth Century vintage and some are first editions. They include Little Goody-Two Shoes, We Are Seven, Pilgrim's Progress, and Cinderella.

These books, some 275 of them, are now in the Richmond Public Library. Librarian Howard M. Smith has revealed that before giving the books to the City, Miss Tucker conferred with him many times about how they "could be kept together and still make them available to people in both special exhibits and for study." The result was the development of a special collections room in the expanded Main Library.

Her books taken care of, her garden given to Westhampton, she could prepare to close the story of her life which was one of intellectual pursuit and achievement, of professional accomplishment in the classroom, and of warm and stimulating friendships. Although she would have deplored the "woman's liberation" movement, she was possessed with the desire to fulfill herself as a person, to rise to the heights Emily Dickinson envisioned. That was the reason, perhaps, she said No to a suitor whose friendship extended from her first meeting with him in the twenties until her death.

Perhaps she would best like to be remembered as a molder of young minds. Chatting with one of her former students in her rose garden, she explained that "it is the teacher's job to open minds to their own nature. The student is influenced by his teacher, of course, but it should not be a dominating influence. Education is for all of life."

Philea Vaughan Allen says that after two cruises on the new Hamborg, one to Nova Scotia, the Saguayen and Bermuda, the second to the Indies and the Bahamian, she feels “It’s about time to be on the seas again.”

Carolyn Broaddus writes of her eleven great-nieces and nephews, whom she calls her little stars. She just graduated from the University of Kentucky. She says, “Just report that I am well and loved.”

Anna Lee Willis Effrig writes that since her husband’s retirement he enjoys hunting, fishing, and gardening. She has been working recently lining up workers, materials, etc., for a Vacation Bible School. As this is the year of the bi-annual Willis reunion, they are anticipating visits from Clodius Willis’ children and grandchildren. Later they expect to take their usual fall trip to visit relatives in and around Austin, Texas. She also reported on Kitty Vaughan Willis, who tripped with Mrs. Cooper (Clodius Jr.’s mother-in-law) for a week in London, another visiting the Greek islands, and a third in Paris. Kitty is staying until the middle of June, then back to London before going to her Vermont cottage for the rest of the summer with visits from her children.

Jeffries Heinrich tells of Alumnae Weekend as follows: “I was there for Alumnae College—a most informative and entertaining program. I stayed through lunch and enjoyed renewed contacts with ‘girls’ from 1915 on. In 1915 I was the only representative from ’20. I saw the stone benches we gave to the College on our fiftieth reunion. I liked them and hope the rest of you will see them ‘ere long. I’m proud to be just as capable and vital Alumnae leadership and the quality and enthusiastic interest of the members.”

Ruth McEwen wishes “all of our class could attend the alumnae activities on our campus and especially to our guidance when we meet our dynamic president.” She writes of the forthcoming June wedding of Deborah Morey, daughter of the minister of St. Giles Presbyterian Church in Richmond, to Richard Gardner Hathaway of Richmond, the grandson of Ruth Carver Gardner, our beloved sophomore class president. Ruth McEwen has enjoyed recent visits to Florida, including the fabulous Disney World, and to former students in Georgia and South Carolina.

Gazelle Stubbs Smith was not well enough last winter to indulge in her usual trips but is collecting travel folders again and hopes to be off traveling early next summer.

I am sorry to report that Marie Crowder Anderson and Wallace, who live in Newtonville, Mass., lost their only child, Ann, in February after an illness of over two years. The family spent Thanksgiving Day with the W. N. Stoneman, Sr. family, and in late December they spent Christmas Week at the Stone’s house in the Virgin Islands, at all the historical places in Williamsburg, and visited the W. N. Stoneman, Sr. family’s residence on Cape Cod.

Karen McEwen wrote “Christmas at Williamsburg furnished quite a contrast. Instead of speaking of 1300 B.C. as was done in the Greek Islands, at all the historical places in Williamsburg, the hostesses spoke of the rock paintings about 200 years ago. It made one very proud of America in that as much had been accomplished in such a short time. One feels so much closer to our country now that it is refreshing to go back in our history and become aware of the good things which it has and is offering.”

As for myself, my husband and I keep busy with our combined families and nine grandchildren, all of whom live near. We mean to travel more but I fear we are getting like the person who said “I can get ready or I can go, but I can’t do both.”

