x   RICHMOND PUBLIC INTEREST LAW REVIEW   [Vol. XXII:ii

Dear Readers,

On behalf of the Richmond Public Interest Law Review, it is my honor to present the symposium issue of Volume XXII. Our symposium was held on Friday, October 19, 2018 at the University of Richmond School of Law and focused on Lawyering in the Era of #MeToo.

We hope that one day we will be able to look back on this moment in time, on the #MeToo movement, and say the world is a better and safer place because of the strength of survivors who have come forward. But that future only becomes possible if we engage in a dialogue and take seriously the lessons that #MeToo is teaching us, the lesson that none of us are alone, and that lesson that we are each brave in our own right. This symposium was intended to be an opportunity for us to examine what the legal system can do to help us reach that future. The brilliant lecturers, panelists, and authors whose thoughts are included in this issue have and continue to contribute to the larger #MeToo Movement, so we are honored to feature them here.

The publication of this issue would not have been possible without the tireless efforts of our Symposium Editor, Riley Henry, and our Managing Editor, Rachel Lugay. Additionally, we are thankful to our lecturers and panel participants: Sharyn Tejani, Lesley Wexler, Megan Zwisohn, Jennifer Robbennolt, Kevin Woodson, Janice Craft, Kati Dean, Patty Gill, and Rebecca Royals. We also appreciate the time and effort put into the articles included in this issue that were written by Sarah David Heydemann, Sharyn Tejani, Megan Zwisohn, Wayne Handley, Danielle Winters, Alyssa Reiter, Rebecca Shultz, and Alta Viscomi. On behalf of the Richmond Public Interest Law Review, we sincerely hope this issue offers you insight on how the legal profession can help us reach a safer world were #MeToo survivors can come forward without fear and with strength.

Sincerely,

MaryAnn Grover
