Director's Message

We're now finishing the sixth week of classes, which puts us in the second half of Fall 2020. As we reach this milestone together, the University of Richmond has just entered the Orange Phase on campus. Here in the library, we're taking this opportunity to expand study room capacity. As of Monday, October 12, students can book study rooms with up to two people, as long as we remain in this phase.

We appreciate the help and cooperation of the entire Richmond Law community in maintaining a safe and productive environment. Check out highlights in this newsletter to learn about access to Adobe Acrobat Pro, tools to learn leading legal software, and other news about the services and source we continue to provide.

- Roger Skalbeck, Associate Dean

Tech Tips

Virtual Computer Lab

We had to close the computer lab, but we're still able to provide access to advanced tools like Adobe Acrobat Pro. Students such as members of our law journals and all who need to create advanced Acrobat documents can now access these tools remotely.

Hold More Effective Zoom Meetings

Do you feel like you've been in dozens of Zoom meetings, but wonder how the experience could be better? Multimedia Production and Technology Specialist Carl Hamm shares valuable tips effective Zoom use on MuseNews.

Learn Legal Tech Tools with Procertas

The Richmond Law community has access to a platform to learn and test your knowledge of Word, Excel, Adobe Acrobat, and PowerPoint. Check out MuseNews to learn about this exciting new opportunity to build new skills throughout the year!