Indeed we did have a wonderful 50th reunion and the damp weather didn’t even worry the nineteen who gathered at Leslie’s home for a casual lunch and dinner on Friday evening. The presence of Miss Turnbull, Dean Gehring, Mrs. Stone (Mayme O’Flaherty) and Jeannie’s sister, Cathryn, added to our pleasure. “Book” was glad to have Dr. Dewar, Narcissus, R. D. and Louise all added so much to the pleasure of being together.

The Saturday activities were most enjoy-hurry the tuberous begonias or the lobelias. Where is the rest of the class?

This is the second installment of news gathered primarily at our thirty-fifth reunion. Hope it's not too stale by now.

Libba Convell was one of those unable to attend. Libba wrote from Enfield, Conn. that she had graduated from the YWCA in 1969 and was working part-time as a social worker for black children from Hartford who are bused to school in Manchester, a suburban town. She has seven different schools, two nursery schools, and volunteer work in the Enfield Day Care Center and enjoys her dog, gardening, and bird-watching.

Florence Marston Harvey and Bob had an enjoyable trip to England and Scotland last summer, visiting Florence's English relatives and having Bob show her some of the places he knew during World War II. Florence is a visiting teacher (school social work) for Norfolk city schools. She serves all age groups from elementary to senior high. She has continued her active interest in YWCA, currently as camp chairman for her area. Last year she attended the national convention in Houston, where she was able to see Libba's retirement they used to meet at these conventions. Florence sees Nan Owens Manning ('35) at visiting teacher meetings. Both the Harvey children are married. Bobby and Jane (RC and WC '64) have two little boys. Frances, a graduate of Towson State College, teaches second grade in Baltimore County, Md.

Professional duties kept Jacqueline Warner Warner from being with us. Jacque lives at Virginia Beach and is a psychiatric social worker in private practice together with seven psychiatrists and another social worker. Her son, Jerry, is in his last year of college. He has one little girl. Daughter, Ellen, is married and a student at the Graduate School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Our nephew goes to Panny Frazer Kirkland, Elizabeth Chapman Wilson and Ruth Parker Jones on the loss of loved ones—Panny's father, Chappie's mother, and Ruth's mother. Margaret Watkins Weatherall wrote from Perry, Georgia where husband, Duncan, is an industrial engineer at Robins Air Force Base in nearby Warner Robins. Margaret is supervising the renovation of the local department of family and children services. Her interests center around her Episcopal church, book and woman's clubs. Son, Duncan, is in high school. Judith Hodges Schultz says three of her four children have finished college, the fourth is in eighth grade. Her husband, Harold, is an engineer and Judie is a substitute teacher, also involved in the usual church, civic and PTA duties.

Anna Del Papa is one of our newer grandparents. Her son, Frank, has a little boy, Stephen. Frank has an associate degree in air-conditioning from VCU and is working for the Life Insurance Company of Virginia and is a supervisor of service caseworkers in the local department of family and children services. His daughter, Nancy, and Gretchen have three daughters, a son, and both a son and a daughter, respectively. Elizabeth is in Annapolis, Nancy in Richmond, and Gretchen in Charlotte. Martha's older son, James, graduated from T. C. Williams Law School last year and is an assistant Commonwealth's Attorney in Alexandria. John is at V.C.U. Martha spent Thanksgiving in Seattle with Bob and Hamilton Enslow and has sent me a feature story from a Seattle paper on Dot and her son, Worthy. Dot has repeatedly been county chairman of the annual March of Dimes. Handsome daughter, Dot, is a teacher in the Episcopal church and both of them are currently studying Hebrew.

Frances Williams Parkinson and Jimmy do not need to come in next year. They passed the re-election, Jim, is a graduate of T. C. Williams Law School. Ann is a teaching assistant in child care classes in Colonial Heights and working on her master's. Her husband is also a law student. Frances works part time in Jimmy's office.

Millie Crowder Pickels and Grady last fall enjoyed a cargo ship cruise of the Pacific with stops in Japan, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

Last March I came across this item in Mary Sue Carter Patterson's husband in Time Magazine: "When Eugene Patterson resigned last August as managing editor of the Washington Post, ... he took a professorship at Duke University's Institute of Policy Sciences 'to write my books and try my hand at teaching.' But Patterson ... could not stay away from newspapers. On September 1, 1969, he was named publisher and editor-in-chief of the morning Times and afternoon Independent in St. Petersburg, Fla."

Margaret Brinson Reed, husband Jack, son Mike and her mother took an exciting trip to Europe, from Munich to Tripoli, for Thanksgiving holidays with their Shriners group. They went night-clubbing and took in the Don Ho show. He asked for all the grandmothers in the Shriners' ladies department and then offered to teach the hula to Mrs. Brinson, 78. Needless to say, she accepted the offer and was wildly applauded.

Virginia McLaren Tate and Owen took their daughter, Kathie, a sophomore at Westhampton, to the U. of R. campus last fall, and were pleasantly surprised at how beautiful the campus looked.

Charlotte Ann Dickinson Moore writes: "We're so busy getting educated, Susan will have her masters in Rehabilitation Counseling from Penn. State in June, Rosanna is a sophomore at Westhampton, John is a freshman at Guilford, and Jamey is in the 10th grade. I saw Margaret Ligon Bernhardt and Dot Duke Madden at the W. C. Washington luncheon last fall."

Charles Jurgens, son of Maude and Fred, is graduating from high school this year and plans to attend V.P.I. in the fall. They are gathering the family for a big reunion, as brother, John, will be graduating from college at the same time.

We had a grand 30th reunion on Alumnae Weekend May 19-20 beginning with a very enjoyable Alumnae College Day at Westhampton. We missed all of you who didn't make it back and spoke of you.

Friday night Nancy Parkinson extended us the hospitality of her lovely home. We had a social hour, buffet supper, and elected the following class officers for the next 5 year period: Ann Pavey Garrett, president, Jean Grant Andrews, vice-president, secretary, and re-elected Ada Moss Harlow, fund chairman.

You remember that years back we started a memorial fund in memory of Rosalie Clary and poetry records were purchased for the recital room from it. We decided to do the same now in memory of Emma Bee Waldrop Crickshanks and Evelyn Cosby Jackson, both of whom have died within the past two years. Contributions to this purpose should be mailed to Ada Harlow (Mrs. Wm. Harlow, 2301 Buckingham Ave., Richmond, Va. 23228) as soon as possible.

Saturday night we got together at the Rotunda Club for dinner with our husbands, and had another grand time. Betty Sessler Tyler and her husband were there. Betty's first time back with us in all these years, and we loved seeing her! Classmates and husbands were there - we're already looking forward to 5 years from now, and our 35th.

There were 18 of us at Nancy's and 25 at the Rotunda Club. Among those who returned were Nancy, Ethel, Mary Grace, Jean Grant Andrews, Ada, Weebo, Louie, Larry, Doreen, Lotta, Betty Sessler Tyler, Horstene. We appreciated telephone calls at Nancy's from Mary Hoffman and Sally G. Breathed. Begin planning now to come to our 35th! Send any news for the magazine from your school or company. What hasn't been noted please drop me a post card!

Her older son, John, is a freshman at Yale and adores it. Her husband is still head of the English Department at King School, where her younger son, Bob, is a junior (and the tallest in the family)! Felicity has just mailed her first novel to a publisher! The Hoffleckers are expecting a visit from Hansford Rowe who graduated from the University of Richmond and is in New York.

Pat Parlow Daniel's daughter, Diane, graduated from Cedar Crest College in Allentown, Pennsylvania this June, and son, Ken, has completed his first year at Tyler School of Art (Temple U.). He enjoyed being in England last summer on an archeological dig. Diane is taking a trip to Europe this summer as a graduation gift, and then will get on with the business of teaching. Dave and Pat went to England, Scotland and Ireland last fall. They loved the little Cotswold villages and visited a couple whom they had met while touring Windsor Castle. This couple had them for tea in their 350 year old stone house just May. Her Cornwell, Devon. Pat said it was like stepping back in time. She is working part time in a library nearby and pursues many hobbies, especially European American decorating while Dave travels on business.

From Deidy Deitrick Burkwol comes news of a visit with Bobby Rodewald Forrest and Johnny Johnson Sandidge while she was in Ashland last May. Deidy is the computer operator for the city of Oakridge and thoroughly enjoys it. Her son, Troy, is a sophomore at the U. of Tennessee, and Lynn is a freshman at Middle Tennessee State where she is number two on the tennis team. Paul is in the 9th grade. Husband, Troy, after being in one plant for twenty years has transferred to another but is still an engineer with Westinghouse employee Relations at the new Westinghouse plant. Their second daughter, Anne, is at North Georgia College and will be working next summer. Vicki will graduate from high school in August and Janie is in the 9th grade. Jo and Bob are looking forward to a trip to Puerto Rico in June.

We appreciate all the excellent work Virginia Sims did in bringing us the news for the magazine.

Hilda Moore Hankins and Deck are now in Culpepper, Va. Deck is manager of Employee Relations at the new Westinghouse plant, and Hilda is teaching 7th grade biology, and plenty of domestic help.

Ellen Largent Perlmun and Al are still in Djakarta, Indonesia. They took a month's holiday in Australia and New Zealand. Alumni Council. She also teaches a special class at the Richmond Home for Boys.
Claire Noren Griffin is still church secretary, and very busy with 3 children on different shifts in the Melrose school system.
Mary Bowles Flanagan is delighted to get back to the warm south after her 3 years at the University of R in North Dakota. 15 year old Shannon and 14 year old Pat were sorry to leave one horse and their monkey behind, but talked their parents into taking along the other horse, the dog and the cat. Many of us have been members in the Riding Club and hope to continue this interest in Shreveport, La. On their way south they stopped in Tulsa and visited with Nan and Nels. I am working for the Richmond school system, and am back in class for the first time in 22 years, getting my library certification.

The Richmond girls never let us down at reunion time and I know that all twenty-eight ’52ers who attended our 20th agree that this was the best yet! All arrangements were so beautifully made for us by Isabel, Sue, Drau, Bev, and Claire, complete with that special Saturday night. The 28 attending were: Sarah Barlow Phillips, the greatest distance (Miss. and Fla. by train and plane). Mary Rose Hansel (Del., N.C., Miss., Md., N.J., Mich., and 2 from Pa.) Missed: Ann Grimes (her last trip) and Jeanne Hootman Hopkins’ and Nina Landolina Byrd’s daughters, who had been accepted at Westminster for the fall term. Barbara Rhudy Comer’s daughter just completed her freshman year at W.C. Jackie Gerson Lowenstein’s son played trumpet in the U of R orchestra this freshman year.
Jill Lobach Graybeal has been employed as music supervisor for the public schools of Montgomery county. She is the first such supervisor in the history of the county.
Fred Lee’s daughter, Anne, was a freshman at High Point (N.C.) this year. Nina Byrd had the youngest baby (7 months).
But when we took a count for grandmothers and wrinkles there was not one of either! No one had aged a day!

At a meeting held too late to be reported in this magazine, a small group of alumni representing the alumni organizations of Westhampton College, Richmond College, the School of Business Administration and the Law School met for the first time as the University of Richmond Alumni Council. The Council is the result of extensive discussion and bargaining among various alumni leaders.

The purpose of the new Council is to serve as a co-ordinating body for such mutual alumni activities as Homecoming and Alumni Weekend. It will also work to improve understanding and cooperation among the various groups.

The formation of the Council grew out of the extensive alumni study conducted during 1971-72. One of the eight study subcommittees was directed to investigate the alumni organization as it then existed. The committee's findings showed three alumni groups with primary interests in three University divisions, namely, Westhampton, the School of Business Administration and the Law School; while a fourth group, the General Society of Alumni, considered itself to be representative of the entire University.

During an all day Saturday session attended by most of the elected alumni officers, it became obvious that there was much duplication of effort and that the General Society of Alumni generally represented only Richmond College alumni rather than the entire University.

The subcommittee recommended the creation of the Council. It was approved by the full study committee and submitted to the governing boards of the four associations. All parties voted in favor and have appointed representatives. Two representatives from each association will select their own chairman from among the Council membership; the body will have no power over the individual associations. Rather, it will serve to bring about closer cooperation and greater understanding among all alumni regardless of individual divisional allegiances.

The University needs the University of Richmond Alumni Council. By the same token, the Council deserves the support of all alumni. It can be the vehicle by which alumni can do great things for a University on its way to becoming great.
